REVISERS' PREFACE

THE Revision of the Authorised Version was undertaken in consequence of a Resolution passed by both houses of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, as has been fully explained in the Preface to the Revised Version of the New Testament, which was first published in May, 1881. When the two Companies were appointed for carrying out this work, the following General Principles, among others, were laid down by the Revision Committee of Convocation for their guidance :—

'1. To introduce as few alterations as possible into the Text of the Authorised Version consistently with faithfulness.'

'2. To limit, as far as possible, the expression of such alterations to the language of the Authorised and earlier English Versions.'

'4. That the Text to be adopted be that for which the evidence is decidedly preponderating; and that when the Text so adopted differs from that from which the Authorised Version was made, the alteration be indicated in the margin.'

'7. To revise the headings of chapters and pages, paragraphs, italics, and punctuation.'

In order to shew the manner in which the Old Testament Company have endeavoured to carry out their instructions, it will be convenient to treat the subjects mentioned in the foregoing rules in a somewhat different order.

It will be observed that in Rule 4 the word 'Text' is used in a different sense from that in Rule 1, and in the case of the Old Testament denotes the Hebrew or Aramaic original of the several books. In this respect the task of the Revisers has been much simpler than that which the New Testament Company had before them. The Received, or, as it is commonly called, the Massoretic Text of the Old Testament Scriptures has come down to us in manuscripts which are of no very great antiquity, and which all belong to the same family or recension[1]. That other recensions were at one time in existence is probable from the variations in the Ancient Versions, the oldest of which, namely the Greek or Septuagint, was made, at least in part, some two centuries before the Christian era. But as the state of knowledge on the subject is not at present such as to justify any attempt at an entire reconstruction of the text on the authority of the Versions, the Revisers have thought it most prudent to adopt the Massoretic Text as the basis of their work, and to depart from it, as the Authorised Translators had done[1], only in exceptional cases. With regard to the variations in the Massoretic Text itself, the Revisers have endeavoured to translate what appeared to them to be the best reading in the text, and where the alternative reading seemed sufficiently probable or important they have placed it in the margin. In some few instances of extreme difficulty a reading has been adopted on the authority of the Ancient Versions, and the departure from the Massoretic Text recorded in the margin. In other cases, where the versions appeared to supply a very probable though not so necessary a correction of the text, the text has been left and the variation indicated in the margin only.

In endeavouring to carry out as fully as possible the spirit of Rules 1 and 2, the Revisers have borne in mind that it was their duty not to make a new translation, but to revise one already existing, which for more than two centuries and a half had held the position of an English classic. They have therefore departed from it only in cases where they disagreed with the Translators of 1611 as to the meaning or construction of a word or sentence; or where it was necessary for the sake of uniformity to render such parallel passages as were identical in Hebrew by the same English words, so that an English reader might know at once by comparison that a difference in the translation corresponded to a difference in the original; or where the language of the Authorised Version was liable to be misunderstood by reason of its being archaic or obscure; or finally, where the rendering of an earlier English version seemed preferable, or where by an apparently slight change it was possible to bring out more fully the meaning of a passage of which the translation was already substantially accurate.

[1]See, for instance, 2 Sam. xvi. 12; 2 Chr. iii. 1, xxii. 6; Job xxxvii. 7; Ezek. xlvi. 10; Am. v. 26; Hag. i. 2.

It has been thought advisable in regard to the word 'JEHOVAH' to follow the usage of the Authorised Version, and not to insert it uniformly in place of 'LORD' or 'GOD', which when printed in small capitals represent the words substituted by Jewish custom for the ineffable Name according to the vowel points by which it is distinguished. It will be found therefore that in this respect the Authorised Version has been departed from only in a few passages, in which the introduction of a proper name seemed to be required.

Terms of natural history have been changed only where it was certain that the Authorised Version was incorrect, and where there was sufficient evidence for the substituted rendering. In cases of doubt the alternative rendering has been given in the margin; and even where no doubt existed, but where there was no familiar English equivalent for the original word, the Old Version has been allowed to remain[1], and the more accurate term has been placed in the margin.

In some words of very frequent occurrence, the Authorised Version being either inadequate or inconsistent, and sometimes misleading, changes have been introduced with as much uniformity as appeared practicable or desirable. For instance, 'the tabernacle of the congregation' has been everywhere changed to 'the tent of meeting', on account of Exodus xxv. 22, xxix. 42, 43, and also because 'the tabernacle of the congregation' conveys an entirely wrong sense. The words 'tabernacle' and 'tent,' as the renderings of two different Hebrew words, are in the Authorized Version frequently interchanged in such a manner as to lead to confusion; and the Revisers have endeavoured throughout the Pentateuch to preserve a consistent distinction between them. Their practice in regard to the words 'assembly' and 'congregation' has been the same in principle, although they have contented themselves with introducing greater consistency of rendering without aiming at absolute uniformity. In consequence of the changes which have taken place in the English language, the term 'meat offering' has become inappropriate to describe an offering of which flesh was no part; and by the alteration to 'meal offering' a sufficiently accurate representation of the original has been obtained with the least possible change of form.

As regards the use of words, there are only a few cases in which it has been found needful to deviate from the language employed in the Authorised Version. One of these deviations occurs so frequently that it may be well to state briefly why it was adopted. The word 'peoples' was nowhere used by King James's Translators in the Old Testament, and in the New Testament it occurs only twice (Rev. x. 11, xvii. 15.) The effect of this was to leave the rendering of numerous passages inadequate or obscure, or even positively misleading. Thus in one of the best known Psalms (Ps. lxvii.), where the Septuagint has λαοί and the Vulgate populi, the English had 'Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee'; leaving it at least doubtful whether the 'nations' of verse 4, or God's people, Israel, be referred to. And in Isaiah lv. 4, 'Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people', the word 'people' is naturally understood by the English reader to refer to Israel.

Again, the Hebrew word goyim 'nations', which is applied to the nations of Canaan dispossessed by the Hebrews, and then also to the surrounding nations among whom the people of Israel were afterwards dispersed, acquired in later times a moral significance, which is represented in the Authorised Version by the rendering 'heathen' or 'Gentiles'. While recognizing this moral sense of the word, the Revisers have employed it much more sparingly than their predecessors had done.

Similarly, the Hebrew Sheol, which signifies the abode of departed spirits, and corresponds to the Greek Hades, or the under world, is variously rendered in the Authorised Version by 'grave', 'pit' and 'hell'. Of these renderings 'hell', if it could be taken in its original sense as used in the Creeds, would be a fairly adequate equivalent for the Hebrew word; but it is so commonly understood of the place of torment that to employ it frequently would lead to inevitable misunderstanding. The Revisers therefore in the historical narratives have left the rendering 'the grave' or 'the pit' in the text, with a marginal note 'Heb. Sheol' to indicate that it does not signify 'the place of burial'; while in the poetical writings they have put most commonly 'Sheol' in the text and 'the grave' in the margin. In Isaiah xiv. however, where 'hell' is used in more of its original sense and is less liable to be misunderstood, and where any change in so familiar a passage which was not distinctly an improvement would be a decided loss, the Revisers have contented themselves with leaving 'hell' in the text, and have connected it with other passages by putting 'Sheol' in the margin.

In connexion with this it may be mentioned that 'Abaddon', which has hitherto been known to the English reader of the Bible only from the New Testament (Rev. ix. 11), has been introduced in three passages (Job xxvi. 6; Prov. xv. 11, xxvii. 20), where a proper name appears to be required for giving vividness and point.

The Hebrew word Ashêrah, which is uniformly and wrongly rendered 'grove' in the Authorised Version, most probably denotes the wooden symbol of a goddess; and the Revisers therefore have not hesitated to introduce it as a proper name in the singular (Judg. vi. 25, &c.), with the plurals Asherim (Ex. xxxiv. 13, &c.) and Asheroth (Judg. iii. 7, &c.), following the analogy of the Baalim (Judg. iii. 7) and the Ashtaroth (Judg. ii. 13), which are already familiar.

In regard to the language of the Authorised Version, the Revisers have thought it no part of their duty to reduce it to conformity with modern usage, and have therefore left untouched all archaisms, whether of language or construction, which though not in familiar use cause a reader no embarrassment and lead to no misunderstanding. They are aware that in so doing they will disappoint the large English-speaking race on the other side of the Atlantic, and it is a question upon which they are prepared to agree to a friendly difference of opinion. The principle by which they have been guided has been clear and consistent. Where an archaic word or expression was liable to be misunderstood or at least was not perfectly intelligible, they have substituted for it another, in equally good use at the time the Authorised Version was made, and expressing all that the archaism was intended to convey, but more familiar to the modern reader. In such cases the gain was greater than the loss. But in other instances where the word or expression, although obsolete, was not unintelligible, it was thought that the change would involve greater loss than gain, and the old rendering was therefore allowed to stand. More especially was this the case when the archaism was a perfectly correct rendering of the original and there was no exact modern equivalent for it. The principle adopted by the Company will be best illustrated by two typical examples. The verb 'to ear' in the sense of 'to plough' and the substantive 'earing' for 'ploughing' were very reluctantly abandoned, and only because it was ascertained that their meaning was unknown to many persons of good intelligence and education. But it was easy to put in their place equivalents which had a pedigree of almost equal antiquity, and it would have been an excess of conservatism to refuse to substitute for an unintelligible archaism an expression to which no ambiguity could be attached. On the other hand the word 'bolled' (Ex. ix. 31), which signifies 'podded for seed' and is known in provincial dialects, has no synonym in literary English. To have discarded it in favour of a less accurate or more paraphrastic expression would have been to impoverish the language; and it was therefore left, because it exactly expresses one view which is taken of the meaning of the original.

One of the few instances in which the language of the Authorised Version has been modified in accordance with later usage is the change of the neuter possessive pronoun from 'his' to 'its'. It is well known that 'its' does not occur in the Bible of 1611, and it does not appear to have been introduced into any edition before 1660. But it is found ten times in Shakespeare, and there is other evidence to shew that at the time of the Authorised Version it was coming into use. It was found necessary in some cases to substitute 'its' for 'his' in order to avoid obscurity, and there seemed no good reason, when it was once introduced, for refusing to admit it generally when it referred to purely inanimate objects.

In making minor changes, whether in translation or language, the Revisers have followed the example of the translators of the Authorised Version, who allowed themselves in this respect a reasonable freedom, without permitting their liberty to degenerate into license.

It will be at once seen that the old division of the books into chapters and verses has been abandoned in favour of the arrangement in paragraphs, the numbering of the chapters and verses being however retained for convenience of reference. Where the change of subject seemed to require a greater break than was marked by the beginning of a new paragraph, it has been indicated by a space before the paragraph. Occasionally the divisions of the chapters in the Authorised Version differ from those in the common Hebrew Bibles. In such cases the variations are given in the margin. In the Psalms, the titles are printed in smaller type, as in some modern English Bibles, which differ in this respect from the edition of 1611. One consequence of the arrangement in paragraphs has been the omission of the headings of chapters, which for other and more important reasons it was thought advisable to abandon, as involving questions which belong rather to the province of the commentator than to that of the translator. With the headings of chapters the head-lines of pages naturally disappeared also, and for the same reason.

In the poetical portions, besides the division into paragraphs, the Revisers have adopted an arrangement in lines, so as to exhibit the parallelism which is characteristic of Hebrew Poetry. But they have not extended this arrangement to the prophetical books, the language of which although frequently marked by parallelism is, except in purely lyrical passages, rather of the nature of lofty and impassioned prose.

In the use of italics the Revisers departed from the custom of the Authorised Version and adopted as their rule the following resolution of their Company:

'That all such words now printed in italics, as are plainly implied in the Hebrew and necessary in English, be printed in common type.'

But where any doubt existed as to the exact rendering of the Hebrew, all words which have been added in order to give completeness to the English expression are printed in italic type, so that the reader by omitting them may be able to see how far their insertion is justified by the words of the original. This of course is especially true of those renderings for which an alternative is given in the margin, where the roman and italic type play exactly opposite parts.

To complete the account of the Revised Version it remains only to describe the marginal notes. These will be found to contain

(1) The renderings of such variations in the Massoretic Text as appeared to be of sufficient importance. These variations are known by the technical names of K'ri (read) and C'thib (written), which denote that the K'ri, or reading in the margin of the Hebrew Bible, is to be substituted for the C'thib which appears in the written text. The Revisers have generally, though not uniformly, rendered the C'thib in the text, and left the K'ri in the margin, with the introductory note 'Or, according to another reading', or 'Another reading is'. When the K'ri has been followed in the text, the C'thib has been placed in the margin, if it represented a variation of sufficient importance.

(2) Alternative renderings, introduced by 'Or'. These are either different meanings of the word or passage, or they serve to connect it with other renderings elsewhere.

(3) Literal renderings of the Hebrew or Aramaic, indicated by the prefix 'Heb.' or 'Aram.'

(4) Changes of text made on the authority of the ancient Versions.

(5) Readings from ancient Versions which appeared to be of sufficient importance to be noticed.

(6) Renderings of the Hebrew consonants as read with different vowel points, or as differently divided. These are introduced by the words 'Or, as otherwise read.'

(7) Marginal references to other passages, which are either strictly parallel, or serve the purpose of illustrating or justifying a particular rendering.

(8) Explanations of certain proper names, the meaning of which is referred to in the text.

In the Proper Names the Revisers have endeavoured to ascertain the system of transliteration adopted by the Translators of the Authorised Version and to carry it out with somewhat greater consistency. They have not however attempted anything like rigid uniformity, and have left unchanged all those names which by usage have become English; as, for instance, Moses, Aaron, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the like.

Among the Rules laid down by the Revision Committee of Convocation for the guidance of the Revisers was one that no change should be finally made in the text of the Authorised Version except by the vote of two-thirds of the Company present and voting; and this Rule has been invariably acted upon. The result has been that in many cases a rendering which was preferred by the majority of the Company voting has been recorded in the margin, the majority not being sufficient to give it a place in the text. But all questions of marginal readings, as well as of punctuation and division into paragraphs, except where these affected the sense of a passage, were decided by a simple majority.

It may be of some interest to describe the method observed by the Company in their work, if only to shew that every question raised was carefully and deliberately considered. In the first Revision it was the practice for the Secretary to read over each verse, first in the original and then in the Authorised Version: the proposals for change were then taken; first those communicated in writing by absent members, and next those made by the members present. Each proposal was moved, and if seconded was discussed and voted upon; the decision in the first Revision being by a majority only. If a proposal met with no seconder, it was not discussed but allowed to drop. In the second Revision, the Secretary read out in order the changes which had been made at the first Revision; if these were unchallenged they were allowed to remain, otherwise they were put to the vote and affirmed or rejected according as they were or were not supported by the requisite majority of two-thirds. In the second Revision new propositions could only be made by special permission of the Company, and discussion was limited, as far as possible, to exceptional cases. In the final review, which was in reality the completion of the second Revision, the Company employed themselves in making a general survey of what they had done, deciding finally upon reserved points, harmonizing inconsistencies, smoothing down roughnesses, removing unnecessary changes, and generally giving finish and completeness to their work. Everything in this final survey was decided by the vote of a majority of two-thirds.

The Revisers had already made some progress, and had in fact gone twice through the Pentateuch, before they secured the co-operation of the American Old Testament Revision Company. The first Revision of the several books was submitted to the consideration of the American Revisers, and, except in the case of the Pentateuch, the English Company had the benefit of their criticisms and suggestions before they proceeded to the second Revision. The second Revision was in like manner forwarded to America, and the latest thoughts of the American Revisers were in the hands of the English Company at their final review. In every instance the suggestions from America were treated with the same consideration as those proceeding from members of the English Company, and were adopted or rejected on their merits. It was a part of the terms of agreement with the American Company that all points of ultimate difference between them and the English Revisers should be placed on record, and they will accordingly be found fully stated at the end of the Old Testament, or at the end of the several portions, according as the Revised Version appears in one or more volumes. Many of them will be found to be changes of language which are involved in the essentially different circumstances of American and English readers; others express a preference for the marginal rendering over that given in the text; others again involve a real difference of opinion; but all shew that they have been dictated by the same leading principle, the sincere desire to give to modern readers a faithful representation of the meaning of the original documents.

It could not but be expected that in the course of fourteen years many changes would take place in the members of the Company. Of the original number who first put their hands to the work on the 30th of June 1870, only fifteen now remain. Ten of the Company have been removed by death, and two resigned: the places of these were filled from time to time by others; but since October 1875 no new members have been added. The Revision was completed in eighty-five sessions, ending on 20th June, 1884; and it occupied 792 days. The greater part of the sessions were for ten days each, and each day the Company generally sat for six hours. The labour therefore has been great, but it has been given ungrudgingly; and now with a feeling of deep thankfulness to Almighty God, and the earnest hope that their endeavours may with His blessing tend to a clearer knowledge of the Old Testament Scriptures, the Revisers bring their long task to a close.

HISTORY

ENGLISH TRANSLATIONS OF THE BIBLE.

THE earliest attempt to render the Scriptures into the language spoken by the common people in England, was during the Anglo-Saxon times, whem Aldhelm, in the seventh century, translated the Psalter. Cædmon had already embodied the history of the Bible in alliterative meter, but his work can scarcely be denominated a translation. The venerable Bede spent his last moments in dictating a translation of John's Gospel into his mother tongue, and died with the Doxology upon his lips when the last lines had been written. King Alfred himself reduced to the same language portions of the divine law given to the Hebrews, as the basis of his own legislation; and other scholars of the realm in the years following translated additional portions both of the Old and New Testaments, so that the whole of the four Gospels was current in the Anglo-Saxon. After the Norman Conquest, a prose translation of the Bible into Norman French, made about A. D. 1260, indicates a demand for devotional reading within the circle of the court, or of the wealthier merchants, or of convents for women of high rank. Further signs of the same desire are found in three English versions of the Psalms—one toward the close of the thirteenth century, another by Schorham about A. D. 1320, and another, with other canticles from the Old and New Testaments, by Richard Rolle, of Hampole, in Yorkshire, about 1349. There was also a version of the Gospels of Mark and Luke, and of all Paul's Epistles.

The first translation into what may properly be called English—the real beginning of the language as we now speak it—was made by John de Wycliffe. He was born A. D. 1324, at Wycliffe, in Yorkshire, and was educated at Oxford. He became successively master of Baliol College, warden of Canterbury College, and professor of divinity in Oxford University. His piety and wisdom, as well as his great parts and extensive learning, gained for him general reputation; while his opposition to the corruptions of the Church of Rome drew down on him the vengeance of the prelates and clergy, and involved him in a series of troubles, which, in all probability, would have resulted in his death, had he not been protected by John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster, uncle of Richard II. The dates of commencing and of concluding the work which has made his name so famous in history, can not be determined with certainty. He accomplished his task by degrees. He began with a translation of the Apocalypse; next appeared the Gospels in English, with a commentary; then followed the other books of the New Testament, which it is believed were finished about 1380. A version of the Old Testament, as well as of the New, appeared not long afterward, upon which he appears to have employed himself, and which is supposed to have been completed before 1384. It was on December 28th of this year that Wycliffe peacefully died at the Lutterworth Rectory. Forty-one years after his death, his bones were dug up and reduced to ashes by order of Richard Fleming, bishop of London, according to a decree of the infamous Council of Constance, and scattered in the River Avon.

These efforts to circulate the Word of God in the vernacular language of the people were jealously discountenanced by the papal Church. At the Council of Toulouse in 1229, for the first time since the name of Christ was known, the laity were openly forbidden to read the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, even in Latin—except that, for the purposes of devotion, they were permitted to have in that language the Psalter or Breviary or "Hours of the Blessed Virgin;" but they were strictly forbidden to have any of these books translated into their own tongue. Nevertheless, these prohibitions did not entirely prevent the circulation of the Scriptures, and translations of the whole or of parts were made in several countries of Europe.

The fruit of Wycliffe's labors did not immediately appear, but his influence was not confined alone to England. It extended to the Continent, particularly to Bohemia, and prepared the way for the great reformation in Europe a century and a half later. Copies of his Bible were multiplied as rapidly as the pens of transcribers could do the work, and were eagerly sought by all classes of people. A revised translation was completed about the year 1388, by John Purvey, assisted by others; but both Wycliffe's and Purvey's were made from the Latin Vulgate. Wycliffe's Bible was not printed until 1850. Purvey's was printed for the first time in 1731, and for a long time was supposed to be Wycliffe's. As such it was printed in Bagster's Hexapla, in 1841.

The next English version was that of William Tyndale, a native of Wales, about the year 1530. Two circumstances in his age were favorable to its enlarged circulation—the invention of paper and of the art of printing. Erasmus's edition of the Greek Testament was then just published, and the Hebrew Scriptures were about the same time printed in Italy—and both were easy to be obtained. Tyndale was a thorough scholar, and, instead of making his version at second-hand from the Latin, he took it directly from the original tongues. His English style is idiomatic and racy. Many of his renderings, through long passages, are repeated almost word for word in our present authorized version. He is really the father of our English Bible. His successors effected many improvements in detail, but the plan and spirit of the work have been left unchanged. "The peculiar genius," says Froude, "if such a word may be permitted, which breathes through it; the mingled tenderness and majesty; the Saxon simplicity; the preternatural grandeur, unequaled, unapproached in the attempts of modern scholars—all are here, and bear the impress of one man, William Tyndale." To that one man, more than to any other, the English language owes its present form and the permanence of its vocabulary. He fixed the speech of the common people for all time to come; and its rhythmic cadence, its poetic and picturesque beauty, its strong and nervous expressions, its homely and simple phrases, all appear in his work. Tyndale's printed version contained the New Testament, the Pentateuch, and the prophecy of Jonah, with a few lessons from the Prophecies; but there is good reason to believe that he left behind him in manuscript a translation of the books of the Old Testament from Joshua to 2 Chronicles, inclusive. Tyndale's Testament was printed in 1525, at Cologne, in quarto, and at Worms in octavo. Of each of these editions three thousand copies were printed. In 1534 a revised edition was issued at Antwerp, with an addition of lessons from the Old Testament.

Tyndale was in the midst of his labors when he was arrested for heretical pravity at Antwerp, by emissaries of the papal Church, and committed to the castle of Vilvorde, near Brussels. Notwithstanding all the efforts of his friends in England and in the Low Countries to procure for him protection, he was condemned to death. Rome could not forgive his vigorous assaults upon her priestly prerogative and hierarchical authority. On Friday, October 6, 1536, he was strangled at the stake and his body burnt to ashes.

In 1535 the first translation of the whole Bible ever printed in English was completed abroad under the direction of Myles Coverdale, and is, therefore, generally called Coverdale's Bible. The place of its printing was for many years unknown; but it is believed that the work was executed at Zurich, or at Antwerp, by Jacob Van Meteren, who seems afterward to have sold the sheets, type, etc., to James Nicolson, of Southwark, England, by whom a second and a third edition were published. Coverdale, born in 1488, was an Augustine monk; but embracing the doctrines of the Reformation, he entered into orders, and in 1551 was consecrated bishop of Exeter. During the persecutions of Queen Mary's time, he was ejected from his see, and retired to the Continent, but returned to England in 1568, and died in 1569. Coverdale availed himself of the labors of others, and made his translations, not from the original Hebrew and Greek, but from the Latin Vulgate, the German of Luther, Pagninus's Latin version, Leo Juda's Helvetic version (in Swiss-German), and from one or two others. Tyndale's text is closely followed in the New Testament, but is corrected and revised with the help of the other interpreters.

In 1537 the translations of Tyndale, with those of John Rogers, who completed and edited the whole, were published in a collected form under the name of Thomas Matthew. This edition is known as Matthew's Bible. Much credit is due to Rogers, who probably resided at the place of printing (supposed to be Lübeck), as the careful editor of this Bible; he was evidently a fine scholar, and he seems to have acted both as desiring to give his countrymen a translation as correct as possible, and likewise to perpetuate the labors of Tyndale, his friend and instructor in the truth of the Gospel. In the execution of the work, Rogers had the whole of Tyndale's translations, whether in print or manuscript, before him. The Old Testament is a reprint of Tyndale's Pentateuch; the remainder, as far as the second book of Chronicles, was copied from Tyndale's manuscripts, which were undoubtedly in Rogers's safekeeping. Coverdale's translation was also followed in the other portions of Scripture. This edition, printed in black letter, or Old English, is frequently and not inaptly called Tyndale's Bible. It appeared with the then much coveted words, "Set forth with the king's most gracious license;" hence, it is the first properly authorized edition of the English Bible. This became the foundation of the text of the version now in common use. Rogers was a native of Lancashire, and was born about the year 1500. He was educated at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and was graduated in 1525. Entering into holy orders, he became rector, in 1532, of a Church in London. In 1534 he left England, and went to Antwerp as chaplain of the "Merchant Adventurers," where he became acquainted with Tyndale. Here he embraced the reformed doctrine, and soon afterward broke off completely from Rome, and married. During the persecutions under Mary, he was tried and condemned for heresy, and was the first martyr who suffered death at the stake. He was burned alive at Smithfield, February 4, 1555. It is supposed that Thomas Matthew was only a name which Rogers assumed from prudential motives, lest his known connection with Tyndale should prove injurious to the undertaking. In favor of this view, which has been generally accepted, is the fact that in the official record of the apprehension of Rogers, he is described as "John Rogers, alias Matthew." It is possible, however, that the name is a real one, and belongs to some patron through whose aid the work was undertaken.

So great was the desire of the people to read or hear the Word of God, and so few copies could be procured, that in 1539 another revision of the English Bible was made by Richard Taverner, a counselor-at-law and a member of the Inner Temple. He was one of the young men imprisoned in the cellar of one of the college buildings in Oxford for reading Tyndale's New Testament. Taverner was a scholar, able and energetic, but somewhat capricious and uncertain. In 1552, though a layman, he received from Edward VI. a general license to preach. We are told that he preached before the king at court, and in some other places in the kingdom, wearing a velvet bonnet or round cap, a damask gown, and a chain of gold about his neck; in which habit he was seen and heard preaching several times in St. Mary's Church, Oxford, in the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth. During Mary's reign Taverner prudently remained in retirement. Elizabeth showed him marks of special favor, and made him high sheriff of the county of Oxford. He died in the year 1575. His Bible, known as Taverner's Bible, was allowed to be publicly read in the churches, and is only a revision of Matthew's Old Testament and Tyndale's New Testament. His changes are more numerous in the latter than in the former. Thus, in Matthew, chapters xxi, xxii, containing ninety-two verses, there are about forty variations, of which one-third are retained in the version now in use. In some of these changes his object was to remove superfluous words; in others, to give a more terse or expressive phrase, or a more literal rendering from the Greek. Taverner's Bible was published both in folio and quarto; his New Testament in quarto and in octavo in the same year.

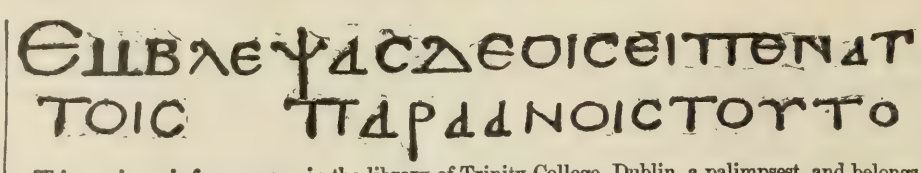
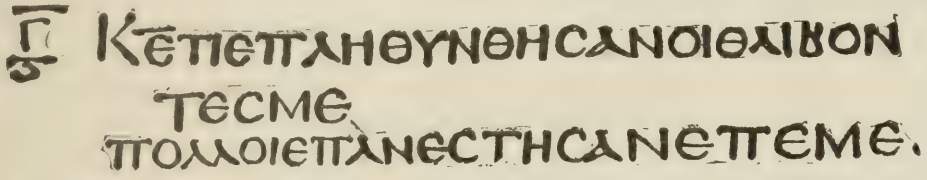
The Great Bible, so called from its size, being larger than any of the editions in folio previously published, was prepared by direction of Thomas Cromwell, chief minister of state under Henry VIII. It was a revision of Matthew's Bible, and was executed under the supervision of Coverdale, as corrector of the press. It was first issued in April, 1539, by Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch, printers. Cromwell, though not noted for piety, was a friend of the Reformation, and had a deep veneration for the Scriptures. Worldly, ambitious, and unscrupulous, he opposed the aggressions of the papal Church, and broke up the monasteries, which had become nests of corruption. He was rapidly advanced by the king, who created him Earl of Essex; but, being convicted of treason, he was put to death soon after attaining that honor. A second edition of this Bible was published in 1540, with a preface written by Archbishop Cranmer, and has been named Cranmer's Bible. This edition, of which only five hundred copies were printed, differed but slightly from the first, and the two are sometimes confounded. It continued to be the authorized English version (except, of course, during the reign of Mary) until 1568, when it was superseded by the Bishops' Bible.

The Geneva Bible, issued in 1560, is so called from the fact that it was translated and printed in Geneva by certain learned Englishmen who fled thither about the year 1556 to escape the persecutions of Queen Mary's reign. The exiles in Geneva, to whom this work is attributed, were William Whittingham, Anthony Gilby, Myles Coverdale, Thomas Sampson, Christopher Goodman, Thomas Cole, John Knox, John Bodleigh, and John Pullain. The principal part of the work was executed by Whittingham, Gilby, and Sampson. This version became very popular, and probably one hundred and thirty editions were issued. It was the first English Bible divided into verses. The example for doing this was set in the New Testament printed at the same city three years previously. This translation differed from all that had preceded it, not only in its plan, but also in its execution. The other versions had been generally the work or revision of an individual, or, at most, a revision in which certain individuals executed certain particular parts. In this translation many acted unitedly in the formation of a version, and in the plan of operation there was a principle of completeness which had not heretofore been acted on. Still, the basis of the translation was Tyndale's; but, with the scholarly labor bestowed upon it, the Geneva Bible was more accurate than any of its predecessors, and long held its popularity in England, even after the present authorized version was in use. It discarded the old black-letter type, and was printed from Roman type, which was soon adopted in all the printing-offices which published English books.

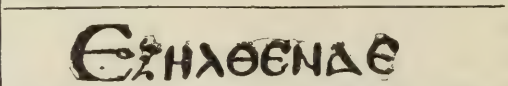


The next version was superintended by Matthew Parker, archbishop of Canterbury, and is sometimes called by his name. It was first published in 1568, and was executed with great care by more than fifteen men, whose names occur at the end of the portions prepared by them. From the fact that the majority of those engaged in its preparation were bishops, it has been named the Bishops' Bible. It continued to be the version authorized to be read in the churches for forty-three years; but in private use it never displaced the Geneva version. Its preparation seems to have extended over a period of three or four years. The basis of the translation was the Great Bible, but many of the corrections and improvements were taken from the Geneva version.

We have already noticed the opposition on the part of the papal Church to the general diffusion of the Word of God. But Rome had thundered in vain. What did she do? In 1582 she printed, or allowed to be printed, at Rheims, an English New Testament, "translated out of Latin, with notes and necessary helps." In 1609 the Old Testament also made its appearance, at Douay. The Rhemish New Testament, as the version printed at Rheims is called, was prepared at the English Roman Catholic College, then established at that place, and afterwards at Douay, by Gregory Martin, a distinguished Hebrew and Greek scholar. His translation was made from the Vulgate, and in his work he was assisted by Dr. William Allen, the founder of the college, Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Bristow, and Dr. Worthington. The last two are supposed to be the authors of the "Notes," which are bitterly controversial. The translation is literal, and, as a rule, scrupulously faithful and exact, but disfigured by a profusion of unfamiliar and Latinized words, which convey no meaning whatever to the ordinary English reader. This last peculiarity strikes the eye at the first opening of the volume. But from this version, unfamiliar as many of its words are, our translators obtained some of their happiest expressions. Nothing is easier than to accumulate instances of the eccentricity of its renderings, or of their obscure and inflated style; but a minute study of its pages will afford evidence of the care with which the translators have executed their work. "Every other English translation," says Dr. Moulton, in his History of the English Bible, "is to be preferred to this, if it is to be taken as a whole; but no other English version will prove more instructive to the student who will take the pains to separate what is good and useful from what is ill-advised and wrong."

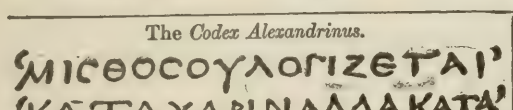


When King James I. came to the throne of England he took measures to secure a uniform translation of the Scriptures, and appointed fifty-four of the most learned men of his kingdom to proceed with the work. The result of their labors was published in 1611; and being commanded by authority to be used in the churches, it soon became the standard translation for English-speaking people. This is the translation now called "the Authorized Version." But in process of time numerous errors were discovered in it, and new manuscripts of the original came to light. It was long thought by scholars that a new version should be made; and, accordingly, the subject of revision was brought by Professor Selwyn before the lower House of Convocation of the province of Canterbury in 1856, but his proposals then met with little favor.

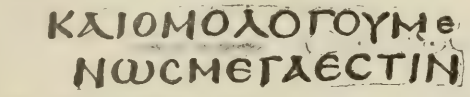


No action was taken until 1870, when the matter was intrusted to a committee, consisting of eight members of the upper house and sixteen of the lower. They reported favorably; and the convocation then nominated a committee of eight members of each house to undertake the work of revision. They associated with them a number of the best scholars in Great Britain and America, and divided themselves into two companies for the revision of the Old Testament and New Testament respectively. The New Testament Company first concluded its labors, and published the revision in 1881. The Old Testament revision was not completed until 1884. The Authorized and Revised Versions appear together in parallel columns on the following pages.

The oldest version in any language of which there is a record is the Septuagint, written in Greek, at Alexandria, Egypt, B. C. 286–280. The oldest known copy of this version is written on thin vellum, contains the whole Bible, and is dated in the fifth century; now in the British Museum, and is called



This specimen is from a copy in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, a palimpsest, and belongs to the sixth century. It is from the Gospel of Matthew, xix. 26.



This specimen is from a copy of the Book of Genesis, written for Origen, in Greek, A. D. 185 to 255, and shows a very neat and clear text, as well as all the others.

The Codex Alexandrinus.

The Codex Vaticanus is a manuscript in the Vatican Library, Rome; contains the whole Bible, except a few lost leaves, and belongs to the fourth century.

The Codex Sinaiticus was found in the Convent on Mount Sinai, and belongs to the sixth century, but is a copy of one of an earlier date. Besides the Old and New Testaments, it has the Gospel and Epistles of Barnabas and the Epistle of Hermas. Fragments of the Gospel are contained in a palimpsest MS. in a library at Wolfen-buttel, Germany, where the ancient Greek letters have been scraped off, and a modern text written over them, but not entirely obliterating the ancient writing. The first specimen is from Luke i. 6. The next is one which was found at the Convent on the Natron Lakes, Egypt, and is Luke xx. 9, 10, with a work of Severus of Antioch over it. It is dated A. D. 550. Both the specimens of writing are fine examples of the art. The great price of writing material, skins, parchment, vellum or cloth and papyrus, caused the loss of many old books, whose letters were erased to make room for some new work.

The oldest Hebrew MS. known is dated A. D. 489; is a roll, and was found in the Karaite Synagogue in the Crimea. The specimen given here is from a Pentateuch, written originally on a roll of leather, preserved in Odessa, and was brought from Darbend, in Daghestan. It was corrected in A. D. 580, and was therefore written before that time. The text is from Malachi iv. 6.

As a specimen of the ancient Hebrew letter used about the time that Paul was a pupil of Gamaliel, here is a copy from a gravestone in the Crimea, of the year A. D. 6. This style of letter is like that on the coins of the Maccabees, B. C. 139, and other coins down to A. D. 130.

"This is the grave of Buki, son of Isaac, the priest; may his rest be in Paradise! [Died] at the time of the deliverance of Israel, in the year 702 of our captivity" (i. e. A.D. 6).

The oldest printed Hebrew Bible (Old Testament) was issued at Soncino, Italy, A. D. 1487, in folio. The Complutensian Polyglott was published at the expense of Cardinal Ximenes in 1514–1522, in 6 vols. folio, and sold at fifteen dollars. The last specimen on this page is Greek, from the text of John i. 1, 2, and is dated A. D. 995. The initial letter is in blue and red colors, and is very finely "illuminated." The first book printed was the Bible, in Latin; and the splendid pages of the Mazarin Vulgate, printed by Gutenberg and Faust in 1455, at Mainz, are not surpassed at this day as specimens of typography. And the style of the letter has not been improved upon since that time for elegance of shape or distinctness.

RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS,

THEIR HISTORY AND CREEDS.

COMPILED FROM THE MOST AUTHENTIC SOURCES

AND BROUGHT DOWN TO THE PRESENT TIME.

By REV. WM. H. MUNROE.

THE INHABITANTS OF THE WORLD CLASSIFIED.

In Europe, America, Australia and many of the Polynesian Islands, Christianity is the prevailing creed of every state. In Africa the only independent Christian states are Abyssinia and Liberia, while Christianity prevails in several European colonies. The largest empire of Asia—Russia—is also a Christian country. India, the third country in point of extent, is under the rule of a Christian government, and so is a large portion of Farther India.

The Mohammedan countries in Asia are Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan and the Khanates of Central Asia; in Africa, Morocco, the dependencies of Turkey (Egypt, Tunis, Tripoli) and a number of interior states.

Buddhism prevails in India, Farther India, in many parts of China and in Japan. The governments of Burmah and Siam are Buddhist; that of China adheres to the religion of Confucius; the prevalent religion of Japan is Sintooism.

Judaism is represented through the world by the best authorities as follows: the number of Jews in Germany, 500,000; Austria, 1,500,000; Great Britain, 75,000; France, 100,000; European Russia, 2,700,000; Italy, 25,000; Switzerland, 5,000; Belgium, 2,000; Netherlands, 70,000; Luxemburg, 2,000; Denmark, 5,000; Sweden, 1,000; Greece, 1,000; European Turkey, 75,000; Portugal, 5,000; Syria and Asiatic Turkey, 60,000; Morocco and North Africa, 825,000; Eastern Asia, 750,000; America, 750,000.

We divide the Christian Churches into three groups, viz.:

The Roman Catholic Church.—This church is apparently one organization, and the recognition of the Pope as the head of the entire Church is an article of faith. There is one religious organization in Holland (the Jansenists), who, while they claim to belong to the Roman Catholic Church, are not recognized by the Pope. Besides, in the Roman Catholic countries of Europe there are many millions whose connection with the Roman Catholic Church is only nominal, of which the attitude of Italy, Austria, France, Belgium, Spain, Portugal and other states is a conclusive proof.

The Eastern or Oriental Churches.—This group embraces the following denominations: the Greek Church, the Armenian Church, the Nestorians, the Jacobites, the Copts, and the Abyssinians. They all recognize the first Council of Nice and have bishops, for whom they claim an apostolic succession.

The Protestant Churches.—All the churches not belonging to one of the two preceding groups are comprised under the collective name of Protestants.

The population of the globe is estimated at 1,380,000,000, and is subdivided into five races, viz.:

Caucasian	380,000,000
Malay	219,000,000
Mongolian	580,000,000
Ethiopian	200,000,000
American Indians	1,000,000
	1,380,000,000

The general subdivision of religions of the world is distributed very nearly in the following proportions:

Christians	405,000,000
Jews	7,500,000
Mohammedans	160,000,000
Buddhists	350,000,000
Pagans	200,000,000
Other Asiatic Religions	257,500,000
	1,380,000,000

ABYSSINIAN CHURCH.—The gospel was introduced into Abyssinia about the middle of the fourth century. One Frumentius, traveling from Egypt into Abyssinia, was favorably received by the king, whom he baptized, together with certain of the nobility. Subsequently returning to Egypt, he was consecrated bishop by Athanasius, and returned soon after to the scene of his former labors. For about one thousand years the Abyssinian Church disappears from the sight of the European world. It was near the close of the fifteenth century that it appeared before the Christian world once more. Rome, ever ready for new conquests, was seized with the desire of subjecting this ancient Church to her authority. The Jesuits, after making several fruitless attempts to reconcile the Abyssinian Church to the See of Rome, were recalled. But subsequently other attempts were made, and the Abyssinian Church submitted to the pope of Rome. But this submission was not of long continuance. A love for the ancient faith again revived in the hearts of the people, the usurped power of Rome was overthrown, and the Abyssinian became once more an independent Church, governed by its own patriarch. For many years Abyssinia was a scene of much intrigue, cruel wars and slaughter, in which the Christians suffered intensely. In common with other Eastern churches, this Church believes that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father only. It believes in infant baptism and what is called an annual ablution. It is the only Christian Church which practices circumcision. It denies the doctrine of transubstantiation, yet believes in the real presence of Christ in the sacrament. Though cold and formal in many respects, the religion of the Abyssinian Church is not without its life-giving power.

ADAMITES.—The Adamites were a small and obscure sect of the Gnostics. They first appeared in the second century. Their aim was to imitate Adam's state of innocence. In the fifteenth century they appeared in Germany, under the name of Beghards. One tenet of this sect was, that bashfulness and modesty evince a mind not wholly purified, and that those only are perfect and in union with God who can associate with persons of a different sex, like Adam before the fall. They were supposed to be chaste in their morals, but were regarded with suspicion. This sect became extinct about the close of the fifteenth century.

AERIANS.—The Aerians were the followers of Aerius, a native of Pontus. He was a presbyter of the Church and a monk, who flourished in the fourth century. His peculiar opinions gathered around him a band of followers, whom he formed into a sect. He maintained that "by divine appointment there was no difference between bishops and presbyters." This opinion was readily embraced by those who were opposed to what they termed the arrogance of the bishops of that age. Aerius disapproved of prayers for the dead, stated fasts and the celebration of Easter. The aim of Aerius seems to have been a desire to bring religion back to its primitive simplicity.

ALBIGENSES.—The Albigenses were a sect who separated from the Church of Rome in the twelfth century. The term, says one, is used in a broader and in a more limited sense. In "the former sense it applies to all heretics who resided at that time in Languedoc. In the more limited sense it applies to those who in Italy were called Cathari and Bulgari." The writers of the Romish Church condemned them as heretics; of their orthodoxy, however, there can be no doubt. In the year 1200 they had become quite numerous in Toulouse and in many towns of Languedoc. They were the subjects of Raymond, sixth count of Toulouse, who, having embraced their opinions, received them under his protection. Innocent III. was then the pope of Rome. Hearing of the rapid progress of this sect, and fearing its future influence, he resolved to exterminate them. He first excommunicated them, calling on the clergy refuse them the sacraments of the Church while living and the rites of burial when dead. All persons were forbidden intercourse with them. A legate was sent from Rome to demand of Raymond their destruction. This was stoutly refused. Moreover, the legate was slain. Innocent III. then called on the faithful everywhere to aid in the destruction of these enemies of the Church. About the year 1209 a large army was collected and equipped under the command of Simon, earl of Montfort. Terrified by the appearance of this formidable host, Raymond yielded to the demands of the pope. A nephew of Raymond prosecuted the war, but was at last forced so submit. On the death of Innocent, his successor, Honorius III., determined to complete the unfinished work of his predecessor. He prevailed on Louis VIII., king of France, to march at the head of a great army, but dying soon after, Louis IX. (called St. Louis) prosecuted the work of his father. In this terrible and bloody war, which continued for several years, and which scarcely has a parallel in history, thousands of innocent ones were cruelly slain. Says one: The Church of the Albigenses had been drowned in blood. This earnest people denied the intercession of the saints, the doctrine of purgatory and other errors of Rome. The charge raised against them by their enemies was that they denied the sacraments. Thus afflicted by bloody wars and persecution, the Church of the Albigenses gradually wasted away.

ANABAPTISTS.—In the year 1537 a convention of Protestants was held at Smalcald, when Luther drew up what are called the Articles of Smalcald. About this time one or two events occurred which impeded the cause of the Reformation. Certain persons called "Anabaptists came to Münster, a city of Westphalia, and declared that they were divinely commissioned to set up a holy empire on the ruins of all human institutions." Great excitement followed this declaration. These fanatical persons constituted one John Bockholdt their leader. The city was captured in 1535, and Bockholdt and his associates were executed, and severe laws were enacted against the sect. The history of this peculiar people is somewhat obscure. The most famous of them were those who caused what is called "the rustic war" in Germany. The more respectable of them, terrified by the fate of their associates, joined themselves with those who were called Mennonites. They believed in baptism by immersion. They denied the equity of all civil law, and maintained that all distinctions of birth and rank should be abolished, and that there should be an equality in property and wealth.

ARIANS.—This sect of Christians consisted of the followers of Arius, a presbyter of Alexandria. On a certain occasion, Alexander, bishop of Alexandria, at a meeting of his clergy, expressed freely his opinions on the doctrine of the three Persons of the Godhead, maintaining that the Son of God is the same in dignity and essence with the Father. Arius dissented from this view, and declared that the Son is totally and really distinct from the Father; or, in other words, he denied the divinity of the Saviour, affirming that he was inferior to the Father both in nature and dignity. The opinions of Arius spread very rapidly, and created no little disturbance in the Church. Alexander called a council at Alexandria, and cast him out of the Church. Shortly after, Constantine the emperor called that famous council of the whole Church which assembled at Nice in the year 325. Before this council Arius was condemned and exiled, and his followers compelled to assent to a creed set forth by the council. Constantine was subsequently induced to recall Arius from his exile, and he moreover commanded the bishop of Alexandria to receive him again into the bosom of the Church. On the evening before the day appointed for his restoration Arius suddenly expired. The doctrines of Arius met with some favor afterward, but between the years 383 and 395 Theodosius deprived the Arians of all their churches, established severe laws against them, and defended the decisions of the Nicene Council against Arius and his followers. Afterward Arianism became a sect outside the Church.

ARMENIANS.—The gospel was introduced into Armenia at a very early period. It is supposed, however, that the Armenian Church was not firmly established until some time after the commencement of the fourth century. In this century, Gregory, called the Illuminator, first succeeded in persuading some individuals, and afterward the king and his nobles, to embrace the Christian religion. He was afterward consecrated the first bishop of Armenia, and labored with considerable success among the people. The Armenian Church, falling away from its original purity, was excluded from the communion of the Church about the year 457. This Church holds that in the person of Christ the human nature and the divine are one. They maintain that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father only. In general, the doctrine of this Church is similar to that of the Greek Church.

BAPTISTS, THE.—In the year 1636, Roger Williams was driven from Salem by the Puritans of Massachusetts Bay and settled at Providence, Rhode Island. The people of this new settlement in 1638 adopted a compact which distinctly denied to the civil power the control of the conscience in religious matters. Bancroft says of Roger Williams, "He was the first person in modern Christendom to assert in its plenitude the doctrine of the liberty of conscience, the equality of opinions before the law." It should not be forgotten, however, that this doctrine had been asserted during long centuries in every country in Europe where the Baptists had arisen; and had brought down on them prolonged and bitter persecution. That doctrine, however, was now incorporated in an organized government, and thus a new era was opened in the history of religious progress. The date of this event may properly be taken as the starting-point in a brief sketch of the Baptists in the United States.

Until 1639 there was no Baptist Church in this country, but in that year the first Baptist Church in Providence was constituted, with Roger Williams as one of the first members. At the close of 1886, after the lapse of two hundred and forty-seven years, there were 30,522 Baptist churches in this country, and the total number of members was 2,732,570; that is, if the population of the country was then sixty million, one of every twenty-two was a member of a Baptist Church. Every one of these members, also, had become such, not by birthright, but by voluntary choice, on a confession of his faith in Jesus Christ, in the comprehensive sense of the word "faith" as used in the New Testament in connection with the Lord. Their missionary work had been established in Burmah, Assam, Hindostan, China, Japan, Africa, South America, in various countries in Europe, and in every State and Territory in our own country. Their educational work was carried on in 27 universities and colleges, 73 seminaries and academies, 7 theological seminaries, and 19 institutions for the colored race and Indians. The total value of their school lands and buildings was $7,149,728; their libraries and apparatus, $1,167,695; their endowments, $8,552,077.

The doctrinal views of the Baptists correspond in general with the views held and taught by what are called the evangelical denominations. There are some peculiarities, however, in their belief and practice by which they are separated from other denominations, and to these special reference may be necessary.

1. The Constitution of a Church of Christ.—They hold that only those who, humbly confessing their sins, have put their trust in Christ, the Saviour of sinners, should be brought into a Church of which he is the Head. They see no scriptural authority and no personal fitness to warrant the admittance of those who have no real faith in Christ or love to him.

2. The Baptism of Believers.—They believe it to be incumbent on each believer on the Lord Jesus Christ to be baptized as his own personal, intelligent act.

3. The Act of Baptism.—They hold that immersion is the act expressed by the word "baptize," and that it is the only act which carries out the Lord's purpose and fulfils his command; and that hence it is necessary to the obedience that he asks and expects from his disciples.

4. The Prerequisites to the Lord's Supper—They hold, therefore, that only true believers, baptized in strict conformity to his command, should be brought into a Church of Christ and invited to the Lord's Table.

On the above points there are differences of opinion among Christians, and these differences are thought by the Baptists to be so important as to demand and fully to justify their separate organization. While, however, they deem themselves bound by loyalty to their Lord to follow strictly the rule that he has laid down, they fully believe in the freedom of conscience and claim no authority over the consciences of others, and would earnestly protest against any infringement of that freedom of conscience which belongs alike to all. The organization of the Baptist churches is strictly congregational, and therefore they think it a misnomer when the Baptists or the Baptist churches of this country are spoken of as "The Baptist Church of the United States," or other religious bodies are designated as "branches of the Baptist Church."

BEREANS.—This is a small body of Christians founded by the Rev. Wm. Barclay about the year 1773. They are dissenters from the Scotch Presbyterian Church. They hold that all knowledge of God, of his character and his attributes, is to be derived only from the Bible. The sin against the Holy Ghost, or what is called the unpardonable sin, consists in unbelief, or the constant rejection of the truth as it is in Jesus. They believe in the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, and accept the doctrine of election. In common with most evangelical churches, they believe in infant baptism.

CHRISTIANS.—A body of believers, professedly rejecting human creeds, and united on the Holy Scriptures as their standard of faith and duty. They claim no man as their founder, and desire that the Church shall be named, from its divine head—Christian. Seeking for the union of all Christians, they tolerate great latitude of opinion, and have for their only test of fellowship, vital Christian piety. They appeared at the beginning of this century, springing simultaneously from the Baptists in New England, the Methodists in Virginia, and the Presbyterians in Kentucky.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—It is quite probable that the gospel was preached in Britain by the apostle St. Paul. Eusebius, when speaking of the labors of the apostles in distant countries, adds that some passed over the ocean into those islands called the British Islands. Tertullian, in A. D. 190, says there are places in Britain inaccessible to Roman arms, which were subdued to Christ. From these and other authorities it is evident that the gospel was preached in Britain at a very early day, and that the Church was fully organized there at an early period. It is a fact of history not to be disputed that the British bishops were present at the Council of Arles, 314; at Nice in 325; and at Sardica, 347. These facts prove the early establishment of the British Church, now the Church of England. For five centuries she maintained her independence of the Church of Rome, down to the Saxon invasion. In the year 596, Rome sent over Augustine with a band of missionaries to Britain, and there he found the old British Church regularly organized and established. Hence, it is evident that the Church of England does not derive her origin from the Church of Rome, but was established five centuries before Rome sent her missionaries there. During the invasion of the barbarians she suffered severely, and even in the Dark Ages, when the power of the pope was generally recognized in Christendom, there were manly spirits in the Church of England who did not hesitate to speak out boldly against the usurpations of Rome, regardless of consequences. But at last, in common with the whole Church of God, she was forced to submit to the authority of Rome, and thus she continued down to the Reformation of the sixteenth century. It was then that she threw off the yoke Rome had imposed upon her, and asserted her independence once more. The work achieved by the Reformers of the Church of England was one of reformation. They did not create a new Church, but reformed and purified a Church which had become corrupt. Thus does the Church of England stand to-day before the world, an ancient branch of the Church of Christ established in the early days of Christianity. The ministry of the Church of England is of a threefold character, consisting of bishops, priests and deacons, together with two archbishops, who are the head of the English hierarchy, called the archbishop of Canterbury and the archbishop of York. Her form of worship is liturgical, and is found in what is called the Book of Common Prayer, and the administration of the sacraments and other rites and ceremonies of the Church. The doctrines of the Church of England are to be found in the Book of Homilies, her Creeds and the Thirty-nine Articles. A primitive custom still preserved in this Church is that of confirmation, or the laying on of hands. On the controversies of Calvin and Arminius this Church is divided. Both parties always have been, and are still to be, found in the Church.

CONGREGATIONALISTS (ORTHODOX).—In a village in the north of England there was established about the year 1600 an independent church. This organized body of believers ultimately proved to be the origin of Congregationalism in this country. Having fled from the land of persecution, we find this infant church, with its pastor, John Robinson, subsequently settled in Holland. In 1620 these same persons, forming themselves into a colony, emigrated to New England, landing at Plymouth in December of the same year. This little colony consisted of about one hundred souls. Other colonies followed soon after, settling in different parts of Massachusetts. The church founded at Plymouth became the mother church of the Congregationalists, and from time to time sent forth its bands of believers, who formed other churches in different parts. Congregationalism continued to enlarge its borders as the population of the country increased. In 1638 Harvard University was founded at Cambridge. In general, the Congregationalists of New England are Calvinistic in sentiment, as we learn from their Platform or Church Discipline, drawn up in 1648 by the elders assembled at Cambridge. As to the theology of the Congregationalists, it is orthodox and evangelical. Each congregation is a separate and distinct church of itself. The Orthodox Congregationalists to-day comprise much of the wealth, intelligence and influence of New England. Many of the principal colleges and theological seminaries of New England are under its influence.

GREEK CHURCH.—For eight centuries the Greek and Latin or Roman churches were united in one great body. It was in the ninth century that a difficulty arose which resulted in a final separation of the two churches. The disturbing causes which culminated at last in a separation were many. The first, no doubt, was the elevation of the bishop of Constantinople in dignity and influence next to the bishop of Rome. This grew out of that act of Constantine which transferred the seat of empire to Byzantium. When Constantinople became the capital of the empire, the bishops of that city naturally aspired after and claimed equal rank with the bishops of Rome, and the emperors favored the idea. Hence, at the Council of Constantinople, held in the year 381, the bishop of that city was elevated in rank next to the bishop of Rome. This was for a long time a subject of much dissension in the Church. Another subject of dissension was that concerning the procession of the Holy Ghost. This, together with the claims set up for precedence by the two bishops of Rome and Constantinople, contributed in a great degree to divide the two churches. In doctrine the Greek Church differs but little from the Church of Rome. Besides the Holy Scriptures, it receives tradition as the rule of faith. Among the doctrines accepted as the faith of the Greek Church are the following—viz.: It admits the seven sacraments of Rome; baptism is performed by the immersion of the infant three times; the Lord's Supper is administered to the laity in both kinds, and even to infants; the first six general councils of the Church the Greek Church accepts as such. It rejects the doctrine of purgatory. Transubstantiation is accepted by this Church. It maintains that the Holy Spirit proceedeth from the Father only. The doctrines of the Greek Church are more or less to be found in her creeds and in her liturgies and confessions. The patriarch of Constantinople is head of the Greek Church proper.

LUTHERANS, THE.—Martin Luther's ninety-five theses of October 31, 1517, opened the conflict with the papal Church. The Augsburg Confession (June 25, 1530), Luther's two catechisms and other official Confessions elucidate the doctrines peculiar to the Lutheran Church, which accepts, in harmony with all catholic Christianity, the three great ecumenical symbols (Apostolic, Nicæan, Athanasian), and, in accord with the main Protestant denominations, the formal and material principles, of the evangelical Church—viz., the absolute authority of the Old and New Testaments in matters of faith and justification by free grace through faith in Christ. She holds to the two sacraments, not as mere ceremonies, emblems or acts of profession, but as means of grace through which God offers and conveys to man in his lost condition his forgiving and vivifying love (baptism), and nourishes in the believer, through the reception in a supernatural way of Christ's flesh and blood, spiritual life (Lord's Supper; consubstantiation, impanation, etc., are rejected). She opposes the predestinarianism of Calvin.

To the Lutheran Church, in the sixteenth century established in Germany, in all Scandavia, in parts of Austria, Hungary, Holland and the Baltic provinces, a new field was in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries opened in North America. The Lutherans enjoyed since 1674 free worship in the province of New York. Since 1709 thousands of Lutherans settled on the Hudson and its tributaries. Many Swedish Lutherans had settled since 1637 on the shores of the Delaware. The German Lutheran congregations in Pennsylvania were first organized into a synod in 1748 by the labors of H. M. Muhlenberg, D. D. Lutheran congregations were about the middle of the last century and soon after established in the seaboard provinces. In the West their numbers greatly increased, especially in our times, through the immigration of Germans and Scandinavians. The Lutheran Church in these United States and in British America now (1884) counts 57 synods, 3700 ministers, 6630 congregations, 892,000 communicants. The synods are united in various larger representative bodies, as the General Synod (of a laxer relation to the standards of the Church) the Missouri Synod, General Council, Synodical Conference (of a stricter adherence to the old Church Confessions). Eleven synods are independent. It is apparent that the Lutheran Church on this continent, where even Icelanders, Bohemians and Hungarians have a membership in her, is of an exceptionally polyglot character. She has under her control 21 colleges, 33 classical schools, 12 young ladies' seminaries, 43 orphan-houses and asylums. There are published in her interest 119 periodicals—40 in English, 49 in German, 15 in Norwegian, 4 in Danish, 1 in Finnish, 1 in Icelandic.

MENNONITES.—The descendents of the ancient Waldenses, so called from Menno Simon, one of the reformers of the sixteenth century. He was born in Holland in 1496, and died 1561. They believe in the Trinity, the divinity of Christ, the depravity of the human race, the atonement, and that faith, repentance and a pious, godfearing life are necessary conditions of salvation. They baptize believers (adults) only. Baptism by all orthodox Mennonites is performed by pouring or sprinkling, and not by immersion. They are utterly averse to oaths, war and capital punishment, which they regard as inconsistent with the spirit of Christianity. They observe the ordinance of feet-washing, teach nonconformity to the world, plainness in speech and apparel, charity, and that Christians should "marry only in the Lord." Their first settlement in America was made in Germantown, Pennsylvania, in 1683. During 1873, 74, 75, on account of religious intoleration, about 8000 emigated from Russia to America. The entire membership of the Church is estimated at about eighty thousand (80,000), with from 500 to 600 ministers and as many churches. They have large settlements in Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Nebraska, Kansas, and most of the Western States and Canada.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—The father of Methodism was John Wesley. He was born in England in the year 1703, and was educated at the University of Oxford. He was a presbyter of the Church of England, and always considered himself a member of that Church. The first preacher of Methodism in this country was one Philip Embury, who emigrated to this country with a band of emigrants from Ireland in the year 1760. After holding meetings for some time in private houses, they concluded to erect a church. The first Methodist church was erected in the city of New York and dedicated to Almighty God in the year 1768. Other preachers of like sentiments with Wesley embarked for this country at different times, and engaged earnestly in the work of preaching the gospel. The first Methodist Conference held in America was at Philadelphia on the 14th of July, 1773. From this date the Methodist Church, with the blessing of God and the earnest preaching of the Word, made rapid strides, adding daily to its numbers until at the present time it may justly be reckoned as the most numerous of all denominations of Christians in this country. Dr. Chalmers has somewhere said, "Methodism is religion in earnest." Wesley had always impressed on the minds of his followers both in England and America loyalty to the Church of England. But realizing the great fact that Methodism must eventually become an independent Church, Wesley ordained the Rev. Thomas Coke, a presbyter of the Church of England, as general superintendent of the Methodist congregations in this country. Dr. Coke came to this country in the year 1784. It was at an assembly of the Methodist clergy convened at Baltimore that an independent Church was formed. Under the name and title of the Methodist Episcopal Church, articles of religion were adopted and a church government was framed. The Methodist Episcopal Church has two conferences, the Annual and the General Conference, which latter body meets once in four years. This church has what are called class-meetings and love-feasts. Its ministry consists of bishops, presbyters, deacons and local preachers. This Church has of late years displayed in the cause of education much interest. It has numerous universities, colleges, academies and theological institutes. In its twenty-five articles of religion are to be found the index of the Methodist faith.

The Methodist Book Concern in the city of New York is an influential auxiliary in the Church, and from which emanate their religious publications of many thousands of volumes.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH (SOUTH.) The Methodist Church made rapid progress in the Southern States from its first introduction. On all questions of reform the Methodist Episcopal Church as a whole has always taken, and does still, a great interest. When the question of American slavery came up, and its moral aspects engaged the minds of men, the hearts of the people North and South waxed warm on the subject, and the result was a separation of the northern and southern divisions of the Church. This event in reality took place in the year 1844. It was, however, in May, 1845, that a formal dissolution of the union of the Church was effected. Thus was formed and established what is now known as the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The doctrine and government of this branch of the Church are identical with those of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Its universities and colleges are now in a prosperous condition.

The publishing house of the Methodist Episcopal Church South is located at Nashville, Tenn. It has a large and well-organized book establishment, from which their publications are distributed throughout the Southern States.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH (AFRICAN).—This Church is composed of colored people. It separated from the main body of Methodists in the year 1787. In doctrine it is evangelical, having its bishops, elders and deacons. There are two other branches of the Methodist Church, called respectively the Wesleyan Methodist Church and the Zion African M. E. Church.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.—This Church originated in Pennsylvania, A. D. 1800, through the labors of Jacob Albright. Its confession of faith and polity resemble closely those of the M. E. Church. Its episcopacy and presiding eldership are quadrennially elective officers. Largely of a missionary character, it has pushed its operations into Canada, Germany, Switzerland and Japan.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.—This is a branch of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The great question which caused its separation from the main body of the Church was a desire on the part of some to restrain the power and authority of the bishops of the Church, and the introduction of laymen as delegates in the councils of the Church. Accordingly in the year 1830 several societies separated from the Church, and, adopting a constitution and book of discipline, they assumed the name of the Methodist Protestant Church. It is in doctrine identical with the other branches of the Church. It has its annual and general conference, the latter holding its session once in four years. This Church has neither bishops nor presiding elders.

MOHAMMEDANISM.—In the seventh century the Christians suffered less than in the preceding centuries, though at times they were persecuted. A new and powerful enemy, however, different from any they had previously encountered, appeared about the year 612 in Arabia in the person of Mohammed. This distinguished individual was born about the year 569 at Mecca, a city of Arabia. His family were poor, but respectable. Mohammed was an illiterate man, but eloquent. At the commencement of his remarkable career he declared to the world that he was commissioned by God to destroy the polytheism of his day and country, and to purify the religion of the Jews and that of the Christians. The Koran, which is ascribed to him, professes to be a divine composition handed down by God and imparted to his prophet. It was at Mecca that Mohammed conceived and embraced the idea of converting his countrymen and bringing them to a knowledge of divine truth. Hence, retiring from the world, he secluded himself in a cave, and there occupied his time in meditation and prayer. It was there that he convinced himself that he was God's prophet, and sent by God to reform the world. At first he made a few converts, chiefly from among his friends and relatives, and then followed a series of reverses; but he still persevered, and his converts multiplied. It was about the year 622 that he asserted his claim to temporal as well as spiritual power among men, and declared himself to be a civil ruler as well as prophet. It was at this time that he assumed the sword, and determined by it to build up his kingdom and force men to embrace his doctrines. Thus by force, as well as by persuasion, he in a few years reduced Arabia to subjection, so rapidly did his cause progress. Mohammed died at Medina in the year 632. The followers of Mohammed all believe in the absolute necessity of a pilgrimage to the tomb of the prophet; it is viewed as a religious duty. They regard the Koran in the same light that all Christians do the Bible. They believe in one God, who is the Creator and Ruler of the universe, whom all must worship and serve. They believe that Mohammed was a prophet of God, sent by him, and that the Koran contains the divine laws of God. They believe in a day of judgment, when sentence shall be passed on all men according to the life led in this world. They believe in the final destruction of all things and in a general resurrection. They believe in a paradise of the blessed, where all the true followers of God and his prophet shall dwell hereafter in the presence of God, and a hell where the wicked must dwell, an abode for the impious. The duty of fasting is considered as indispensable.

MORAVIANS.—It was near the middle of the ninth century, says a celebrated writer on ecclesiastical history, that two Greek monks, Methodius and Cyril, were sent from Constantinople by the empress Theodora to teach the Moesians, Bulgarians, and subsequently the Bohemians and Moravians, and induce them, if possible, to embrace Christianity. A knowledge of Christianity had previously been imparted to these nations through the influence of Charlemagne, but the light of truth was soon extinguished among them. These missionaries, being Greeks, taught these nations the opinions, worship and rites of the Greeks. In the sixteenth century the Bohemian Brethren, as they were called, or the Moravians, hearing of Luther and his work, sought friendly intercourse with the Reformer. In the year 1547 a large number of this people were driven from their country. A number of years afterward the Bohemians and Swiss became consolidated into one community, assuming the name of the Church of the United Brethren and adopting the doctrines of the Reformed, but adhering to the rules and regulations of the Bohemians.

When the war broke out in Bohemia in 1612 they fled in different directions. A colony went to Upper Lusatia, where they received the protection of Nicolas Lewis, Count Zinzendorf. This man, we are told, became their bishop subsequently. The ministry of this Church consists of three orders, bishops, presbyters and deacons. In doctrine it is identical with the great evangelical churches of this country. It keeps the great festivals of Easter and Christmas. This small but earnest body of believers has always been celebrated for its missionary spirit. It has several celebrated institutions of learning—at Bethlehem and Nazareth, Pennsylvania, and at Salem, North Carolina. The Moravians first emigrated to this country about the year 1750.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—This Church is the daughter of the Church of England. The members of the Church of England who came over with the early colonists to this country were by no means numerous. The greater part of those who came were among those colonists who settled in the Southern States. The establishment of the Church of England in this country was through the instrumentality of that society called the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. The churches thus established and supported were placed under the care of the bishop of London. When in process of time the American colonies severed their connection with the mother-country, the Episcopal churches found therein also severed their connection with the mother Church of England. At the conclusion of the war of the Revolution, when America asserted her independence, the Episcopal churches were in a weak and feeble condition. The first effort made for the organization of the several congregations into one united Church was at an assemblage of clergymen convened at Brunswick, New Jersey, May 8, 1784. This meeting adjourned to October in the same year. The first general convention of this Church met at Philadelphia on the 27th day of September, 1785. At this convention alterations were made in the Prayer Book, and a constitution was proposed, but it was not until the convention which met in Philadelphia in 1789 that the Episcopal Church was finally established. At this convention the Prayer Book was again altered in some respects, and adapted for the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church, together with a constitution. When the Episcopal Church in this country was fully organized and established it had but 3 bishops and about 180 clergymen. It has now 54 bishops and nearly 3000 ministers. Its communicants at the present time number more than 200,000. The growth of this Church has been very rapid, especially during the last twenty years. Like the Church of England, it has three orders of the ministry, bishops, priests or presbyters, and deacons. Its form of worship is liturgical, and is found in the Book of Common Prayer. Its doctrines are to be found in the Book of Homilies, the Creeds, and the Thirty-nine Articles. On the peculiar tenets of Calvin and Arminius this Church is divided, the advocates of both parties being found within her borders. The Episcopal Church is truly a missionary Church, having her missionary fields, with their bishops, in China, Africa, and Japan. In doctrine this Church is evangelical, and consequently in harmony with the great evangelical churches of this country. It comprises much of the intelligence, wealth, enterprise and influence of the land.

NESTORIANS.—This sect of Christians derives its name from Nestorius, bishop of Constantinople, who lived in the fifth century. The councils of the Church held previous to the fifth century had by their decrees declared that Christ was truly God as well as man, but as to the mode and effects of this mysterious union of God with man in Christ there had been no discussion. The learned men of that age had expressed themselves differently, it is true. The cause of the Nestorian controversy arose from a sermon preached by Anastasius. This man took exception to the use of the term Theotokos, or Mother of God, which the Alexandrians applied to the Virgin Mary, and in his sermon he preached against it. A controversy ensued. Nestorius upheld Anastasius. Cyril, bishop of Alexandria, called a council and denounced him. As a reconciliation between the two bishops seemed now impossible, the emperor Theodosius II. assembled a council at Ephesus in the year 431, and before that council Nestorius was condemned and sent into exile. On the banishment of Nestorius his followers dispersed, diffusing his doctrines through the East, and to this distant day they exist a numerous body in Persia and adjacent countries. They live principally in Koordistan, a mountainous region which separates Persia from the Turkish empire; many dwell also in the plains of Ooroomiah. The Nestorian Church is episcopal in its organization, having its bishops, priests and deacons. It has also a patriarch, who resides in the mountains of Koordistan. They abhor image-worship, and deny auricular confession and the doctrine of purgatory. Mr. Perkins has for many years labored very successfully among this ancient sect of Christians as a missionary sent out by the American Board of Foreign Missions. They hold that no doctrine is essential to salvation which is not found in the Bible. For the Scriptures they have the greatest reverence. They have been styled the Protestants of the East. Religion, it is true, is in a very low condition; the piety of this sect has decayed. But nevertheless, here in its mountain home is to be found, under the name of Nestorians, an ancient branch of the early Church, claiming for its founder the apostle St. Thomas.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.—This Church is the offspring of the Church of Scotland. It was in the city of Philadelphia, about the year 1703, that the first Presbyterian church was organized. In the following year the Philadelphia Presbytery was formed. A synod was established in the year 1716. From this period down to the year 1741 prosperity attended the Church. In the year 1741 the synod was unhappily rent asunder by the dissenting elements then existing in the Church. A few years subsequent to this time union and harmony was restored to the Church once more. In the year 1789 the first general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States met. It was convened in the city of Philadelphia. It was at this meeting of the general assembly that we detect a decided growth and prosperity in the history of the Church. From this epoch down to the year 1834 the Church grew very rapidly. In the year 1834 it numbered 22 synods, over 100 presbyteries, nearly 2000 ordained ministers, and more than 200,000 communicants. It was in the midst of this rapid growth and prosperity that a division occurred in the Church in the year 1837, which culminated in the complete separation of the Church into the two divisions known afterward by the names of the Old School and New School respectively. But, though the Church was divided and each school acted on an independent basis, still prosperity marked the future history of each, and moreover from time to time a desire for reunion revealed itself. Several attempts were made, and terms of compromise were proposed. At last, in the year 1869 the long-desired reunion was effected, and the Old and New Schools became once more consolidated into one body under the name and title of The Presbyterian Church in the United States. The government of this Church is vested in what is called the session, which is the primary court of the Church, and consists of the pastor and ruling elders, the pastor presiding as the moderator. The presbytery is composed of all the ministers and one ruling elder from each church embraced within a given district. The synod consists of several presbyteries united. The general assembly is the highest court in the Presbyterian Church, and consists of an equal number of pastors and elders from the presbyteries. The doctrines of the Presbyterian Church in general are Calvinistic, and are embraced in what is called the Westminster Confession of Faith and in the Larger and Shorter Catechisms. The Presbyterian Church is to-day one of the largest and most prosperous of all the religious denominations of this country.

PRESBYTERIANS (CUMBERLAND).—The origin of this Church is a little remarkable. At the beginning of the present century certain parts of the State of Kentucky were visited with an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, resulting in the conversion of many souls. The exigencies of the season seemed to demand in the estimation of some an increase in the ranks of the ministry to meet the wants of the people. Accordingly, in the year 1803 the Cumberland Presbytery ordained to the ministry certain persons who had not gone through with the regular prescribed course of study demanded of those who aspired to the ministerial office. The synod, subsequently learning this fact, demanded of the presbytery that those persons who had been ordained as above mentioned should prepare themselves for an examination in those studies prescribed according to the rules of the Church. This demand was refused, and in 1810 the Cumberland Presbytery was formed, which resulted in the establishment of the present Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The subsequent prosperity of this Church was very rapid. In 1813 a synod was established. In 1828 it was determined that a general assembly should be formed. The first meeting of the general assembly of this Church was convened at Princeton, Ky., in the year 1829. The doctrines of this Church vary somewhat from the Westminster Confession, rejecting the doctrine of election. In government this Church is identical with the Presbyterian Church in general. In the year 1847, agreeably to the statements of the general assembly, the Church had been favored with an unusual degree of prosperity. In the year 1871, according to report, there were connected with this Church 100 presbyteries, about 1100 ministers, besides many licentiates. The number of communicants, according to estimate, was 80,000.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (UNITED).—This Church is at present composed of the two churches known formerly by the name of the Associate and the Associate Reformed Church respectively. It had been the earnest desire of the members of these two churches for many years that a union should be effected, not only for the happiness and convenience of the members in their individual capacity, but also for the well-being of the churches themselves as a whole. There was in reality but little difference between them, and that difference pertained not to doctrine, but to minor matters. Several attempts at union were made from time to time, but all proved unavailing. A general basis, however, was at last agreed upon and presented to the synods and presbyteries, and the result was a union of the two churches. This event took place at the city of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on the 26th of May, 1858. The union of these churches was the source of much rejoicing among the people. This Church in doctrine and church government is identical with the other branches of that great body of believers comprehended under the term Presbyterianism. The progress of this Church has, since the union, been a happy one. The members of this Church are celebrated for their earnest piety and zeal in the Master's cause.

PROGRESSIVE FRIENDS.—These are seceders from the Society of Friends, or Quakers, as they are called. They profess to identify themselves with all the great progressive movements of the age, aiming at the amelioration of the ills of life in general. In doctrine they are identical with the Hicksites in many points, rejecting the doctrine of the Trinity and the vicarious atonement. Ostensibly, the Progressive Friends have no creed to which the members are bound to subscribe. They hold what is called their yearly meeting in May, at which time all matters pertaining to the well-being of the society are considered.

QUAKERS, or FRIENDS.—It was in England, about the year 1648, that the sect bearing this name first appeared. The founder, George Fox, a person of melancholic temperament, was born in Leicestershire. He was retiring in his habits of life, and given much to reflection and meditation. It is said that while taking a pensive walk on a certain occasion, and reflecting on the worldliness of the age and the absence of spiritual religion among men, he felt himself called to assume the duties and office of a preacher. Consequently, abandoning his former pursuits, he gave himself to the work of elevating as well as promoting the happiness of his fellow-men. In his work and labor of love he met with considerable opposition at first, being arrested on several occasions and once cast into prison. Subsequently, his cause gained a few supporters, who went out in all directions preaching and adding to the number of the sect. Among those who embraced the principles of this sect was one distinguished by wealth and social position—William Penn, who afterward founded a colony in Pennsylvania. This man gave character and influence to the Society of Friends. By the earnest labors of Fox and his co-workers the sect increased in numbers, spreading all over England and the Continent. The colony founded by William Penn in this country in its early days consisted mostly of Friends. The Society of Friends believes in one God, the Creator of all things. It accepts the Bible as God's inspired word. It believes in the divinity of Christ and the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, and accepts the Holy Spirit as the Comforter. Baptism by water is rejected, the only true baptism being that of the Spirit. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper is rejected as unnecessary. Christ is received as the Saviour and Redeemer of the world, and salvation is through faith in him. The Friends have what are called quarterly and yearly meetings, before which business is transacted. In dress the Friends are plain, and in manners modest and unassuming. They never resist an injury, hence war to them is an unnecessary evil. It was in the year 1827 that a division occurred among the Society of Friends. The ground of difference was doctrinal. There are now two societies, each retaining the name of Friends

The seceders from the main body are commonly called Hicksites, from the name of Elias Hicks, their leader. They deny the doctrine of the Trinity, and consequently the divinity of Christ. They also deny the doctrine of a vicarious atonement and imputed righteousness.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—This Church professes to derive her origin from St. Peter. She regards the apostle St. Peter as her founder. She maintains that our Lord delegated to this apostle an authority which constituted him the head of the college of the apostles, and that this primacy thus delegated is inherited by all the bishops of Rome. The first settlement of Roman Catholics in the United States appears to have taken place in Maryland about the year 1632 or 1633. The large and rapid growth of this Church since its organization in this country is chiefly owing to the vast tide of immigration which has constantly flowed from the Old World to our shores. At the head of this Church stands the pope of Rome. All power centres in him as the successor of St. Peter. Rome maintains that the Church of Christ consists of those believers, and those only, who recognize the pope as the head of the Church, and who submit to his authority. All other Christians, in her opinion, by whatever name they may be called, do not belong to the one universal Church of Christ. Episcopacy, according to the opinion of Rome, is essential to the very being and existence of the Church of Christ. Its order of ministry consists of bishops, priests and deacons. Besides the Bible, it holds to tradition. The government of this Church centres at Rome, and is vested in the pope and the college of cardinals. Its societies and religious orders are numerous. Numerically, this Church exceeds all other churches in Christendom.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.—This sect of Christians appeared in England for the first time about the year 1650. In the year 1665 they appeared in this country. They hold to the doctrine of baptism by immersion. In doctrine they are regarded as evangelical, and in church government they are congregational, each society being an independent church. The one peculiarity of this sect of Christians is the observance of the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath. The seventh day being of divine appointment, they hold that it is still in force. Hence they observe it as the day set apart by Almighty God for holy worship, and to be observed as such by his believing people. As a sect they are not very numerous.

SECOND ADVENTISTS (called MILLERITES).—The founder of this sect of Christians was William Miller, who asserted that the end of the world would take place in the year 1843. His convictions were based upon the prophecies of the Old Testament. The sentiments of Mr. Miller produced great excitement throughout this country, and multitudes of people espoused his opinions. Those who are still regarded as his followers believe that the end of the world is near at hand, though they do not pretend to locate the time.

SHAKERS.—This remarkable people appeared first in England. A few members of the society came to this country about the year 1780, and settled near Lebanon Springs, New York. A prominent person who joined them in the year 1757 was Ann Lee, who was styled "the elect lady," or the mother of all the saints. The members of this society live a life of celibacy, the men and women dwelling in separate houses. They are said to be very hospitable to strangers, temperate in their habits, peaceable in their lives, as well as honest and industrious. In their mode of dress they are plain, and in their manners humble and unostentatious. Their worship consists in dancing, mingled with the clapping of the hands and singing. Occasionally, when the Spirit moves them, they speak. Their meals are taken at one common table. The candidate who applies for admission among them must first honorably discharge all his obligations to the outward world and yield up all his former relations and friends; he then becomes a member of the Shaker community. When the soul at death leaves the body it continues to dwell invisibly among the members of the community on earth. The Shakers number several thousand members, scattered through the several States. They have what is called a chief elder and an elderess.

SOCINIANS.—This sect derives its name from Loelius Socinus, who lived in the sixteenth century. He was a lawyer, a man of learning and talent, and celebrated for his moral and upright life. He traveled over many countries that he might obtain a knowledge of the truth. He is said to have been a member of the Swiss Church, accepting the Helvetic Confession. Many who embraced the doctrines of Socinus went to Poland, that they might enjoy a greater freedom in their religious opinions. There the Socinian sect was first established. From Poland the doctrines of Socinus were carried over to Transylvania, and being sustained by persons of influence there, the followers of this sect subsequently began to diffuse their principles through Europe. The Socinians hold that the truths of the Bible must be explained according to the dictates of reason. The Socinians reject the divinity of Christ, and believe the Holy Spirit to be only an energy or power of God, denying the personality of the Spirit.

SWEDENBORGIANS.—This denomination of Christians derives its name from Emanuel Swedenborg. Emanuel Swedenborg was born in Stockholm in 1688, and was the son of Jesper Swedberg, bishop of Skaroa, in Sweden, a man distinguished for piety and learning. Emanuel changed his name from Swedberg to Swedenborg. The first society of Swedenborgians was organized in London in the year 1787. The works of Swedenborg were introduced into this country in the year 1784. A church was first organized in Baltimore in 1798. The doctrines of this Church are the following: First, Swedenborg believed in the unity of God--that the Lord Jesus Christ was God manifested in the flesh that the work of the redemption might be effected. His views of the Trinity are peculiar. While he denied that there are three Persons in one Divine Being, he at the same time admitted that there are three essential principles in one Divine Being, all meeting in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. His Trinity seems to be a trinity of principles rather than of persons. He believed that salvation is the result of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, followed by a life of obedience. As to the resurrection, Swedenborg taught that the body in which men shall rise will not be a material but a spiritual body.

THE RUSSIAN GREEK CHURCH.—This is a branch of the Greek Church. It is a settled fact that Christianity was introduced into Russia near the end of the tenth century. Says a celebrated writer in 961: "Wlodimir, duke of Russia and Muscovy, married Anna, the sister of the Greek emperor Basil, junior, and she did not cease to importune and exhort her husband till he in the year 987 submitted to baptism, assuming the name Basil. The Russians, influenced by the example of their duke, embraced the faith." From this time Christianity obtained a permanent establishment in Russia. It was through Russia's connection with Greece that Christianity was introduced into the former country. Hence the patriarch of Constantinople enjoyed for some time a spiritual supremacy over the Russian Church. It was at the fall of Constantinople in the middle of the fifteenth century that the Church of Russia began to assert her independence, and it was in the year 1509 that the czar of Russia prevailed on Jeremiah, patriarch of Constantinople, to consecrate Job, archbishop of Rostow, the first patriarch of Moscow and metropolitan of all Russia. From this event we may date the independence of the Church of Russia. This Church is now really governed by the czar. The doctrines of the Russian Church are identical with the Greek Church. The Russians have a regard for relics, images and pictures, the invocation of the saints and the crucifix. The Russians pay great respect and attention to Lent. The ceremonies and customs of the Russian branch of the Greek Church are very numerous. Baptism in this Church is performed by the immersion of the infant three times.

THE COPTIC CHURCH.—This is a branch of the Greek Church. The head of this Church is styled the patriarch of Alexandria, and resides at Cairo. The patriarch has under him and subordinate to his authority several bishops. The number of Christians connected with this Church has been variously estimated, some reckoning 50,000, and others more than twice that number. The ecclesiastics of this Church are said to be from the lowest classes of society. This Church recognizes seven sacraments, and, following the example of the Greek Church, they keep four Lents and have several liturgies. The Coptic Church has suffered much from Mohammedan oppression. The clergy and people are in a very wretched condition, and consequently Christianity is in a decayed state. Of all the known branches of the Christian Church the Coptic Church is the poorest, the most degraded and ignorant. Should an infant die without receiving the rite of baptism, they believe it would be blind in the future world. It is said that they circumcise their children, although it is not certain that they do. They maintain that the bread and wine in the Lord's Supper are changed into the body and blood of Christ. Prayer for the dead is a common practice among them. In prayer they call on the Virgin Mary.

THE CHRISTIANS OF ST. THOMAS.—This is a branch of the Greek Church. It is maintained by some that the apostle St. Thomas preached the gospel to the inhabitants of India, and it is affirmed that these Christians are the offspring of the inhabitants of that country, or of those who were converted through the preaching of that apostle to the Christian faith. Their doctrines, says one, are embraced in a very few articles. They are said to acknowledge the patriarch of Antioch. They keep the festival of Easter. At the church-doors a vessel containing holy water is placed, and the Christians as they pass into the church make the sign of the cross with this water.

THE GEORGIAN AND MINGRELIAN CHURCHES are both branches of the Greek Church. Georgia and Mingrelia are countries located in Asia. The situation of the inhabitants of these two countries is very lamentable, their extreme poverty and ignorance rendering them wretched and miserable. They profess a common faith, and are in reality a branch of the Greek Church. Each of these nations has its own pontiff, who acknowledges tribute to the patriarch of Constantinople. The condition of their bishops and priests, so far as culture, refinement and temperance are concerned, is no better than that of the people in general, many of them reciting mass from memory. The doctrine of celibacy among the priesthood is practically ignored. An infant, so soon as it is born into the world, is brought to the priest, who makes on his brow the sign of the cross, and a few days afterward anoints it with the holy oil; two years subsequent to that time the child is baptized.

THE REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.—This Church is the offspring of the Church of Holland. It was first established in New York, that State being originally settled by the members of this Church about the year 1612. The first church building was erected in New York City; the first minister was the Rev. Jonas Michaelius, 1628. The condition of this Church in the year 1893 was as follows: Churches, 603; ministers, 600; communicants, 97,520; families, 54,000; Sunday-school scholars, 119,758. This Church accepts the Bible as the only rule of faith. Its doctrinal standards are: 1. The Belgic Confession; 2. The Heidelberg Catechism; 3. The Canons of the Synod of Dort. Man's helplessness, his conversion by grace alone, and the perseverance of the saints, are tenets held strictly by this Church. It is Presbyterian in government. The governing bodies are: 1. The Consistory, consisting of minister, elders and deacons of the local church; 2. The Classis; 3. The Particular Synod; 4. The General Synod. This Church has a college and theological seminary at New Brunswick, New Jersey; also a college and theological seminary at Holland in Michigan, and a theological seminary in India.

THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.—This denomination of Christians first appeared in this country about the year 1720. Quite a large body of emigrants from Germany, coming over in the year 1727, accompanied by the Rev. George Michael Weiss, settled in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Here they built a church and formed a consistory. Several other settlements were made from time to time in different States. It severed its connection with the Church of Holland in 1793. From 1825, when the theological seminary, now located at Lancaster, was founded at Carlisle, Pa., on to the present time the progress of this Church has been steady and constant. There are now connected with this Church one General Synod and eight Particular Synods. These are composed of 55 Classes. Connected with this Church are 880 ministers, 1588 congregations and 212,740 communicants. In government this Church is strictly Presbyterian. Its faith is embraced in the Heidelberg Catechism. Much earnestness and zeal for the conversion of souls is manifested by this people.

THE MORMONS (LATTER-DAY SAINTS).—The founder of this very remarkable sect was Joseph Smith, Jr., who was born in Sharon, Windsor county, Vermont, in the year 1805. His parents were among those who walked in the humblest paths of life. The Smith family possessed a name and reputation by no means enviable. Joseph Smith when a boy became apparently interested in religion, and professed to have met with a change of heart, but he soon fell away. Previous to the establishment of this sect, Smith professed to be favored from time to time with miraculous visions. On one of these occasions he declared that an angel appeared to him and directed him to dig in a certain place and at a particular time, assuring him that he should find a metallic book containing mystical characters. Singular and incredible as it would appear to one unacquainted with the history of this strange people, Smith succeeded in establishing a creed and forming a sect. The first congregation of Mormons was established at Kirtland, Ohio. From this place they were expelled, and we next find them in Missouri. A similar experience awaited them in that State, and in the year 1840 we find them settled in Nauvoo, Illinois. There they built a city and temple, and gathered together a numerous company of believers. While dwelling at Nauvoo the Mormons were assailed by the enraged multitude. Smith with others was killed while in jail, for several of them had been arrested and imprisoned. The increase of this sect may be attributed in a measure to persecution. It was while the Mormon sect was settled at Kirtland, Ohio, that Brigham Young united with them. He soon became very prominent among them. At their expulsion from Nauvoo, Young at once became their real leader, and under his guidance and direction they traversed the plains of the far West, and formed a settlement in what is now called the Territory of Utah. Here they built a city, and here they continue to dwell under the name and title of the Latter-Day Saints. The creed of this sect is subject to change according as new revelations are made to the Church. The officers of the Church consist of the presidency of three, the apostles, the seventies, the elders and high priest, the Aaronic priesthood, including bishop, priest, preacher and deacon.

"THE HISTORY OF THE JEWS," says one, "properly commences with the call of Abraham. All anterior to this in the Mosaic records is the history of mankind." As a people they are the most remarkable of all the nations of the earth. They are the descendants of Abraham, who was the son of Terah. We read that "the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing. So Abram departed as the Lord had spoken unto him, and he came into the land of Canaan." Again, we read that the Lord appeared unto Abram and made a covenant with him, saying, "I am the Almighty God; walk before me and be thou perfect; and God talked with him, saying, As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram; but thy name shall be Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee." Abraham died at a good old age, leaving behind him several sons, one of whom, Isaac by name, was the child of promise. Isaac had two sons, Jacob and Esau. From Jacob, whose name was subsequently changed to Israel, the Israelites descended. Jacob had twelve sons, and from these the twelve tribes of the nation received their names. Joseph, one of the younger sons of Jacob, was by a mysterious providence sold into Egypt, and by the same providence rose to great distinction afterward. The meeting of Joseph with his brethren after years of separation was remarkable. A famine had visited the land of Egypt and extended to Canaan. Pressed by the famine, the sons of Jacob on several occasions went down into Egypt to buy corn. Joseph knew his brethren, though they knew not Joseph. It was on one of these occasions that Joseph made himself known to his brethren. This event resulted in the removal of the patriarch Jacob and his family into Egypt, and in the assignment to them of the land of Goshen. After the death of Joseph and Pharaoh the history of Israel becomes a strangely checkered one. As a people they grew rapidly, and were cruelly oppressed by their masters. It was in the midst of this oppression that they cried unto God, and God remembered his promise made unto Abraham, and heard their cry. He appointed Moses to be their leader, and at the end of 430 years, under Moses, their divinely-constituted guide, the hosts of Israel went out of the land of Egypt into the wilderness, and commenced their memorable journey to the Promised Land. The journey of Israel through the wilderness is a strange history and distinguished by a variety of providences. It is a scene of revolt, of dissatisfaction and of murmurings against the Most High, followed by many and severe visitations from God. At last, when forty long years had passed away, this wonderful people reached the Promised Land, the land promised by God to Abraham, the father of the faithful. There they settle and dwell under a form of government and laws diverse from all other governments known on the earth. Their history is still a checkered one. Their conflicts with the nations of the earth are severe and uncertain at times. But they rise to the rank of a great and powerful nation. They are subsequently overwhelmed and scattered, but afterward they rise again to a period of splendor, and are again overwhelmed and scattered over the whole face of the earth. The first king of Israel was Saul, who was succeeded by David, the sweet psalmist of Israel as he is called, under whose reign the nation rose to great splendor and power. David was succeeded by his son Solomon, the wise man. The reign of this king was peaceable, and distinguished for the building of the temple and its dedication to the worship of Almighty God. But in the reign of Rehoboam the nation was divided, ten tribes following Jeroboam, while the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin remained under Rehoboam. The kingdom of Israel was for many years governed by ungodly rulers, till at last under the reign of Hoshea it was overturned, and thus passed away the kingdom of Israel or the ten tribes. What has become of the ten tribes is still a mystery locked up in the bosom of Jehovah. The kingdom of Judah continued till under the reign of Zedekiah, its last king, Jerusalem was destroyed, the temple overthrown, and the people were carried captive to Babylon, where they remained for seventy years. They were afterward permitted by Cyrus to return to their native land and rebuild the temple; the walls were again rebuilt by Nehemiah. In the reign of Herod the Great, the sceptre being departed from Judah, Jesus Christ was born. Under Titus the temple was overthrown and the Holy City destroyed. From this period the Jews as a nation cease to exist. In the year 1694 the Jews first appeared in the United States. They settled at Newport, Rhode Island. In the year 1729 they made a second settlement in New York. Several other settlements were made at different times in the Southern States. They are now scattered all over the country to the number of several hundred thousand. Though a dispersed people, they still retain many of their ancient customs. Intermarrying with no other people, they preserve their race intact. The seventh day is still observed as a day of rest, sacred and holy, and devoted to the worship of Jehovah. The rite of circumcision, instituted in the days of the patriarch Abraham, is still observed, and takes place on the eighth day after birth. Their celebrated feasts are the feast of Tabernacles, the feast of Purim, the feast of the Passover and the feast of Pentecost. Thus this remarkable people still exist a living monument of the truth of God's word—scattered, it is true, over the whole earth, but preserving, nevertheless, their distinctive characteristics as a race. In their blindness they are still looking for the coming Messiah. They are celebrated for their benevolence and kindness toward their needy and destitute brethren. Among the criminals of our day very few Jews are to be detected. Wherever the Jews are to be found, there may be seen their institutions of charity and benevolence.

THE GNOSTICS.—When our Saviour appeared on the earth there were existing two systems of philosophy, called respectively the Grecian and the Oriental. The latter system pretended to teach "the way to the knowledge of the true God." It was a fruitful source of much harm and evil to the Christian Church, for among the followers of this philosophy are to be found the originators of those sects which for three hundred years disturbed the unity of the Church of Christ. Their great aim was to make the simple truths of the gospel accord with the principles of Oriental philosophy. It is true, these various sects agreed in many points. There were many facts on which all were united, such as the eternity of God, his goodness and his infinite wisdom, and the like. Prominent among these numerous sects were the Gnostics. They appeared in the first century, according to the opinion of some, while others maintain that they arose in the reign of Adrian. They were in expectation, moreover, of an ambassador from God, who, when he came, would impart to mortals the knowledge of the true God. The miracles of our Lord and his apostles attracted the attention of these men, and they at once concluded that our Lord was that long-expected Ambassador from God. Yet they denied his divinity, and as to his humanity, they rejected it, because they believed that everything material was from its very nature only evil. As Christ had no material body, according to their theory he could not suffer; hence they denied the doctrine that Christ suffered for man's sake. With regard to the Old Testament, they would not receive it as the inspired word of God. As these philosophers endeavored to accommodate the simple doctrines of the Christian religion to the tenets of their philosophy, it is easy to conceive that much harm must necessarily result from such a measure.

THE IRVINGITES.—These are the followers of the Rev. Edward Irving. Mr. Irving was born in the year 1792, and was educated at the University of Edinburgh. The Irvingites style themselves the Catholic Apostolic Church. The scene of Mr. Irving's ministerial labors was Glasgow. There he labored for a few years as assistant minister to the Rev. Dr. Chalmers. From Glasgow he was called to take charge of a church in the city of London. It was in the year 1822 that he commenced his labors in that great city. As a preacher he suddenly rose to great distinction in London, and by his burning eloquence he soon gathered around him a large and flourishing congregation of attentive hearers. He was somewhat enthusiastic in his temperament. Shortly after his residence in London his views of Christ were considerably modified from what they had been, for he declared that Christ "took upon him fallen and sinful flesh, with like appetites and desires as are found in us." This, in connection with other opinions promulgated by him from time to time, led to his arraignment and trial before the presbytery of Annan. This occurred in the year 1833. His trial resulted in his condemnation and deposition from the ministry of the Scottish Church. Notwithstanding the course pursued by the presbytery, a portion of his congregation still clung to him. His deposition from the ministry of the Scottish Church was followed by the establishment of the Irvingite Church. Not long after this Mr. Irving died, but his Church survived him and grew quite rapidly, for in the year 1835 we find that there were already in the city of London several congregations which professed to be followers of the Rev. Edward Irving. The sect continued to spread, and congregations were formed in different places. Numerous churches are now to be found in England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany and France. The doctrines of this Church are embraced in what are called the Apostles' Creed, the Nicene Creed and the Athanasian Creed. The ministry of the Irvingite Church, or the Catholic Apostolic Church as it is called, consists of apostles, prophets, evangelists and pastors. In England it embraces many who are found among the most cultivated, refined and wealthy of English society. It is a principle of this Church that each member should dedicate to religious purposes one-tenth of his or her income.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.—These Christians have often been associated with, or taken for, the Moravians; but they are not, for their origin is of modern date. They first appeared about the year 1760 or a little later. They are scattered all over this country, and are quite numerous as a body. In church government they resemble the Methodists.

UNITARIANS.—It was in the year 1815 that this sect of Christians assumed an independent organization. Its existence grew out of a controversy which took place in Boston about that time. The germ of Unitarian theology may be traced to the Pilgrim Fathers. The seeds of Unitarianism that were sown in New England soon germinated. The soil being congenial, the tree grew rapidly, spreading its branches everywhere throughout the New England States. As a sect it allows great latitude of opinion, so that at the present time the name by no means indicates the status of one's religious belief. At present there are at least three schools of theology, varying very much in their peculiar tenets of belief. The right of private judgment in all things, originally adopted by this sect, has been carried to the extreme, and has consequently led to unwholesome results. The principal doctrines of this sect are the following, viz.: It believes in the unity of God, who is infinite in his attributes, and is the only object worthy of man's worship and adoration. Accepting the words of the Saviour according to their literal interpretation, "My Father is greater than I," they regard Christ as a creature of God. Their views of the Saviour as to his nature and dignity are varied, some believing him to be a mere man whose example we are to follow, while others regard him as something more than man, declaring him to be the highest of created existences. The Unitarians deny the personality of the Holy Ghost, and consequently his office as a comforter. He is regarded simply as an influence going forth from God. The great doctrine of the vicarious atonement of Christ is rejected. This sect is confined principally to the New England States. As a denomination, it embraces much of the culture, enterprise, wealth and influence of New England. It numbers upward of three hundred societies, scattered over the country, but chiefly to be found in the Northern States.

UNIVERSALISTS.—This sect dates the commencement of its history from a sermon preached by John Murray on September 30, 1770, in New Jersey. The first society was organized at Gloucester, Mass., January 1, 1779. The faith of this body is embraced in what is called the Winchester Confession, set forth by the general convention in 1803. Originally it was maintained that all punishments inflicted on sinful men were confined to this life, but it is now admitted that the consequences of sin unrepented will follow man into the future world, and that man will only be saved from those consequences by a future compliance with the terms of salvation. They have some learned and able speakers, and are a large and influential body in the Eastern States, having a college and seminaries in Massachusetts.

WALDENSES.—This sect of Christians first appeared, according to the most reliable writers, near the middle of the twelfth century. The founder of this sect was Peter Waldus. Says a celebrated writer of ecclesiastical history: "Of all sects that arose in this century none was more famous or obtained a higher reputation for probity and innocence, even with its enemies, and none could count more disciples, than that which was called from its founder the Waldensians. Peter Waldus was a man of unblemished character, and celebrated for his humble, earnest piety. Obtaining a translation of the four Gospels, he immediately devoted himself to the study of this portion of God's word. It was by a diligent study of the word of God that his eyes were opened to a realization of the departure of the Church from the true faith as taught by the Saviour and his apostles, and the decay of piety in the hearts of the people He resolved, therefore, to assume the office and duties of a preacher, and gathering around him a few devout souls of like sentiment with himself, this little band of God-fearing people went forth to preach the gospel. The people of that age, struck with the earnest piety and devotion of these men, readily embraced their cause, and societies soon sprang up in different places. They were opposed by the bishops of the Church, but their opposition availed nothing. In a short time, comparatively speaking, the sect spread all over Europe. Converts were added daily to the Waldensian Church. No force which Rome could bring against this earnest and devout people could intimidate their zeal or extinguish the flame of piety which burned so ardently in their souls. For three centuries was this noble people cruelly persecuted by the merciless arm of Rome, but they clung tenaciously to the faith once delivered to the saints, and fearlessly bore the standard of the cross. The great aim of Peter and his associates was not the propagation of a new faith, but the reformation of the Church and the inculcation of true piety among the people. They denied the supremacy of the Roman pontiff, and asserted that the power of forgiving sins belonged to God only. They ignored the right of granting indulgences, and denied that prayers for the dead were of any avail. The Waldensian Church has its three orders of the ministry, bishops, presbyters and deacons. The spread of this Church was marvellous. Though proscribed by the Roman pontiffs from age to age, though hunted down by the bloodthirsty inquisitors, yet amidst all their persecutions they preserved their existence." We find the Waldensian Church in the year 1375 in the valleys of Piedmont. From the year 1655 to 1696 they were cruelly persecuted and nearly exterminated by the Roman pontiff. At this distant day, even, they have several congregations in Italy and other parts.

WINEBRENNERIANS.—The founder of this sect was the Rev. John Winebrenner, who was originally a minister of the German Reformed Church, and settled in the city of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. This Church was first established in 1830. They style themselves the Church of God. They believe in the doctrine of the Trinity—three Persons in one Godhead—and the great doctrine of the atonement. They administer baptism by immersion. In sentiment they are Arminian. One peculiar custom among them is the washing of the saints' feet. This sect is not numerous, being found chiefly in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana.

WYCKLIFFITES.—The followers of John Wycliffe, who was born in 1324 and died in 1384, in England. This was a numerous sect in this early stage of the Christian Church. Wyckliffe translated almost the entire Bible into the English language. His zeal and learning were instrumental in preparing the minds of the people for the great reformation.

SCIENCE AND REVELATION

OR,

THE TRIUMPH OF THE BIBLE OVER CRITICISM.

EVERY book should be judged by what it purports to be. It would be unfair to expect from it what it does not propose to give. According to this rule, a man has no right to look for instruction in natural things in the Bible, which claims to be a spiritual revelation. But, at the same time, as it professes to be an inspired document, and therefore to contain nothing but truth, it is just, we admit, to expect that any reference which it makes to natural things will be one which may be tested by all scientific discoveries, and which will prove to be thoroughly consistent with them. Now, what have been the results of the scientific tests which have been applied to the Bible? Simply this, that in all cases philosophy has proved herself the handmaid of the revelation which divulges secrets far beyond her gaze.

It is so in geology; for, to say nothing of the fact that this science is yet in its infancy, the alleged difficulty in reconciling its discoveries with the Mosaic Cosmogony is met (if it need be) by the fact that the first two verses of Genesis need not be regarded as connected with those that follow, and that whilst these two verses describe the first creation of matter, so far as anything to the contrary is stated, a million of ages may have elapsed between the first creation and God's formation of our globe. Nor is this a new theory of interpretation framed for an unexpected emergency, but one that was maintained by the immortal Chalmers and others long before any difficulty on the subject was supposed to exist.

It is so in astronomy; for though in darker days it was felt necessary by ecclesiastics to set themselves against the investigations of the heavenly bodies, yet neither then nor since has anything been developed in this direction that conflicts with the testimony of Him who sits enthroned "far above all heavens," who "calleth the stars by their names," and by the word of whose power "the worlds were made."

It is so in geography; for travelers who have visited the East, instead of finding anything in those countries at variance with the usages and customs and localities which the Bible describes, have declared that they found it, especially the New Testament, the best guide to Palestine, and that by its statements they were furnished with better directions than they derived from any other source. "As our knowledge of nature and her laws has increased," says Lieutenant Maury, in his late work on the "Physical Geography of the Sea," "so has our knowledge of many passages of the Bible been improved. The Bible called the earth 'the round world,' yet for ages it was the most damnable heresy for Christian men to say the world is round; and, finally, sailors circumnavigated the globe, and proved the Bible to be right, and saved Christian men of science from the stake. And as for the general system of atmospherical circulation which I have been so long endeavoring to describe, the Bible tells it all in a single sentence: 'The wind goeth toward the South and turneth about into the North, it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again to his circuits.'" Eccles. i. 6.

Equally marked is the triumph of the Bible in relation to various readings. English infidels of the last century raised a premature pæan over the discovery and publication of so many various readings. They imagined that the popular mind would be rudely and thoroughly shaken, that Christianity would be placed in imminent peril of extinction, and that the Church would be dispersed and ashamed at the sight of the tattered shreds of its Magna Charta. But the result has blasted all their hopes, and the oracles of God are found to be preserved in immaculate integrity. The storm which shakes the oak only loosens the earth around its roots, and its violence enables the tree to strike its fibres deeper into the soil.

The same thing is true in relation to antiquarian research. All its labors are but cumulative proofs of the divinity of the Bible, as ancient cities are disinterred and ancient coins discovered. The great blow that the infidel philosophers of Europe predicted would be given to revealed religion by disclosures from Chinese literature, proved to be nothing when a Christian missionary mastered that language, and produced a lexicon containing all its words. Equally fruitless was the hope that the mysterious zodiac in Egypt would throw the world's age far beyond the date of the Mosaic chronology. Reference might also be made to the statement of Sir H. Rawlinson in a lecture delivered by him under the auspices of the Directors of the Scriptural Museum, London, that "the cuneiform inscriptions, the key to deciphering which has only been discovered within the last twenty years, have brought to light a great variety of Assyrian and Babylonian historic records, running contemporaneously with Scripture narrative, and affording innumerable points of contact; and wherever such contact occurs, there is always found to be a coincidence between the two, showing incontestably the genuineness and authenticity of Scripture."

Thus is it true that the Bible has surmounted every trial. There gathers around it a dense "cloud of witnesses," from the ruins of Nineveh and the valley of the Nile; from the slabs and bas-reliefs of Sennacherib and the tombs and monuments of Pharaoh; from the rolls of Chaldee paraphrasts and Syrian versionists; from the cells and libraries of monastic scribes and the dry and dusty labors of scholars and antiquarians. The skepticism of history has been silenced by the vivid reproductions of the ancient and eastern world.

And so will it continue to be. The friends of revelation have nothing to fear from any discoveries that can be made in the heavens above, or the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth. Geology may dive and delve into our globe's deepest recesses, and astronomy may move along her star-paved way until we are dizzied at the story of her ascents; but they can bring back no report which will shake the pillars of the "sure word of prophecy." "Let science perfect yet more her telescopes, and make taller her observatories, and deeper her mines, and more searching her crucibles; let even a new Cuvier and another Newton arise to carry far higher, and to sink far deeper than it has ever yet been, the line of human research; and yet will not all this, even though the new masters of physical lore should blaspheme where the older teachers may have adored, bring God into contradiction with himself, or subvert the truth which he has given, or eclipse the light which shineth in this dark place." Still will it be true, however boldly it may be alleged that Jehovah's works conflict with his word, that the higher deductions of reason harmonize with moral truth; and soon in the blended radiance of science and the wonderful testimonies of the Lord, shall nothing be left for their mutual friends to deplore but the long want of that wise, confiding patience, and that candid forbearance, which would have hastened their union and added to their lustre.

The following interesting letter on the subject of Science and Revelation is from the pen of Lieutenant M. F. Maury, of the United States Navy, acknowledged on all sides as one of the most eminent scientific men living:

"OBSERVATORY, Washington, January 22, 1855.

"MY DEAR SIR: Your letter revived very pleasant remembrances. . . . . Your questions are themes. It would require volumes to contain the answers to them. You ask about the 'Harmony of Science and Revelation,' and wish to know if I find 'distinct traces in the Old Testament of scientific knowledge,' and 'in the Bible any knowledge of the winds and ocean currents.' Yes; knowledge the most correct and valuable.

"'Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?'

"It is a curious fact that the revelations of science have led astronomers of our own day to the discovery that the sun is not the dead centre of motion around which comets sweep and planets whirl; but that it, with its splendid retinue of worlds and satellites, is revolving through the realms of space, at the rate of millions of miles in a year, and in obedience to some influence situated precisely in the direction of the star Alcyon, one of the Pleiades. We do not know how far off in the immensities of space that centre of revolving cycles and epicycles may be; nor have our oldest observers or nicest instruments been able to tell us how far off in the skies that beautiful cluster of stars is hung, whose influences man can never bind. In this question alone, and the answer to it, are involved both the recognition and exposition of the whole theory of gravitation.

"Science taught that the world was round; but potentates pronounced the belief heretical, notwithstanding the Psalmist, while apostrophizing the works of creation in one of his sublime moods of inspiration, when prophets spake as they were moved, had called the world the 'round world,' and bade it to rejoice.

"You recollect when Galileo was in prison, a pump-maker came to him with his difficulties because his pump would not lift water higher than thirty-two feet. The old philosopher thought it was because the atmosphere would not press the water up any higher; but the hand of persecution was upon him, and he was afraid to say the air had weight. Now, had he looked to the science of the Bible, he would have discovered that the 'perfect' man of Uz, moved by revelation, had proclaimed the fact thousands of years before. 'He maketh the weight for the wind.' Job is very learned, and his speeches abound in scientific lore. The persecutors of the old astronomer would have been wiser, and far more just, had they paid more attention to this wonderful book, for there they would have learned that 'He stretcheth out the North over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.'

"Here is another proof that Job was familiar with the laws of gravitation, for he knew how the world was held in its place; and as for the 'empty place' in the sky, Sir John Herschel has been sounding the heavens with his powerful telescope, and gauging the stars, and where do you think he finds the most barren part—the empty place—of the sky? In the North, precisely where Job told Bildad, the Shuhite, the empty place was stretched out. It is there where comets most delight to roam, and hide themselves in emptiness.

"I pass by the history of creation as it is written on the tablet of the rock and in the Book of Revelation, because the question has been discussed so much and so often that you are no doubt familiar with the whole subject. In both, the order of creation is the same: first the plants to afford sustenance, and then the animals, the chief point of apparent difference being as to the duration of the period between the 'evening and morning.' 'A thousand years are as one day;' and the Mosaic account affords evidences itself that the term day, as there used, is not that which comprehends our twenty-four hours. It was a day that had its evening and morning before the sun was made.

"I will, however, before proceeding further, ask pardon for mentioning a rule of conduct which I have adopted, in order to make progress with these physical researches which have occupied so much of my time and many of my thoughts, and that rule is never to forget who is the Author of the great volume which nature spreads out before us, and always to remember that the same Being is also the author of the book which Revelation holds up to us; and though the two works are entirely different, their records are equally true; and when they bear upon the same point, as now and then they do, it is as impossible that they should contradict each other as it is that either should contradict itself. If the two cannot be reconciled, the fault is ours, and is because, in our blindness and weakness, we have not been able to interpret aright either the one or the other, or both.

"Solomon, in a single verse, describes the circulation of the atmosphere as actual observation is now showing it to be. That it has its laws, and is as obedient to order as the heavenly host in their movements, we infer from the fact announced by him, and which contains the essence of volumes by other men, 'All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again.'

"To investigate the laws which govern the winds and rule the sea is one of the most profitable and beautiful occupations that a man, an improving, progressive man, can have. Decked with stars as the sky is, the field of astronomy affords no subjects of contemplation more ennobling, more sublime or more profitable than those which we may find in the air and the sea.

"When we regard them from certain points of view, they present the appearance of wayward things, obedient to no law, but fickle in their movements, and subject only to chance.

"Yet when we go as truth-loving, knowledge-seeking explorers, and knock at their secret chambers, and devoutly ask what are the laws which govern them, we are taught, in terms the most impressive, that when the morning stars sang together, the waves also lifted up their voice, and the winds, too, joined in the almighty anthem. And as discovery advances, we find the marks of order in the sea and in the air, that is in tune with the music of the spheres, and the conviction is forced upon us that the laws of all are nothing else but perfect harmony."

TESTIMONY FOR THE BIBLE.

A SOCIETY of gentlemen in England, most of whom had enjoyed a liberal education, and were persons of polished manners, but who had unhappily imbibed infidel principles, used to assemble at each other's houses for the purpose of ridiculing the Scriptures and hardening one another in their unbelief. At last they unanimously formed a resolution solemnly to burn the Bible, so that they might no more be troubled with a book which was so hostile to their principles and disquieting to their consciences. The day fixed for the purpose at length arrived. A large fire was prepared, a Bible was laid on the table, and a flowing bowl ready to drink its dirge. For the execution of their plans they fixed upon a young gentleman of high birth, brilliant vivacity and elegance of manners. He undertook the task. After a few enlivening glasses, amidst the applause of his jovial compeers, he approached the table, took up the Bible, and was walking leisurely forward to push it into the fire, when, happening to give it a look, all at once he was seized with a trembling, paleness overspread his countenance, and he seemed convulsed. He returned to the table, and laying down the Bible said, with a strong asseveration, "We will not burn that book till we get a better." Soon after this, the same gay, lively young gentleman died, and on his death-bed was led to true repentance, deriving unshaken hopes of forgiveness and of future blessedness from that book he was once going to burn. He found it, indeed, the best book, not only for a living but a dying hour.

Colonel Allen, a celebrated infidel of this country, was one day summoned from his library to the chamber of a sick daughter, whom her pious mother had instructed in the principles of Christianity, and who, by an unexpected turn in her disease, was about to breathe her last. As soon as he appeared at her bed-side, she said to him, "Father, I am about to die. Shall I believe in the principles which you have recommended, or shall I believe in what my mother has taught me?" He became extremely agitated, his lip quivered, his whole frame shook, and, after waiting a few moments, he replied, "Believe what your mother has taught you."

Lord Byron, in a letter to Mrs. Sheppard, said, "Indisputably, the firm believers in the Gospel have a great advantage over all others, for this simple reason: if it be true, they will have their reward hereafter, and if there be no hereafter, they can be but with the infidel in his eternal sleep, having had the assistance of an exalted hope through life, without subsequent disappointment, since (at the worst, for them) 'out of nothing, nothing can arise,' not even sorrow." The following lines, also, are said to have been found in his Bible:

"Within this awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries;
Oh, happiest they of human race
To whom our God has given grace
To hear, to read, to fear, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way!
But better had they ne'er been born
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

In Las Casas' journal this record is made concerning Bonaparte: "The emperor had ended the conversation on the subject of religion by desiring my son to bring him the New Testament, and taking it from the beginning he read as far as the conclusion of the speech of Jesus on the mountain. He expressed the highest admiration for the purity, the sublimity, the beauty of the morality it contains, and we all expressed the same feeling."

Lord Bolingbroke declared that "the Gospel is, in all cases, one continued lesson of the strictest morality, of justice, of benevolence, and of universal charity."

The testimony of Rousseau was as follows: "This Divine Book, he only one which is indispensable to the Christian, need only to e read with reflection to inspire love for its author, and the most ardent desire to obey its precepts. Never did virtue speak so sweet a language; never was the most profound wisdom expressed with so much energy and simplicity. No one can arise from its perusal without feeling himself better than he was before." He also said, speaking of the Bible and of the character of Christ, "Is it possible that a book at once so simple and sublime should be merely the work of man? Is it possible that the sacred personage whose history it contains should himself be a mere man? Do we find that he assumed the tone of an enthusiast or ambitious sectary? What sweetness, what purity in his manners! What an affecting gracefulness in his delivery! What sublimity in his maxims! What profound wisdom in his discourses! What presence of mind, what sublimity, what truth in his replies! How great the command over his passions! Where is the man, where is the philosopher, who could so live and so die, without weakness and without ostentation? When Plato described his imaginary good man, loaded with all the shame of guilt, yet meriting the highest, rewards of virtue, he described exactly the character of Jesus Christ; the resemblance was so striking that all the Fathers perceived it." Yet this was the strange and unhappy man who, through the wickedness and pride of his heart, declared, "I cannot believe the Gospel."

"I believe that the Word of God, whereby his will is revealed, continued in revelation and tradition with Moses, and that the Scriptures were from Moses' time to the time of the apostles and evangelists, in whose ages, after the coming of the Holy Ghost, the book of Scripture was shut and closed, so as not to receive any new addition, and that the church hath no power after the Scriptures to teach and command anything contrary to the written Word."—Bacon.

"God having to this end ordained his Gospel to be the revelation of his power and wisdom in Christ Jesus. And this is one depth of his wisdom, that he could so plainly reveal so great a measure of it to the gross, distorted apprehension of decayed mankind. Let others, therefore, dread and shun the Scriptures for their darkness; I shall wish I may deserve to be reckoned among those who admire and dwell upon them for their clearness."—John Milton.

"I do declare to the whole world that we believe the Scriptures to contain a declaration of the mind and will of God in and to those ages in which they were written, being given forth by the Holy Ghost, moving in the hearts of holy men of God; that they ought also to be read, believed and fulfilled in our day, being useful for reproof and instruction, that the man of God may be perfect.

"They are a declaration and testimony of heavenly things, but not the heavenly things themselves; and as such, we carry an high respect unto them. We accept them as the words of God himself and by the assistance of his Spirit, they are read with great instruction and comfort."—William Penn.

It is related of a deist who had publicly labored to disprove Christianity, and to bring the Scriptures into contempt as a forgery, that he was afterward found instructing his child from the New Testament. When taxed with the flagrant inconsistency, his only reply was, that it was necessary to teach the child morality, and that nowhere was there to be found such morality as in the Bible. In referring to this case, a distinguished divine has uttered the following just and truthful sentiments: "We thank the deist for the confession. However we may scorn a man who could be guilty of so foul a dishonesty, seeking to sweep from the earth a volume to which, all the while, himself recurred for the principles of education, we thank him for his testimony that the morality of Scripture is a morality nowhere else to be found, so that, if there were no Bible, there would be comparatively no source of instruction in duties and virtues whose neglect and decline would dislocate the happiness of human society."

"The deist was right. Deny or try to disprove the Divine origin of Scripture, nevertheless you must keep the volume as a kind of text-book of morality, if, indeed, you would not wish the banishment from our homes of all that is lovely and sacred, and the breaking up, through the lawlessness of ungoverned passions, of the quiet and the beauty which are yet round our families."

Sir William Jones's opinion of the Bible was written on the last leaf of one belonging to him, in these strong terms: "I have regularly and attentively read these Holy Scriptures, and am of opinion that this volume, independently of its Divine origin, contains more sublimity and beauty, more pure morality, more important history and finer strains of poetry and eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may have been composed."

The Hon. Robert Boyle is another instance. His whole life and fortune were spent in illustrating the beauties of the two grand volumes of Creation and Revelation. He has said everything in favor of the Bible that language admits of. He called it "that matchless book," and has written a whole volume to illustrate its beauties.

The celebrated John Locke has said: "The morality of the Gospel doth so far excel that of all other books that, to give a man full knowledge of true morality, I would send him to no other book than the New Testament." Being asked, a little before his dissolution, "What was the shortest and surest way for a young man to attain true knowledge of the Christian religion in the full and just extent of it?" he made this memorable reply: "Let him study the Holy Scriptures, especially the New Testament. Therein are contained the words of eternal life. It has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth, without any mixture of error, for its matter." During the last years of his life, Mr. Locke applied himself especially to the study of the Holy Scriptures.

Addison says, "After perusing the book of Psalms, let a judge of the beauties of poetry read a literal translation of Horace or Pindar, and he will find in these two last such an absurdity and confusion of style, with such a comparative poverty of imagination, as will make him sensible of the vast superiority of Scripture style."

The learned Salmasius, when on his death-bed, uttered this language: "Oh, I have lost a world of time! If one year more were to be added to my life, it should be spent in reading David's Psalms and Paul's Epistles."

A comparison of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah with the account given in the four Evangelists of the sufferings of Christ became the instrument of converting the witty but wicked Lord Rochester. He told Bishop Burnet that as he heard this prophecy read, and compared it with the record of our Saviour's passion, he felt an inward force upon him which did so enlighten his mind and convince him that he could resist it no longer, for the words had an authority which did shoot like rays or beams in his mind, so that he was not only convinced by the reasoning he had about it, which satisfied his understanding, but by a power which did so effectually constrain him that he ever afterward believed as firmly in his Saviour as if he had seen him in the clouds.

Amidst the great variety of books which Sir Isaac Newton had constantly before him, that which he studied with the greatest application was the Bible.

The famous Selden, one of the most eminent philosophers and learned men of his time, toward the end of his days declared to Archbishop Usher, "that notwithstanding he had been so laborious in inquiries and curious in his collections, and had possessed himself of a treasure of books and manuscripts upon all subjects, yet he could rest his soul on none save the Scriptures. The passage which gave him the most satisfaction was that contained in Titus ii. 11–14: "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

"Come, sit near me, let me lean on you," said Wilberforce to a friend a few minutes before his death. Afterward, putting his arms around that friend, he said, "God bless you, my dear friend!" He became agitated somewhat, and then ceased speaking. Presently, however, he said, "I must leave you, my friend. We shall walk no further through this world together, but I hope we shall meet in heaven. Let us talk of heaven. Do not weep for me, dear F——, do not weep, for I am very happy; but think of me and let the thought make you press forward. I never knew happiness till I found Christ as a Saviour. Read the Bible! Let no religious book take its place. Through all my perplexities and distresses I never read any other book, and I never knew the want of any other. It has been my hourly study, and all my knowledge of the doctrines, and all my acquaintance with the experience and realities of religion, have been derived from the Bible only. I think religious people do not read the Bible enough. Books about religion may be useful enough, but they will not do instead of the simple truth of the Bible."

Sir Walter Scott, in his final sickness, said to Lockhart, his son-in-law, "Bring me a book." "What book?" said Lockhart. "Can you ask?" said the expiring genius. "There is but one—the Bible." "I chose the fourteenth chapter of St. John's gospel," says Mr. Lockhart. "He listened with mild devotion, and said, when I had done, 'Well, this is a great comfort. I have followed you distinctly, and I feel as if I were to be myself again.' But this hope was not realized. During his days of decline he was sometimes heard murmuring over snatches from Isaiah and the book of Job, and occasionally a Psalm in the old Scottish version."

In a letter of the celebrated Dr. Chalmers to an American friend, acknowledging the receipt of a highly-valued relic of Edwards, he alludes to the declaration of a countryman of ours on his death-bed. Being inquired of respecting his frame and feelings, he replied, "There is mercy with God in Christ Jesus our Lord." That person was Fisher Ames. Mr. Ames lamented the disuse of the Bible in the schools, and thus wrote on the subject: "Should not the Bible regain the place it once held as a school book? Its morals are pure, its examples captivating and noble. The reverence for the Sacred Book that is thus early impressed lasts long. If not impressed in infancy, it probably never takes firm hold of the mind. One consideration more is important. In no book is there so good English, so pure and so elegant, and by teaching all the same book they will speak alike, and the Bible will justly remain the standard of language as well as of faith."

To a writer in the "Christian Palladium," who in 1847 made a visit to the Hon. John Quincy Adams, that distinguished and venerable statesman said, "My practice, since I was thirty years of age, has been to read in the Bible the first thing I do every morning. This practice I have followed, with but few interruptions, for fifty years."

Similar testimony in the same direction was borne by him in a letter to his son, in 1811, in which he says: "I have for many years made it a practice to read through the Bible once every year. My custom is to read four or five chapters every morning, immediately after rising from my bed. It employs about an hour of my time, and seems to me the most suitable manner of beginning the day. In what light soever we regard the Bible, whether with reference to revelation, to history or to morality, it is an invaluable and inexhaustible mine of knowledge and virtue."

SCRIPTURE DIFFICULTIES.

LIKE all other ancient writings, the Holy Scriptures present many difficulties. Some of these are not easy of solution, while others may be satisfactorily explained. The existence of difficulties in such a book was to be expected, and therefore cannot be wondered at. It is a matter of astonishment, indeed, that there are not more found in it. This must be evident to any one on reflecting that "the books of Scripture were written by different persons, in almost every variety of circumstance; that they refer to people whose customs and habits were totally dissimilar to our own; that they narrate histories of which we possess no other authentic documents which might reflect light on some obscurity of expression or vagueness of description; that they were written in other languages than those in which we now possess them; and that, in addition to the mutability of language, there are the difficulties of translation out of one tongue into another."

The proper spirit in which to deal with these difficulties is, to remove them as far as practicable, and to cleave and submit to the truth, even when every cloud cannot be cleared away from it. We should imitate the example of the apostles, who, when some of the disciples were offended by what they called a "hard saying," so as to forsake Christ, silenced every objection with this: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we are sure that Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Whenever and wherever we see an error assaulting or overlying a truth, let us destroy the error and emancipate the truth; but when we see a truth seemingly in conflict with another truth, let us try to reconcile them, and show them thus reconciled to all.

DIFFICULT TEXTS EXPLAINED.

GENESIS i. 1. "In the beginning," etc. It is not said whether this "beginning" was the commencement of time, or far back of the creation of man, and long before the present geological period.

GENESIS i. 5. "And God called the light day," etc. Though the sun was not made until the fourth day, it is not true that there could be no day without the sun, as some have affirmed. By recent discoveries (or rather the recent revival of old ones) we are taught to believe that light does not consist in certain particles coming to us in a direct ray from the sun, or any other luminous body, but is a subtle fluid diffused through all space, and capable of being acted on in a thousand various ways. It is not said that the sun, as a body, was created on the fourth day, but only that it was then appointed for a special purpose.

GENESIS i. 26. "Let us make man in our own image," etc.—that is, naturally, in spirituality and immortality; morally, in "righteousness and true holiness," and politically, as having dominion over all the earth.

GENESIS ii. 3. "He had rested from all his works," etc. This refers to God's cessation from creating and making; and John v. 7 refers to the ceaseless workings of Providence.

GENESIS ii. 5. "And there was not a man to till the ground." This verse is not contradictory to chap. i. 27, where the creation of Adam had been already affirmed. The inspired historian first gives a general account of the whole creation, in six days, and then, carrying on his history, describes particularly the formation of Adam and Eve.

GENESIS iv. 6. "Cain went out from the presence of the Lord"—that is, went out from the place of worship and of Divine manifestation.

GENESIS iv. 7. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" etc. Sacrifices were of two sorts, eucharistical and expiatory: the former consisting of the fruits of the earth, the latter of a living animal, the life of which God would accept instead of that of the offender. Abel brought a sacrifice of atonement, acknowledging himself a sinner. Cain brought a sacrifice of thanksgiving, expecting to be accepted without repentance. God thus expostulates with Cain: "If thou wert so righteous as to need no atoning sacrifice, thou shouldst be accepted; as thou art not, sin will lie in the way till thou hast removed it by an atoning sacrifice of sin-offering.

GENESIS iv. 17. "And Cain knew his wife," etc. It is asserted that Adam "begat sons and daughters" (Gen. v. 4), meaning, doubtless, sons and daughters not named in any catalogue of his children. Nor did Cain sin by marrying his sister, as there was a necessity for such marriages at the time, and the law forbidding them had not been given.

GENESIS iv. 26. "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord." Men had begun to do so before. Dr. Boothroyd and others translate the passage, "Then began men to be called by the name of Jehovah."

GENESIS vi. 3. "My spirit shall not always strive with man." Not always plead with man on account of his errors, for he is flesh, yet his day shall be one hundred and twenty years.—DR. BOOTHROYD.

GENESIS vi. 6. "And it repented the Lord that he had made man," etc. God accommodates his language to our conceptions, that we may more easily apprehend his character and perfections. Here, the cause is put for the effect, by a well-known figure of speech, and the change of His mind signifies merely a change of dispensation. The repentance was only apparent.

GENESIS ix. 25. "And Noah said, Cursed be Canaan, a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren." Infidels cavil at this curse, because it falls on the descendants of the offender, Ham, the son of Noah. It may be replied, that the curse fell upon the offender in his own proper person. The vices of the Canaanites could not but be their plague, whatever had been the character of Ham. The wretched slavery of that people was not inflicted in consequence of their father's crime, but their slavery was foretold as a punishment on their ancestor. Had he been a good and righteous man, he might have been spared the foresight of so much misery.

GENESIS xxii. 2. "Take now thy son, thine only son," etc. God had no design to accept such a sacrifice; nothing more was intended than to make trial of the faith of the patriarch, and furnish a noble example of obedience to succeeding generations. But if Isaac had been slain, would any injustice have been done? Not surely to Isaac, whose life was forfeited by sin, like that of all other men, and might be taken from him in this way as well as by disease. It would have been painful to his father to be the agent, but the right of the Supreme Governor to prescribe any service to his subjects is indisputable, and in obeying him they can do no wrong.

GENESIS xii. 13. "Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister," etc. Abram, in this instance, evidently did wrong, but neither God nor the historian is responsible for the prevarication. It is merely recorded as a historical fact, without any approval or attempt at palliation. The same thing is true of the faults and sins which are recorded of Moses, David, Jonah, Elijah, Peter, etc. The registering of these things is proof of the stern fidelity of the sacred writers.

GENESIS xxxvi. 2–3, as compared with chap. xxvi. 34. In the East different names were often applied to one person. Esau had three wives, and each of them is spoken of under two names, making six names for them all.

GENESIS xlvi. 8–27. For the genealogical list of Jacob's family, here given, as consistent with itself, and reconcilable with Stephen's statement in Acts vii. 14, see a subsequent chapter.

EXODUS iv. 21. "I will harden Pharaoh's heart." Properly, I will permit Pharaoh's heart to be hardened. God did not actually interfere to strengthen and confirm the obstinacy of Pharaoh, but, moved by that obstinacy, He withdrew from him gradually all the restraints of His grace, and as these restraints were removed, the heart of the king was more and more hardened.

EXODUS vii. 11. "Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers," etc. It is not true, as has been alleged, that the magicians performed miracles as well as Moses. In every instance in which they attempted to compete with him they fell infinitely below him, and at last gave up the attempt, confessing that "the finger of God" was with him.

EXODUS xi. 2. "Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbor," etc. There is no evidence that the Israelites designed to deceive the Egyptians; everything in the narrative goes to show that the people expected to return, and were perfectly honest in thus dealing with their neighbors. The word borrowed is rendered ask in Psalm ii. 8.

EXODUS xx. 5. "Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children," etc. Apart from the teaching of the Bible, it is a fact which observation attests, that, in diseased constitutions, dishonored names, and broken fortunes, the physical consequences of the sins of parents are entailed upon their posterity.

EXODUS xxv. 8. "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among

Acts vii 48. "The Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands." The former text describes the majesty of God, the latter his grace. The one is his absolute dwelling, "light inaccessible and ful. of glory;" the other is his special and gracious presence: "wheresoever two or three are met together in my name, there am I in the midst."

Numbers xxii. 22. "And God's anger was kindled because he went." It is true that God told Balaam to go (v. 20), but as he was first positively forbidden to go, and, instead of obeying, yielded to temptation (v. 17), and persuaded Balak's messenger to remain all night (v. 19), and thus sinned, God gave him up to his own wicked heart, and that his punishment might be wrought upon him said, in answer to his solicitations, "Go."

Numbers xxv. 9. "And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand." Paul, in 1 Cor. x. 8, speaks of twenty-three thousand; but he refers only to those who "fell in one day," while the text includes all that died on that occasion, even those who were destroyed by the judges.

Deuteronomy x. 6. "There" (at Mosera) "Aaron died, and there he was buried." It is said, in Numbers, that Aaron died at Mount Hor. Mosera was the name of the district in which Hor is situated. Besides, the word there (scham) may be here used to designate the time of Aaron's death, and be translated then, or at that time, as it is in several other passages.

Deuteronomy xxxiv. "Death of Moses." There is reason to believe that this passage originally formed an introduction to the Book of Joshua, and became separated from it by the division of the books into chapters and verses, or at some earlier period.

Joshua x. 13. "And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies." The miracle here recorded was known to those of old who had no means of access to the Divine writings. We find the event mythologically related, and there is not one system of belief of which astronomical observations have formed a part in which this "long day" has not been noticed.

In the original, the phrase, "Sun, stand thou still," is, "Sun, be thou dumb (withhold thy influence) while over Gibeon, and thou, moon, over the valley of Ajalon." There are two reasons why Joshua called upon the "sun" to stand still, instead of giving the scientific command according to our ideas—"Earth, stand thou still." 1. The command was not addressed to the sun only, but to the sun and moon jointly. "Sun, stand thou still," or "withhold thine influence," would have the effect of restraining the operation both of earth and moon, and keeping them in their relative positions. 2. The command, as given, would be more intelligible to those to whom the words were addressed. As the Amorites were pre-eminently adorers of the heavenly bodies, it would tend to show them how great was the power of the true God against those very beings whom they worshiped, if Joshua uttered his command, as he did, to the objects of their idolatry. So, likewise, the suspension of a general planetary law would plainly affect the moon as well as the sun, and thus would it appear as though Joshua had been well acquainted with this fact.

The phrase, "Sun, stand thou still," does not necessarily mean that its influence was suddenly withdrawn. All we are told is, that the sun "hasted not to go down for a whole day." The sun slackened its apparent motion, or we may say the earth slackened, at the Divine command, its actual motion, and thus, though there would be an apparent cessation of the motion of the sun, it would be but gradually stayed, and stayed only for such a period as, in the exercise of His wisdom, God thought fit to permit. But we must observe that the term "Be thou dumb," or "withhold thine influence," is one which is peculiarly applicable. It is a form of expression to be found not only in the Hebrew language but in other idioms; and we have an instance of this in one of the most sublime poets (Dante), who, whether he copied from the Divine writings, or whether it struck his own mind, speaks of the sun as being silent, when referring to those places where the light of the sun is not seen. If, then, we understand that the earth did stay its motion in obedience to the command, "Sun, stand thou still," or "withdraw thine influence," that that motion was gradually slackened for the period during which the miracle lasted, and that then it continued at the rate at which it had gone on before, we shall see an easy mode of understanding how the miracle was performed, and we shall see the entire applicability, both spiritually and philosophically, of the words which were spoken.

Judges xi. 30, 31. Jephthah's vow. Infidels have made this narrative a ground of railing against the Bible, and Scripture expositors have been greatly embarrassed with it. Some of the latter maintain that the fair victim of what they regard as a rash vow was actually put to death; others contend that she was only devoted to a life of pious celibacy. Both parties, however, have shown that there is here no room for infidel scoffs, since, if such an execution was perpetrated, it was done in flagrant violation of the Divine precepts (Lev. xviii. 21; ch. xx. 2–5; Deut. xii. 29, 30, 31), and only proved that this judge of Israel was extremely ignorant of the Mosaic law; and if he only devoted her to the service of the tabernacle, he still displayed a want of knowledge of the Levitical code, in supposing that he "could not go back" from his vow, there being an express provision that such vows might be commuted. (Lev. xxvii. 1–8.)

That there was no real sacrifice in the case, the following considerations have been adduced to show. How such a sacrifice could be lawful cannot be discerned, as the high priest himself could not offer what he pleased for sacrifice, if it were not of that kind which God had appointed. If Jephthah was stained with the blood of his child, it is not conceivable that his name would have been enrolled in the New Testament among the illustrious examples of faith and piety. Jephthah in his negotiations with the king of the Ammonites showed himself a man of justice and humanity, soundness of mind, strength of understanding and of argumentation, and accurate acquaintance with the laws and records of his nation. The last words of his vow in the Hebrew will fairly admit of this rendering—"Shall surely be consecrated to the Lord, or I will offer it a burnt-offering." In making his vow, may he not be supposed to have imagined that, on his return, he might meet his flock of sheep or herd of goats, and that in this case his purpose was to offer a hecatomb of these animals as a grateful oblation to God, but that meeting his own daughter, and instantly remembering that the performance of his vow in causing her to spend her days in God's service, and exempt from the duties of a wife and mother, would dash his hope of posterity, this thought occasioned the mental disturbance expressed by rending his clothes? Can it be imagined that the daughter, if she knew she was to be laid upon a flaming altar, would have coolly asked for two months merely to bewail her virginity? If Jephthah could allow her two months, why not twenty years? If, when she returned to her father at the set time, and he sacrificed her, would the historian have gravely added, "And she knew no man"? Does not this clause show that the vow had its fulfillment in her continuing to the end of her days in celibacy? Would the virgins of Israel have gone to Jephthah's daughter to "comfort her four days in a year," if she had been numbered with the dead?

1 Samuel xxviii. 7–25. Saul and the witch of Endor. Henry thinks that the fallen angels might attend upon the call of a sorceress, and therefore takes it for granted that an evil demon, raised by the arts of witchcraft, assumed the shape of Samuel, and, personating the prophet, answered the inquiries of Saul. The profound silence of Scripture with respect to the manner of operation in effecting this should teach us "not to covet to know these depths of Satan, or the solution of such mysteries of iniquity." Some commentators consider the apparition of Samuel to Saul as a real miracle, produced not by the arts of sorcery but by the finger of God. Modern expositors have supposed that as God overruled Balaam when seeking for enchantments, and compelled him to utter a true prophecy, and as he sent a messenger of death to Ahaziah at the time when that prince was sending to inquire of Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron, so at the instant when Saul was appealing to a witch, the true Samuel was made to appear for his greater terror and punishment, by confirming the immediate execution of the sentence before passed upon him.

2 Kings xx. 11. The sun-dial of Ahaz. This miracle appears, at least in one point, to be even greater than that of Joshua, for whereas Joshua only commanded the sun to stand still while the armies of the Lord fought against their adversaries, it would seem in this case as though the work of creation had been, so to speak, undone, as though the earth had been turned back upon her axis, in order to testify the Lord's favor toward one of his servants, so that the miracle appears to be greater in itself, and more wonderful in proportion to the less amount of cause for its exhibition. "As the miracle," says one, "specifies a particular sun-dial, and claims no other object than the satisfaction of Hezekiah's mind by giving him 'a sign,' it may be held more in accordance with the importance of the case that the miracle should have been wrought upon the sun-dial, and not upon the sun.' Be this as it may (though we do not admit the view), it is not necessary, for the understanding of the text, to suppose that either the sun or the earth changed its course ten degrees, or even one degree. The intervention of a light mass of vapor between the dial and the sun would have refracted his beams sufficiently to bring back the shadow of the style ten degrees, measuring perhaps ten minutes, or even less.

Psalms cxl. 10; cxxix. 6; cxliii. 12; lviii.; lix. Instances of what are called IMPRECATIONS in Scripture. Some of these expressions might be rendered, with equal correctness, predictions of what shall be. If we take the severest sense, we must remember that David wrote them, not as a private man venting his personal feelings, but as a judge pronouncing what God had authorized. Their crimes justly deserved these penalties, and the psalmist, as the mouthpiece of God, faithfully pronounced them.

Psalm cx. 3. "From the womb of the morning thou hast the dew of thy youth." Thy progeny shall be numerous and beautiful as the dew-drops of the morning.

Psalm cxliv. 8. "A right hand of falsehood." The right hand was held up when taking an oath; this means they were given to false swearing.

Proverbs xxvi. 4, 5. "Answer not a fool. . . . Answer a fool." Contend with a fool, yet reprove a fool.

Ecclesiastes i. 9. "There is no new thing under the sun." No new expedient found to make men happy.

Ecclesiastes vii. 16. "Be not righteous overmuch." Understood, satirically, to mean, if you would pass current with the world, a little religion will go a great way, and please them better than much.

Ecclesiastes vii. 17. "Be not overmuch wicked." Satirically, because you will not be tolerated in society if you exceed certain excesses.

ISAIAH x. 27. "I will lay upon his shoulder the key of the house of David." A large key, carried on the shoulder, was an ensign of authority.

ISAIAH xliv. 20. "Is there not a lie in my right hand?" Have I not an idol (a lie) near me at all times?

ISAIAH xlv. 7. "I form the light and create darkness, I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things." The Lord sends wars, pestilence, calamities and other evils, as punishments for national sins; it is in this, and not the sense of an originator of evil, that he is said to create evil.

ISAIAH lxiii. 17. "O Lord, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our hearts from thy fear?" "Why dost thou suffer us to err from thy ways, to harden our hearts from fear of thee?"

JEREMIAH xx. 7. "O Lord, thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived." The passage alludes to the encouragement God gave the prophet to take office, and critics have rendered it, "Thou didst persuade me, and I was persuaded."

EZEKIEL xiv. 9. "I, the Lord, have deceived that prophet." I, Jehovah, have permitted that prophet to be deceived.

HOSEA i. 2. "Take unto thee a wife of whoredoms." Eminent critics consider this as spoken in parabolic terms, to show the Jews the abomination of their idolatries.

MATTHEW iii. 4. "Locusts and wild honey." A species of the grasshopper or locust, very common in the East, is still used there as an article of food, being dried, ground and made up into bread.

MATTHEW iv. 8. "All the kingdoms of the world." All the surrounding kingdoms, many of which could be seen from certain elevated spots in and about Judea.

MATTHEW x. 34. "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I come not to send peace, but a sword." This is not a contradiction of those passages that announce the Saviour as the Prince of Peace. The gospel may be the occasion of war, but in itself it is the cause of peace. Its holiness coming into collision with man's sins, its denunciations of iniquity falling on those that love it, its rebuke of the most plausible hypocrisy, and its recognition of the least heartfelt desire "to do justly and love mercy," its enshrining the least seed of truth, and its indifference to the largest husk of ceremony, are calculated as soon as introduced into a fallen world to rouse the resistance of wicked men. But such resistance is not the fruit of Christianity, but of corrupt human nature, hating and seeking to repel the approach of truth.

MATTHEW xii. 31. "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men." From the connection, it is generally inferred that the sin against the Holy Ghost was the ascribing the miracles of Christ to Satanic agency, which could only have been occasioned by a wilful and malignant opposition to Christ. When the same is manifested in opposing the revelation of the Holy Spirit against the clearest and strongest convictions of conscience, the result is the same. But as unpardonable sin hardens the heart, where there is a spirit of deep contrition for sin against God, this sin cannot have been committed, though there may have been near approaches to it. "It shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world nor that which is to come," is not to be understood of sin ever being forgiven in the next world, but is a strong expression for, it shall never be forgiven. There has been a greater variety of opinions in regard to the sin against the Holy Ghost than any other question within the range of theological discussion. Epiphanius believed it to be "vilifying the Holy Ghost;" Hillary, "the denial of God in Christ;" Cyril, "an unmeet expression of the Spirit;" Augustin, "final impenitence;" Ambrose, "the blasphemy of infidelity;" Lyra, "sinning maliciously against the truth;" Beza, "universal apostasy from God, by which the majesty of God is maliciously opposed;" Musculus, Bucer, Calvin, Piscator, "opposition to the Word of God, while convinced of its Divine authority;" Chrysostom, "blasphemy in the face of miracles."

MATTHEW xvi. 18. "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church." Certainly not upon the feeble Peter who denied his Master. Peter's name signified rock, and the words seem to mean, Thy name is rock, but upon another rock, upon myself, the sure foundation-stone, I will build my Church.

MATTHEW xvi. 19. "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. Keys signify authority, Isa. ix. 5; xxii. 22; Rev. iii. 7. The binding and loosing, as Lightfoot proves from Jewish writings, refers to instructions, doctrines, and not to persons, and the passage signifies the inspiration of the apostles to confirm or reject doctrines and customs as the Spirit should teach them.

MATTHEW xiii. 12. "Whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath." One special gift of God to his people is an earnest of others; so that he who has faith and grace shall receive further communications of knowledge, wisdom, holiness, and every blessing of salvation, till he has a great abundance, whereas he who has not faith and grace shall at last be deprived of all his other attainments and advantages in which he trusted and gloried.

He who hath considerable religious knowledge, and takes that care to improve it which men are observed to do with their wealth, will find it increase; while he who has but little, and manages it as the poor are often observed to do, will find it come to nothing. The little he had learned will slip out of his memory, he will be deprived of it, and in that sense it will be taken from him. God never intended that men should attain heavenly knowledge, any more than earthly, without labor, pains and attention.

MARK vi. 5. "He could there do no mighty work." Not that he had not power, for he did cure a few sick; but the unbelief of the people prevented them from applying to him. See Matt. xiii. 58.

LUKE xiv. 26. "If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother," etc. The word "hate" is used in Scripture comparatively with love. Thus, it is stated in Gen. xxix. 31, "When the Lord saw that Leah was hated;" but this is explained in the preceding verse (v. 30), "he loved Rachel more than Leah;" "hated," in verse 31, is the "less loved" in verse 30. So, "if any man hate not his father," etc., must mean, "If any man love his father above me, serve, or sacrifice, or suffer for an earthly relationship more than for me."

LUKE xvi. 9. "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness," etc. Mammon was the heathen god of plenty. Mammon here means money: make friendship by a benevolent use of this, especially among the household of faith.

LUKE xviii. 25. "For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye," etc. This proverbial expression will appear less strange if we consider that doors in the East, at least those of the enclosures about their houses, were very low, so made as some defence against the sudden incursions of the mounted Arabs of the desert. Through these their camels were made to enter, kneeling, with considerable difficulty. So that, to force a camel through a doorway as small as the eye of a needle came to be thought of.

JOHN i. 21. "Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No." John the Baptist was not literally the person of Elias, and it was proper for him to say he was not, in order to correct the false notions of the Jews on that subject. Had he answered in the affirmative, he would have confirmed them in a gross falsehood. Yet John the Baptist was that Elias of whom the prophet Malachi spoke (chap. iv. 5); that is, as Luke expresses it, "He came in the spirit and power of Elias" (chap. i. 17); and so was, as it were, another Elias.

JOHN v. 40. "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life;" also, Ezek. xviii. 31, "Why will ye die?" If it be asked, Why does not the Almighty do what he thus seems so much to desire? the answer is, God will not treat men as dead machines, or as irrational and irresponsible creatures. He will not drive men to heaven by force. He draws with cords of love, and with the bands of a man. He stands at the door of the human heart and knocks for admission. He will conciliate where he might coerce and command.

JOHN xix. 14. "And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour; and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your king!" Mark says Christ was crucified about the third hour. The word sixth, in the text, is thought by many eminent critics to be a mistake of some copyist, as a few old MSS. read third instead. Calvin, Grotius, and some others, think the two Evangelists adopted different modes of reckoning time, in one of which the day was divided into twelve hours, beginning at sunrise, and in the other of which it was divided into four parts, of three hours each, which would make the sixth and third coincide. Some think John followed a Romish custom of reckoning the hours from midnight.

JOHN xix. 34. "But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water." It appears that the spear went through the pericardium and pierced the heart, and that the water proceeded from the former, and the blood from the latter.

JOHN xx. 29. "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed;" also LUKE x. 23, "Blessed are the eyes which see the things which ye see." The former of these passages pronounces a blessing upon those who saw the fulfilment of what others have believed; the latter upon those who should believe the gospel on the ground of their testimony, without having witnessed the facts with their own eyes. There is no contradiction in these blessings, for there is a wide difference between requiring sight as the ground of faith, which Thomas did, and obtaining it as a completion of faith, which those who saw the coming and kingdom of the Messiah did. The one was a species of unbelief, the other was faith terminating in vision.

ACTS vii. 14. "Then sent Joseph and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls." For explanation of this verse see subsequent chapter.

ACTS xxii. 9. "And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid, but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me." ACTS ix. 7. "And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man." The statement in these two passages contains a variety, but no contrariety; the former observing that the men "heard a voice," the latter, that "they heard not the voice of him that spoke" to Saul. They heard a sound which terrified them, but did not understand the meaning, which Saul did. The one says that they "saw the light," the other that they "saw no man." In all this there is no inconsistency.

ROMANS v. 9. "Justified by Christ;" v. 1. "Justified by faith." JAMES ii. 24. "By works a man is justified." The contradiction here is only apparent, not real

We are justified by Christ, meritoriously; by faith, instrumentally; by works, declaratively. Christ's righteousness is the ground of our justification; faith is the medium or means by which that righteousness becomes ours, and a holy life is the visible evidence of our acceptance with God and title to happiness.

ROMANS vi. 17. "But God be thanked, ye were servants of sin." The original is often elliptical, and in such cases the deficiency should be supplied: "Though ye were the servants of sin," etc.

ROMANS viii. 19. "For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God:" generally understood to mean that the whole visible creation waits anxiously for the time when the sons of God shall be manifested, and the earth and its creatures be restored to the primitive state of their creation.

ROMANS ix. 3. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." It would be absurd to suppose that the apostle wished himself eternally cursed; but the language seems to intimate his willingness to die what was deemed an accursed death, such as Paul's Lord endured, so that he could be the means of saving his countrymen. Compare Gal. iii. 13.

ROMANS ix. 18. "Whom he will he hardeneth." He suffereth to be hardened.

ROMANS ix. 22. "What if God, willing to show his wrath," etc. He may show his wrath in punishing the guilty without any impeachment of his justice. "Vessels of wrath fitted for destruction." Not fitted by God, but by themselves, by their own sins. "Vessels of mercy:" made meet for heaven by Divine grace.

1 CORINTHIANS x. 33. "I please all men in all things." GALATIANS i. 10. "If I yet please men, I should not be the servant of Christ." The former is that sweet inoffensiveness of spirit which teaches us to lay aside all self-will and self-importance; that charity which "seeketh not her own," and "is not easily provoked." The latter spirit referred to is that sordid compliance with the corruptions of human nature of which flatterers and deceivers have always availed themselves, not for the glory of God or the good of men, but for the promotion of their own selfish designs.

1 CORINTHIANS xi. 27. "Guilty of the body and blood of the Lord." Liable to the punishment due to those who "dishonor the symbols of the Lord's body and blood."

1 CORINTHIANS xv. 29. "Baptized for the dead" means here, in the room of, filling up the places of the dead who have fallen by martyrdom, or otherwise died in the faith of the same Lord.

2 CORINTHIANS xii. 16. "Nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile." The apostle clearly uses the language or charge of an accuser. He does not confess the truth of the charge of craftiness, but concedes it so far only as to turn the point against his accuser.

HEBREWS vi. 46. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened," etc. Nothing is impossible with God; but God works by means, and the persons here alluded to are confirmed apostates, who, having abandoned for ever all the means of grace, have cut themselves off from all the hopes of glory.

HEBREWS vii. 3. "Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life." Melchisedec is here taken as a type of Christ, from certain peculiarities respecting him. He was "without recorded father, without recorded mother, without priestly pedigree," either by father or mother's side; nor have we any account of the beginning of his days, or of the end of his life and ministry.

HEBREWS xi. 33; xi. 39. "Who, through faith, obtained promises." "And these all received not the promise." The "promises" referred to are those which were fulfilled during the Old Testament dispensation. The "promise" mentioned was that of the coming of the Messiah, in the faith of which the fathers lived and died, but saw not its accomplishment.

HEBREWS xii. 17. "For he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." No place for repentance in his father's mind. Such as wilfully renounce Christianity will find no place for repentance in God, who has connected apostasy with ruin, though no true penitent ever sought mercy in vain.

JAMES ii. 10. "He that offendeth in one point is guilty of all." The Divine law in no respect and in no instance tolerates sin. The man who violates it in one particular shows that there is in him the spirit of disobedience. The angels sinned only once. It was by one offence that Adam incurred the penalty of death.

1 PETER iii. 19, 20. "He went and preached unto the spirits in prison." Not in prison in Noah's days, but shut up for their unbelief in the prison of darkness, when the apostle wrote about them.

1 JOHN v. 16. "There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it." The sin of malicious unbelief, showing itself by speaking evil of the miraculous works of the Spirit, as the Jews did, apostatizing from the truth, and final impenitence.

JUDE 9. "Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses." There are several conjectures respecting this passage, but that which seems most likely is, that Satan would fain have prevented the interment of the body of Moses, that its exposure might lead the Israelites to pay divine honors to it, from their strong propensity to idolatry.

REVELATION ii. 17. "To him that overcometh will I give a white stone," etc. It was a custom among the ancients to give their votes by white or black stones: with these they condemned the guilty, with these they acquitted the innocent. In allusion to this ancient custom, our Lord promises to give the spiritual conqueror the white stone of absolution or approbation; and inseparably connected with it a new name of dignity and honor, even that of a child of God and heir of glory, which is known only to himself, or the inhabitants of that world to which he shall be admitted and who have already received it.

SELAH.

THE translators of the Bible have left the Hebrew word Selah, which occurs so often in the Psalms, as they found it; and, of course, the English reader often asks his minister or some learned friend what it means. And they have often been obliged to confess ignorance, because it is a matter in regard to which the most learned have by no means been of one mind. The Targums and most of the Jewish commentators give to the word the meaning of eternally, for ever. Rabbi Kimchi regards it as a sign to elevate the voice. The authors of the Septuagint translation appear to have regarded it as a musical or rhythmical note. Herder regards it as indicating a change of tone. Matheson thinks it, as a musical note, equivalent, perhaps, to the word repeat. According to Luther and others, it means silence. Gesenius explains it to mean—"Let the instruments play and the singers stop." Woolsey regards it as equivalent to sursum corda—up, my soul! Sommer, after examining all the seventy-four passages in which the word occurs, recognizes in every case "an actual appeal or summons to Jehovah. They are calls for aid and prayers to be heard, expressed either with entire directness, or if not in the imperative, 'Hear, Jehovah!' or, 'Awake, Jehovah!' and the like, still earnest addresses to God that he would remember and hear," etc. The word itself he regards as indicating a blast of trumpets by the priests. Selah, itself, he thinks an abridged expression used for Higgaion Selah—Higgaion indicating the sound of the stringed instruments, and Selah the sonorous blast of trumpets.

The date of the beheading of Paul is placed in the 14th of Nero's reign. Dionysius, bishop of Corinth, A. D. 170, says that Peter and Paul went to Italy, preached together there, and suffered martyrdom about the same time. Caius of Rome, in the 2d century, names the grave of Peter on the Vatican, and of Paul on the Ostian Way; and others, as Eusebius, Tertullian, and Jerome, agree in this account. The locality around Paul's grave is now used as a cemetery for strangers who die in Rome.

The principle which harmonizes all the acts, and preaching, and letters of Paul, was a belief in Jesus as the Divine Spirit — a living Master, intimately related to every living soul, of whose Gospel he was the special Messenger. This purified his love of his own people, and opened his heart toward all mankind.

Ăar'on (mountaineer or enlightener). Son of Amram and Jochebed, and elder brother of Moses and Miriam (Num. xxvi. 59). Direct descendant of Levi by both parents. Called "the Levite" (Ex. iv. 14) when chosen as the "spokesman" of Moses. Married Elisheba, daughter of the prince of Judah, and had four sons, Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar (Ex. vi. 23). Eighty-three years old when introduced in the Bible. Mouthpiece and encourager of Moses before the Lord and the people of Israel, and in the Court of the Pharaoh (Ex. iv. 30; vii. 2). Miracle worker of the Exodus (Ex. vii. 19). Helped Hur to stay the weary hands of Moses in the battle with Amalek (Ex. xvii. 9–12). In a weak moment yielded to idolatry among his people, and incurred the wrath of Moses (Ex. xxxii). Consecrated to the priesthood by Moses. (Ex. xxix). Anointed and sanctified, with his sons, to minister in the priest's office (Ex. xl). Murmured against Moses at the instance of Miriam, but repented and joined Moses in prayer for Miriam's recovery (Num. xii). His authority in Israel vindicated by the miracle of the rod (Num. xvii). Died on Mt. Hor, at age of one hundred and twenty-three years, and was succeeded in the priesthood by his son Eleazar (Num. xx. 22–29). Office continued in his line till time of Eli. Restored to house of Eleazar by Solomon (1 K. ii. 27).

Aăr'on-ītes. Priests of the line of Aaron (1 Chr. xii. 27), of whom Jehoiada was "chief," or "leader," in the time of King Saul (1 Chr. xxvii. 5).

Ăb (father). 1. A syllable of frequent occurrence in the composition of Hebrew proper names, and signifies possession or endowment. Appears in Chaldaic form of Abba in N. T. (Mark xiv. 36; Rom. viii. 15; Gal. iv. 6). 2. Eleventh month of the Jewish civil, and fifth of the sacred, year; corresponding to parts of July and August. [MONTH.]

Ăb'ă-cŭc. 2 Esdr. i. 40. [HABAKKUK.]

Ă-băd'don (destroyer). King of the locusts, and angel of the bottomless pit. The Greek equivalent is Apollyon (Rev. ix. 11).

Ăb"ă-dī'as. 1 Esdr. viii. 35. [OBADIAH.]

Ă-băg'thà (God-given). One of the seven chamberlains in the court of King Ahasuerus (Esth. i. 10).

Ăb'ă-nà (stony). A river of Damascus, preferred by Naaman to the Jordan for healing purposes (2 K. v. 12). Believed to be identical with the present Barada, which rises in the Anti-Libanus range, twenty-three miles N. W. of Damascus, runs by several streams through the city, and thence across a plain into the "Meadow Lakes," where it is comparatively lost.

Ăb'arim, a mountain or range of the Jordan, facing Jericho. Its most elevated spot was "the Mount Nebo 'head' of 'the' Pisgah," from which Moses viewed the Promised Land. Mentioned in Num. xxvii. 12, xxxiii. 47, 48, and Deut. xxxii. 49.

Ab'ba. [Ab.]

Abĕd'negō (i. e. servant of Nego, or perhaps Nebo), the Chaldaean name given Azariah, one of the three friends of Daniel, miraculously saved from the fiery furnace (Dan. iii.).

Ā'bel, name of several places in Palestine, probably signifies a meadow. 1. A'bel-beth-ma'achah, a town of some importance (2 Sam. xx. 19), in the extreme north of Palestine. 2. A'bel-mizra'im, i. e. the mourning of Egypt, the name given by the Canaanites to the floor of Atad, at which Joseph, his brothers, and the Egyptians made their mourning for Jacob (Gen. i. 11). It was beyond (on the east side of) Jordan. 3. A'bel-shit'tim, on the low level of the Jordan valley. Here—their last resting-place before crossing the Jordan—Israel "pitched from Beth-jesimoth unto A. Shittim" (Num. xxxiii. 49). 4. A'bel-me'holah ("meadow of the dance"), in the north part of the Jordan valley (1 K. iv. 12). Here Elisha was found at his plough by Elijah returning up the valley from Horeb (1 K. xix. 16–19). 5. A'bel-ce'ramim, a place eastward of Jordan, beyond Aroer (Judg. xi. 33). 6. "The great 'Abel,' in the field of Joshua the Bethshemite" (1 Sam. vi. 18).

DEATH OF ABEL.

Ā'bel (i. e. breath, vapor, transitoriness), second son of Adam, murdered by Cain (Gen. iv. 1–16). Jehovah showed respect for Abel's offering, but not that of Cain, because (Heb. xi. 4), Abel "by faith offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain" Our Lord spoke of Abel as the first martyr (Matt. xxiii. 35); so the early church. The traditional site of his murder and his grave are pointed out near Damascus.

Ā'bī, mother of king Hezekiah (2 K. xviii. 2), written Abijah in 2 Chr. xxix. 1.

Abī'a, Abī'ah, or Abī'jah. 1. Second son of Samuel, whom together with his eldest son Joel he made Judge in Beersheba (1 Sam. viii. 2; 1 Chr. vii. 28). 2. Abijah, or Abijam, the son of Rehoboam (1 Chr. iii. 10; Matt. i. 7). 3. Mother of king Hezekiah. [Abi].

Abi'asăph (Ex. vi. 24), otherwise written Ebi'asaph (1 Chr. vi. 23, 37, ix. 19), the head of one of the families of the Korhites. Among the remarkable descendants of Abiasaph (1 Chr. vi. 33–37) were Samuel the prophet and Elkanah his father (1 Sam. i. 1), and Heman the singer.

Abi'athar, high-priest and fourth in descent from Eli, of the line of Ithamar, the younger son of Aaron. Abiathar was the only one of the sons of Ahimelech the high-priest who escaped the slaughter by Saul (1 Sam. xxii.).

ANCIENT ORIENTAL CART, NO. 2.

Abiathar having become high-priest fled to David (1 Sam. xxiii. 9, xxx. 7; 2 Sam. ii. 1, v. 19, &c.). He adhered to David in his wanderings; he was with him while he reigned in Hebron (2 Sam. ii. 1–3), the city of the house of Aaron (Josh. xxi. 10–13); he carried the ark before him when David brought it up to Jerusalem (1 Chr. xv. 11; 1 K. ii. 26); he continued faithful to him in Absalom's rebellion (2 Sam. xv. 24, 29, 35, 36, xvii. 15–17, xix. 11). When, however, Adonijah set himself up, Abiathar sided with him, while Zadok was on Solomon's side. For this Abiathar was deprived of the high-priesthood (1 K. ii. 27, 35), thus fulfilling the prophecy of 1 Sam. ii. 30.—Zadok was descended from Eleazar, the elder son of Aaron. He is first mentioned in 1 Chr. xii. 28.

Ā'bīb. [Months.]

Abī'el. 1. Father of Kish, and consequently grandfather of Saul (1 Sam. ix. 1), as well as of Abner, Saul's commander-in-chief (1 Sam. xiv. 51). 2. One of David's mighty men (1 Chr. xi. 32).

ANCIENT PLOUGH.

Abī-ē'zer. 1. Eldest son of Gilead, descendant of Manasseh and ancestor of the great judge Gideon.

Ab'igāil. 1. Beautiful wife of Nabal, a wealthy owner of goats and sheep in Carmel. When David's messengers were slighted by Nabal, Abigail supplied David and his followers with provisions, and succeeded in appeasing his anger. Ten days after Nabal died, and David sent for Abigail and made her his wife (1 Sam. xxv. 14, &c.). 2. A sister of David, married to Jether, the Ishmaelite, and mother, by him, of Amasa (1 Chr. ii. 17).

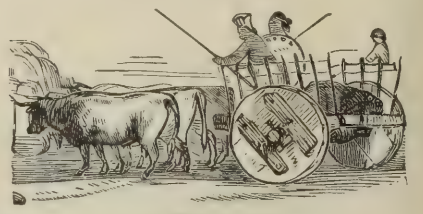
Ăb'ihāil. 1. Wife of Rehoboam, and a descendant of Elial, elder brother of David (2 Chr. xi. 18). 2. Father of Esther and uncle of Mordecai (2 Esth. ii. 15, ix. 29).

Abī'hu, the second son (Num. iii. 2) of Aaron by Elisheba (Ex. vi. 23). With his elder brother Nadab he was consumed by fire from heaven (Lev. x. 1, 2).

Abī'jah or Abī'jam. 1. Son and successor of Rehoboam on the throne of Judah (1 K. xiv. 31; 2 Chr. xii. 16). He began to reign B. C. 959, and reigned three years. 2. The second son of Samuel, called Abiah. 3. A descendant of Eleazar. To the course of Abijah or Abia belonged Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist (Luke i. 5).

Ăb'ilēhic (Luke iii. 1). A tetrarchy of which the city Abila was the capital. Traditions associating it with the death of Abel are in existence.

Abĭm'elĕch. The name of several Philistine kings. 1. A Philistine, king of Gerar (Gen. xx., xxi.). 2. Another king of Gerar in the time of Isaac (Gen. xxvi. 1, &c.). 3. Son of the Judge Gideon (Judg. viii. 31), who after his father's death murdered all his brethren, 70 in number, with the exception of Jotham, the youngest, who concealed himself; and he then persuaded the Shechemites to elect him king. When Jotham heard that Abimelech was king, he addressed to the Shechemites his fable of the trees choosing a king (Judg. ix. 1). He stormed and took Thebez, but was struck on the head by a woman with the fragment of a millstone (comp. 2 Sam. xi. 21); and lest he should be said to have died by a woman, he bade his armor-bearer slay him. Thus God avenged the murder of his brethren, and fulfilled the curse of Jotham.



ANCIENT EGYPTIAN.

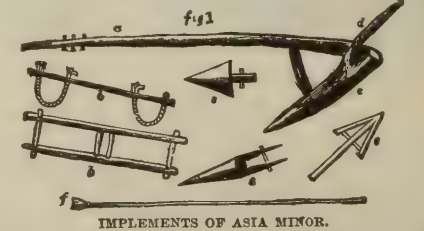
Ābĭn'adăb. 1. A Levite of Kirjath-jearim, in whose house the ark remained 20 years (1 Sam. vii. 1, 2; 1 Chr. xiii. 7). 2. Second son of Jesse (1 Sam. xvi. 8, xvii. 13). 3. A son of Saul, who was slain with his brothers at the fatal battle on Mount Gilboa (1 Sam. xxxi. 2).

Abĭnoăm, the father of Barak (Judg. iv. 6, 12, v. 1, 12).

Abī'ram. 1. A Reubenite, son of Eliab, who with Dathan and On organized a conspiracy against Moses and Aaron (Num. xvi.).

Ăb'ishăg, a beautiful Shunammite, taken into David's harem to comfort him in his extreme old age (1 K. i. 1–4). After David's death Adonijah induced Bathsheba to ask Solomon to give him Abishag in marriage; but this cost Adonijah his life (1 K. ii. 13, &c.). [Adonijah.]

ORIENTAL CART.

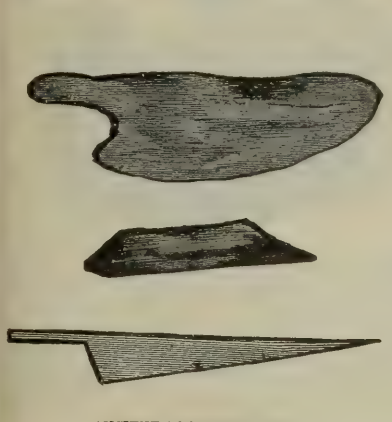


Abĭsha'ī, the eldest of the three sons of Zeruiah, David's sister, and brother to Joab and Asahel (1 Chr. ii. 16). He was the devoted follower of David. He commanded a third part of the army in the decisive battle against Absalom. He rescued David from the hands of a gigantic Philistine, Ishbi-benob (2 Sam. xxi. 17). His personal prowess won for him a place as captain of the second three of David's mighty men (2 Sam. xxiii. 18; 1 Chr. xi. 20).

TOMB OF ABSALOM.

Abĭsh'alŏm, father or grandfather of Maachah, wife of Rehoboam. He is called Absalom in 2 Chr. xi. 20, 21. This must be David's son.

Āb'ner. 1. Son of the brother of Kisch (1 Chr. ix. 36), the father of Saul. Saul made him commander-in-chief of his army (1 Sam. xiv. 51, xvii. 57, xxvi. 3–14). After the death of Saul David was proclaimed king of Judah in Hebron; and subsequently Abner proclaimed Ishbosheth, Saul's son, as king of Israel, at Mahanaim beyond Jordan. War soon broke out, when the army of Ishbosheth was defeated. Afterward through the ingratitude of his king Abner went over to David, and was treacherously murdered by Joab and Abishai, at the gate of Hebron. David was indignant, and showed every token of respect to Abner's memory (2 Sam. iii. 33, 34).



IMPLEMENTS OF ASIA MINOR.

Abomination of Desolation, mentioned by our Saviour as a sign of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, with reference to Dan. ix. 27, xi. 31, xii. 11. The prophecy referred to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and it appears most probable that the profanities of the Zealots constituted the abomination, which was the sign of impending ruin.

Ā'braham or A'bram, the son of Terah, and founder of the great Hebrew nation. His family, of the descendants of Shem, was settled in Ur of the Chaldees, beyond the Euphrates. Terah had two other sons, Nahor and Haran. Haran died before his father in Ur of the Chaldees, leaving a son, Lot; and Terah, taking with him Abram, and Sarai his wife, and his grandson Lot, emigrated to Haran in Mesopotamia, where he died.

ANCIENT PLOUGHSHARES.

DEFEAT OF ABSALOM.

On the death of his father, Abram, then in the 75th year of his age, with Sarai and Lot, pursued his course to the land of Canaan, whither he was directed by divine command (Gen. xii. 5). We have his subsequent history in Genesis, at length, from the pitching of his tent (Gen. xii. 16) beneath the terebinth of Moreh, until his death at the age of 175 years (Gen xxv. 7-10). Sarah died and was buried at Machpelah. By Keturah, he had six children. It is asserted that he was born about two years after the death of Noah, though nine generations are traced between them. Some chronologers place his birth 60 years earlier. The very many interesting events of his life are so familiar to the reader, or, at least, are so succinctly given in Genesis, that it seems almost purposeless to attempt an imperfect sketch of them in a condensed work like the one before us. We will therefore simply add that being the progenitor of all the Jews, and the most brilliant example of justifying faith, he was called the "Father of the faithful." His name of Abram, or "high father," was changed, with the promise, into Abraham, or "father of a multitude" (Gen. xvii. 4, 5).

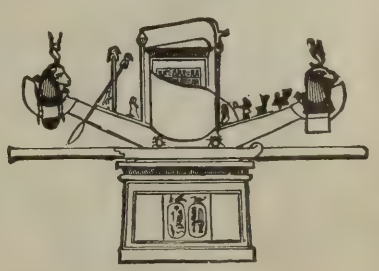
Ăb'salom. Third son of David by Maachah, daughter of Palmai, king of Gesher. Absalom's servants, by his order, murdered his half-brother Ammon, for violating his sister Tamar. He afterward rebelled against his father and took possession of Jerusalem, and the King's harem, David fleeing beyond the Jordan. He was subsequently defeated in the wood at Ephraim, where, becoming entangled in the branches of a terebinth by his long hair, and left suspended, his mule running away from him, he was slain by Joab. In the valley of Jehoshaphat is a monument bearing his name; but it bears evidence of later time.

Ăc'chō (the PTOLEMAIS of the Maccabees and N. T.), now called Acca, or more usually by Europeans, St. Jean d'Acre, the most important sea-port town on the Syrian coast, about 30 miles S. of Tyre. The only notice of it in the N. T. is in connection with St. Paul's passage from Tyre to Caesarea (Acts xxi. 7).



Acel'dama, "the field of blood;" the name given by the Jews of Jerusalem to a field near Jerusalem purchased with the money received for the betrayal of Christ. The "field of blood" is now shown on the steep southern face of the valley or ravine of Hinnom. It was believed in the middle ages that the soil of this place had the power of very rapidly consuming bodies buried in it.

JACOB'S WELL (one mile east of Shechem).

PLANTING AND SOWING.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN ARK.

Achā'ia, in the N. T. a Roman province. This, with Macedonia, comprehended the whole of Greece; hence Achaia and Macedonia are frequently mentioned together in the N. T. to indicate all Greece (Acts xviii. 12, xix. 21; Rom. xv. 26, xvi. 5; 1 Cor. xvi. 15, etc.).

Achā'icus, a name of a Christian (1 Cor. xvi. 17, subscription No. 25).

Ăc'han (troubler), an Israelite who, when Jericho and all that it contained was devoted to destruction, secreted a portion of the spoil in his tent. For this sin Jehovah punished Israel by their defeat in the attack upon Ai. When Achan confessed he was stoned to death with his family by the people in a valley between Ai and Jericho, and their remains, with his property, were burnt (Josh. vii. 16-22). From this the valley received its name.

Ā'chim, son of Sadoc, and father of Eliud, in our Lord's genealogy; the fifth in succession before Joseph, the husband of Mary (Matt. i. 14).

Ā'chish, a Philistine king of Gath, who in the title to the 34th Psalm is called Abimelech. David twice found a refuge with him from Saul. On the first occasion, being recognized, he feigned madness (1 Sam. xxi. 10-13). On a second occasion David fled to Achish with 600 men (1 Sam. xxvii. 2), and remained at Gath a year and four months.

A'chor, Valley of, "valley of trouble," the spot at which Achan, the "troubler of Israel," was stoned (Josh. vii. 24, 26).

Ăch'sah, daughter of Caleb. Her father promised her in marriage to whoever should take Debir. Othniel, her father's younger brother, took that city, and accordingly received the hand of Achsah. Caleb added to her dowry the upper and lower springs, which she had pleaded for (Josh. xv. 15-19; Judg. i. 11-15).

Acts of the Apostles, a second treatise by the author of the third Gospel, traditionally known as Luke. The identity of the writer of both books is shown by their great similarity in style and idiom, and the usage of particular words and compound forms. The book seems to cover a space of about thirty years. It seems most probable that the place of writing was Rome, and the time about two years from the date of St. Paul's arrival there, as related in ch. xxviii. 30. This would give us for the publication the year 63 A. D.

Ā'dah (ornament, beauty). 1. The first of the two wives of Lamech, by whom were born to him Jabal and Jubal (Gen. iv. 10). 2. One of the three wives of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 2, 10, 12, 16). In Gen. xxvi. 34, she is called BASHEMATH.

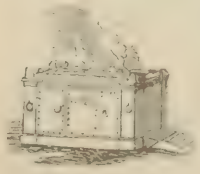
Ăd'ăm, the name given in Scripture to the first man. It apparently has reference to the ground from which he was formed, which is called in Hebrew Adamah. The creation of man was the work of the sixth day. By the subtlety of the serpent, the woman given to be with Adam was beguiled into a violation of the one command imposed upon them. She took of the fruit of the forbidden tree and gave it to her husband. Adam is stated to have lived 930 years. His sons mentioned in Scripture are Cain, Abel, and Seth; it is implied, however, that he had others.

Adamant, the translation of the Hebrew word Shamir in Ez. iii. 9, and Zech. vii. 12. In Jer.

xvii. 1 it is translated "diamond." As the Hebrews were apparently unacquainted with the true diamond, it is probably the Emery, a variety of Corundum, that is intended. It is inferior only to the diamond in hardness.

Adar. A Jewish month. [MONTHS.]

THE HUSBANDMAN.

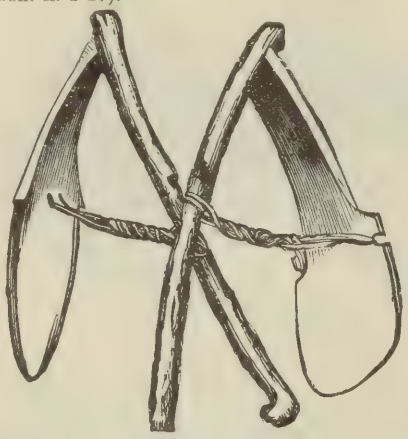


Ad'der. This word is used for any poisonous snake. It occurs five times in the text of the A. V., and three times in the margin as synonymous with cockatrice, viz. Is. xi. 8, xiv. 29, lix. 5. It represents four Hebrew words: 1. 'Acshub, found only in Ps. cxl. 3. 'Acshub may be represented by the Toxicoa of Egypt and North Africa. 2. Pethen. [ASP.] 3. Tsepha, or Tsiphoni. In Prov. xxiii. 32 translated adder, and in Is. xi. 8, xiv. 29, lix. 5, Jer. viii. 17 rendered cockatrice. 4. Shephiphon occurs only in Gen. xlix. 17, and we identify it with the celebrated horned viper, the asp of Cleopatra (Cerastes), which is found abundantly in the dry sandy deserts of Egypt, Syria, and Arabia. The Cerastes is extremely venomous.

PLOUGHING WITH OX AND ASS.

Adŏn'i-Bē'zek (lord of Bezek), king of Bezek, a city of the Canaanites. This chieftain was vanquished by the tribe of Judah (Judg. i. 3-7), who cut off his thumbs and great toes, and brought him prisoner to Jerusalem, where he died. He confessed that he inflicted the same cruelty upon 70 petty kings.

Adōni'jah (My Lord is Jehovah). 1. The fourth son of David by Haggith, born at Hebron (2 Sam. iii. 4). After the death of Amnon, Chileab, and Absalom, he became eldest son; and when his father's strength was declining, put forward his pretentions to the crown. Adonijah's cause was espoused by Abiathar and Joab. David gave orders that Solomon should be anointed and proclaimed king. Adonijah was pardoned on condition that he should "show himself a worthy man." The death of David quickly followed, and Adonijah begged Bathsheba to procure his marriage with Abishag, the wife of David in his old age (1 K. i. 3). This was regarded as a fresh attempt on the throne, and Solomon ordered him put to death by Benaiah.



BRAZEN ALTAR.

ADONIS.

Ădoni'ram (1 K. iv. 6), also ADORAM and HADORAM, chief receiver of the tribute during the reigns of David (2 Sam. xx. 24), Solomon (1 K. iv. 6), and Rehoboam (1 K. xii. 18). This last monarch sent him to the rebellious Israelites, by whom he was stoned to death.

Adŏn'i-zē'dek (lord of justice), Amorite king of Jerusalem who organized a league with four other princes against Joshua. The confederate kings having laid siege to Gibeon and Joshua put them to flight. The five kings took refuge in a cave at Mekkedah, whence they were taken and slain (Josh. x. 1-27).

EGYPTIAN HOES.

Adŏp'tion, an expression metaphorically used by St. Paul (Rom. viii. 15, 23; Gal. iv. 5; Eph. i. 5). He probably alludes to the Roman custom of adoption. The Jews themselves were unacquainted with the process of adoption; indeed it would have been inconsistent with the regulations of the Mosaic law affecting the inheritance of property.

Ăd'orā'tion. The acts and postures by which the Hebrews expressed adoration bear a great similarity to those still in use among Oriental nations. To rise up and suddenly prostrate the body was the most simple method; but, generally the prostration was more formal, the person falling upon the knee and then gradually inclining the body until the forehead touched the ground. Such prostration was usual in the worship of Jehovah (Gen. xvii. 3; Ps. xcv. 6).

Adrăm'melĕch. 1. The name of an idol introduced into Samaria from Sepharvaim (2 K. xvii. 31). He was worshipped with rites resembling those of Molech, children being burnt in his honor. 2. Son of the Asyrian king Sennacherib, who, together with his brother Sharezer, murdered their father in the temple of Nisroch at Nineveh.

Ăd'ramyt'tiŭm, a seaport in the province of Asia, in the district anciently called Aeolis, and also Mysia (Acts xvi. 7).

ADORATION.

Ā'dria, more properly ADRIAS (Acts xxvii. 27). A sea on the coast of Italy, now known as the Gulf of Venice. Paul suffered a great tempest here.

Ā'driel, son of Barzillai, to whom Saul gave his daughter Merab, previously promised to David (1 Sam. xviii. 19). His five sons were amongst the seven descendants of Saul whom David surrendered to the Gibeonites (2 Sam. xxi. 8).

ANCIENT MODE OF REAPING.

Adŭl'lam. Apocr. ODOLLAM, a city of Judah. Its limestone cliffs are pierced with extensive excavations, some one of which is doubtless the "cave of Adullam," the refuge of David (1 Sam. xxii. 1; 2 Sam. xxiii. 13; 1 Chr. xi. 15).

Adultery. The Mosaic penalty was that both the guilty parties should be stoned (Deut. xxii. 22-24). A bondwoman so offending was to be scourged, and the man was to make a trespass offering (Lev. xix. 20-22). At a later time the penalty of death was seldom or never inflicted. The famous trial by the waters of jealousy (Num. v. 11-29) was probably an ancient custom, paralleled by the "red water" in Western Africa.

Adŭm'mim, a rising ground or pass "over against Gilgal," and "on the south side of the 'torrent'" (Josh. xv. 7, xviii. 17), the position of the road leading up from Jericho and the Jordan valley to Jerusalem. The pass is still infested by robbers, as in the days of our Lord, of whose parable of the Good Samaritan this is the scene.

ANT-HILLS.

Aene'as, a paralytic at Lydda healed by St. Peter (Acts ix. 33, 34).

Ae'nŏn, a place "near to Salim," at which John baptized (John ii. 23). It was evidently west of the Jordan (comp. iii. 22, with 26, and with i. 28), and abounded in water.

Ag'ăbŭs, a Christian prophet in the apostolic age, mentioned in Acts xi. 28 and xxi. 10.

A'găg, possibly the title of the kings of Amalek, like Pharaoh of Egypt. One king of this name is mentioned in Num. xxiv. 7, and another in 1 Sam. xv. 8, 9, 20, 32.

Agate, the second stone in the third row of the high priest's breastplate. It is a silicious stone of the quartz family.

Age. The Jew was taught to consider old age a reward for piety, and a signal token of God's favor. In private life the aged were looked up to (Job xv. 10): the young were ordered to rise up in their presence (Lev. xix. 32): they allowed them to give their opinion first (Job. xxxii. 4): they were taught to regard gray hairs as a "crown of glory." In public affairs age carried weight with it.

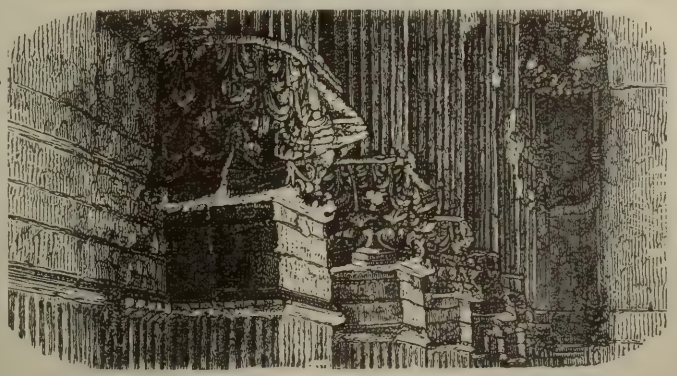
Ag'ricŭlt'ure. This was little cared for by the patriarchs. The pastoral life was the means of keeping the sacred race distinct from mixture especially whilst in Egypt. When, grown into a nation they conquered their future seats, agriculture supplied a similar check on the foreign intercourse and speedy demoralization, especially as regards idolatry, which commerce would have caused. Thus agriculture became the basis of the Mosaic commonwealth.

SOWING AND PLOUGHING.

Rain.—The abundance of water in Palestine, from natural sources, made it a contrast to rainless Egypt (Deut. viii. 7, xi. 8-12).

Crops.—The cereal crops of constant mention are wheat and barley, and more rarely rye and millet (?).

Ploughing and Sowing.—The plough was probably very light, one yoke of oxen usually sufficing to draw it. Mountains and steep places were hoed (Is. vii. 25). Sowing also took place without previous ploughing, the seed, as in the parable of the sower, being scattered broadcast, and ploughed in afterwards. The soil was then brushed over with a light harrow, often of thorn bushes. In highly irrigated spots the seed was trampled in by cattle (Is. xxxii. 20), as in Egypt by goats.



Reaping and Threshing.—The wheat, &c., were reaped by the sickle, or pulled up by the roots, and bound in sheaves. The sheaves or heaps were carted (Am. ii. 13) to the floor—a circular spot of hard ground. On these the oxen, &c., forbidden to be muzzled, (Deut. xxv. 4), trampled out the grain. At a later time the Jews used a threshing sledge called morag (Is. xli. 15; 2 Sam. xxiv. 22; 1 Chr. xxi. 23), probably resembling the noreg, still employed in Egypt. Lighter grains were beaten out with a stick (Is. xxviii. 27).

Winnowing.—The "shovel" and "fan" (Is. xxx. 24) indicate the process of winnowing. The "fan" (Matt. iii. 12) was perhaps a broad shovel which threw the grain up against the wind. The last process was the shaking in a sieve to separate dirt and refuse (Am. ix. 9).

Fields and floors were not commonly enclosed.

A MODERN CATHEDRAL AT ATHENS.

SCULPTURED COLUMNS FROM TADMOR.

Agrĭp'pa. [HEROD.]

A'gur, the son of Jakek, an unknown Hebrew sage, who uttered or collected the sayings of wisdom recorded in Prov. xxx.

A'hăb. 1. Son of Omri, seventh king of Israel, reigned B. C. 919–896. He married Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal king of Tyre; and in obedience to her wishes, caused a temple to be built to Baal in Samaria itself, and an oracular grove to be consecrated to Astarte. (See 1 K. xviii. 19.) How the worship of God was restored; how the priests of Baal were slain; how a famine reigned; how Naboth and his sons were put to death, and how Ahab was finally killed, are matters fully recorded in 1 Kings. 2. A lying prophet, who was burnt by Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. xxix. 21).

Ahasuē'rus. There were several kings of this name: 1. Astyages, the Mede (Dan. ix. 1); 2. Cambyses, king of Persia (Ezra iv. 6, 7); 3. Drius Hystaspes, the husband of Esther (Esth. i. 1), who died A. M. 3519.

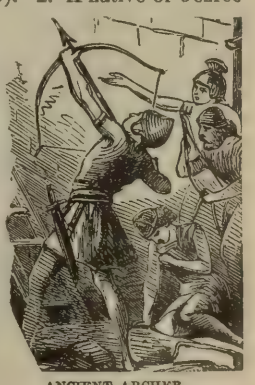
Ahā'va, a place (Ezr. viii. 15), or river (viii. 21), where Ezra collected his second expedition from Babylon to Jerusalem. Perhaps the modern Hit on the Euphrates.

A'hăz, eleventh king of Judah, son of Jotham, reigned 741–726. At the time of his accession, Rezin king of Damascus, and Pekah king of Israel, formed a league and proceeded to lay siege to Jerusalem. Upon this Isaiah hastened to give advice to Ahaz, and the allies failed in their attack (Is. vii. viii. ix.). Ahaz became tributary to Tiglath-pileser. He ventured to seek safety in heathen ceremonies. "The altars on the top (or roof) of the upper chamber of Ahaz" (2 K. xxiii. 12) were connected with the adoration of the stars.

A SLINGER.

Ahā'zi'ah. 1. Son of Ahab and Jezebel, eighth king of Israel, reigned B. C. 896–895. He was seriously injured by a fall through a lattice in his palace. 2. Fifth king of Judah, son of Jehoram and Athaliah (daughter of Ahab), and therefore nephew of the preceding Ahaziah, reigned one year B. C. 884.

Ahī'ah, or Ahī'jah. 1. Son of Ahitub, grandson of Phinehas, and great-grandson of Eli, succeeded his father as high-priest in the reign of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 3, 18).



Ahĭm'aăz, son of Zadok, the high-priest in David's reign, and celebrated for his swiftness of foot. During Absalom's rebellion he carried to David important intelligence. He was the first to bring to the king the news of Absalom's defeat.

ANNANIAS AND SAPPHIRA.

Ahĭm'elĕch, son of Ahitub (1 Sam. xxii. 11, 12), and high-priest at Nob. He gave David the shewbread and the sword of Goliath; and for so doing was put to death with his house by Saul's order. Abiathar alone escaped.

Ahĭn'oăm. 1. The daughter of Ahimaaz and wife of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 50). 2. A native of Jezree married to David during his wandering (1 Sam. xxv. 43). She lived with him and his other wife Abigail at the court of Achish (xxvii. 3). She is again named in 2 Sam. ii. 2, and was the mother of his eldest son Amnon (iii. 2).

ANCIENT ARCHER.

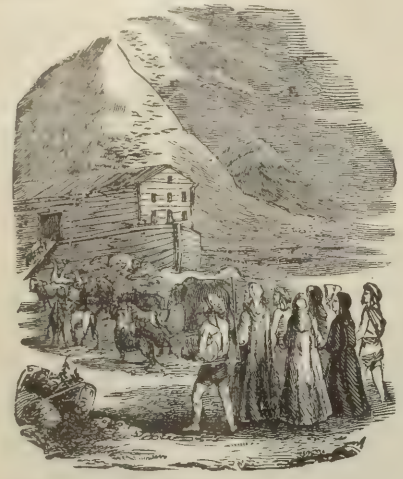
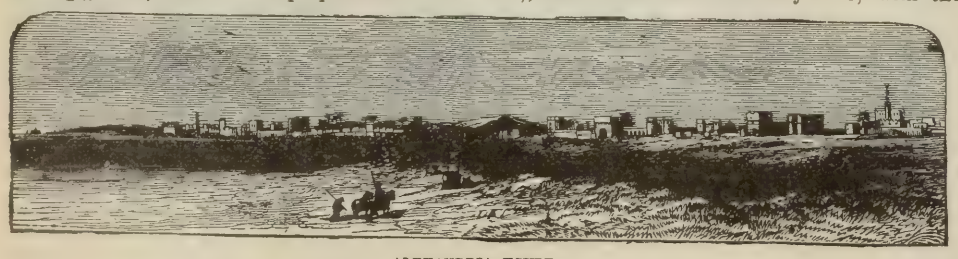
Ahĭth'ophĕl (brother of foolishness), a native of Giloh, was a privy councillor of David, whose wisdom was highly esteemed. He was the grandfather of Bathsheba. David's grief at his treachery found expression in the Messianic prophesies (Ps. xli. 9, lv. 12–14). Ahithophel persuaded Absalom to take possession of the royal harem (2 Sam. xvi. 21). David sent Hushai to Absalom. Ahithophel had recommended an immediate pursuit of David; but Hushai advised delay. When Ahithophel saw that Hushai's advice prevailed, returning to his own home he "put his household in order and hanged himself" (xvii. 1–23).



Aho'lah, and Aholi'bah, two symbolic names, representing Samaria and Judah (Ez. xxiii.).

Aho'liab, a Danite of great skill as a weaver and embroiderer (Ex. xxxv. 30–35).

Ai (heap of ruins). A city lying east of Bethel and "beside Bethaven" (Josh. vii. 2, viii. 9).



Alabaster occurs in the N. T. in Matt. xxvi. 7; Mark xiv. 3; Luke vii. 37. The ancients considered it the best material in which to preserve ointments. Mark xiv. 3 probably means breaking the seal.

Al'exan'der. 1. Son of Simon the Cyrenian (Mark xv. 21); 2. One of Anna's kindred; 3. A Jew put forward at Ephesus by his countrymen to plead (Acts xix. 33); 4. An Ephesian Christian reproved by Paul (1 Tim. i. 20), and perhaps the same with 5. Alexander the coppersmith (2 Tim. iv. 14).

NOAH'S ARK.

Alexan'dar III., king of Macedon, surnamed THE GREAT, the son of Philip and Olympias, was born at Pella, B. C. 356, and succeeded his father B. C. 336. In the year B. C. 323 he died in the midst of his gigantic plans. In the prophetic visions of Daniel the emblem by which Alexander is typified (a he goat) suggests the notions of strength and speed; and the universal extent (Dan. viii. 5).

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT.

Alexan'dria (3 Macc. iii. 1; Acts xviii. 24, vi. 9), the Hellenic, Roman, and Christian capital of Egypt, was founded by Alexander the Great, B. C. 332, who himself traced the ground-plan of the city. Its population was mixed from the first. Philo estimates the number of the Alexandrine Jews in his time at little less than 1,000,000. The Septuagint translation was made for their benefit. According to the common legend, St. Mark first "preached the Gospel in Egypt, and founded the first Church in Alexandria." At the beginning of the second century the number of Christians at Alexandria must have been very large.

ANCIENT WARFARE.

Algum or Almug Trees: 1 K. x. 11, 12; 2 Chr. ix. 10, 11. It is probable that this tree is the red sandal wood, which is a native of India and Ceylon. The wood is very heavy, hard, and fine grained, and of a beautiful garnet color.

Allelu'ia, so written in Rev. xix. 7, foll., or more properly HALLELUJAH, "praise ye Jehovah," as it is found in the margin of Ps. civ. 35, cv. 45, cvi., cxi. 1, cxii. 1, cxiii. 1 (comp. Ps. cxiii. 9, cxv. 18, cxvi. 19, cxvii. 2).

Almond-Tree (Gen. xliii. 11; Ex. xxv. 33, 34, xxxvii. 19, 20; Num. xvii. 8; Eccles. xii. 5; Jer. i. 11). It is a native of Asia and North Africa. The height is about 12 or 14 feet; the flowers pink; the leaves long, ovate, with a serrated margin, and an acute point. The covering of the fruit is downy and succulent, enclosing the hard shell which contains the kernel.

Aloes, Lign Aloes, a costly and sweet smelling wood mentioned in Num. xxiv. 6; Ps. xlv. 8; Prov. vii. 17; Cant. iv. 14; John xix. 39. It is quite possible that some kind of odoriferous cedar may be the tree denoted.

Al'pha, the first letter of the Greek alphabet, as Omega is the last. Both Greeks and Hebrews employed the letters of the alphabet as numerals.

Alphabet. [WRITING.]

Alphae'us, the father of James the Less (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13), and husband of that Mary who, with the mother of Jesus and others, was standing by the cross during the crucifixion (John xix. 25). In this latter place he is called Clopas (in the A. V. Cleophas).

Altar. The first altar referred to is in Gen. viii. 20. The law of Moses allowed altars to be made either of earth or unhewn stone (Ex. xx. 24, 25). After the construction of the tabernacle, two altars were made, one for sacrifices, the other for incense, and no others were lawful. The altar of burnt-offering, made by Solomon, was thirty feet square and fifteen feet high, and stood in the court. The altar of incense was a table about two feet square and four feet high, plated with gold, and stood in the Holy Place.

Am'alek, son of Eliphaz, grandson of Esau, and chieftain of Edom (Gen. xxxvi. 12, 16; 1 Chr. i. 36.)

Am'alekites. A nomadic tribe or nation, between the Red and Dead Seas. Saul over-ran their whole district and utterly ruined them (1 Sam. xv.). Subsequently a remnant was destroyed by the Semeonites, in the time of Hezekiah (1 Chr. iv.).

ASHDOD.

Am'asa. Son of Ithra or Jether, by Abigail, David's sister (2 Sam. xvii. 25). He joined Absalom and was appointed in the place of Joab, by whom he was totally defeated in the forest of Ephraim (2 Sam. xviii. 6). David forgave the treason of Amasa, and appointed him Joab's successor (xix. 13). Joab afterwards stabbed him with his sword (xx. 10).

SACRIFICE OF ABEL.

Amazi'ah. Son of Joash, and eighth king of Judah, reigned B. C. 837–809. In the 29th year of his reign he was murdered by conspirators at Lachish (2 Chr. xxv. 27).

Ambassador. The earliest examples of ambassadors occur in the cases of Edom, Moab, and the Amorites (Num. xx. 14, xxi. 21; Judg. xi. 17–19). They were usually men of high rank.

Amber (Heb. chashmal), Ez. i. 4, 27, viii. 2. It is usually supposed that the Hebrew word chashmal denotes a metal, and not the fossil resin called amber.

Amen, literally, "true;" "truth" (Is. lxv. 16). In the synagogues and private houses it was customary for those present to say "Amen" to the prayers offered, and the custom remained in the early Christian Church (Matt. vi. 13; 1 Cor. xiv. 16). And doxologies were appropriately concluded with "Amen" (Romans ix. 5, xl. 36, xx. 33, xvi. 27; 2 Cor. xiii. 13, &c.

THRESHING.

Ame'thyst. The third precious stone in the third row of the high priest's breastplate (Ex. xxviii. 19, xxix. 12). It occurs also in the N. T. (Rev. xxi. 20). A gem of a purple or violet color.

Am'monites, a people descended from Ben-Ammi, the son of Lot by his younger daughter (Gen. xix. 38; comp. Ps. lxxxiii. 7, 8), as Moab was by the elder. Unlike Moab, the precise position of the territory of the Ammonites is not ascertainable. The Ammonites were held in hatred by Israel. Their last appearances in the biblical narrative are in the books of Judith (v., vi., vii.) and of the Maccabees (1 Macc. v. 6, 30–43). The divinity of the tribe was Molech.

ROMAN BANNERS.

Am'non. Eldest son of David by Ahinoam the Jezreelitess. He dishonored his half-sister Tamar, and was in consequence murdered by her brother (2 Sam. xiii. 1-29).

Amorites One of the chief nations who possessed the land of Canaan before its conquest by the Israelites.

Ā'mos. A native of Tekoa in Judah, about six miles S. of Bethlehem, who was called by God's Spirit to be a prophet, although not trained in the prophetic schools (i. 1, vii. 14, 15). His date cannot be later than the 15th year of Uzziah's reign (B. C. 808). The Book of, is divided into denunciations of the sins of bordering nations, descriptions of the impending punishment of Israel, and the hope of the Messiah's kingdom. The peculiarity of style is in the many allusions to natural objects and agricultural occupations.

Ā'mŏz, father of the prophet Isaiah, and, according to tradition, brother of Amaziah king of Judah (2 K. xix. 2, 20, xx. 1, etc.).

Amphĭp'olis, a city of Macedonia, through which Paul and Silas passed from Philippi to Thessalonica (Acts xvii. 1). It was 33 Roman miles from Philippi.

Ananĭ'as. 1. A high-priest in Acts xxiii. 2–5, xxiv. 1. 2. A disciple at Jerusalem, husband of Sapphira (Acts v. 1–11). 3. A Jewish disciple at Damascus (Acts ix. 10–17), of high repute (Acts xxii. 12). Tradition makes him to have been afterwards bishop of Damascus, and to have died by martyrdom.

BEDOUIN ARAB.

Anăth'ēma, literally a thing suspended, the equivalent of the Hebrew signifying a thing or person devoted. The word anathema frequently occurs in St. Paul's writings, and is generally translated accursed.

He was of Bethsaida, and a disciple of John. He left his former master, and attached himself to our Lord. The apparent discrepancy in Matt. iv. 18 ff., Mark i. 16 ff., is no real one; St. John relating the first introduction to Jesus, the other Evangelists the formal call to his ministry. He is said to have been crucified in Achaia. Some ancient writers speak of an apocryphal Acts of Andrew.

CAPERNAUM, OR TELL HUM.

Anise. Matt. xxiii. 23. It is no matter of certainty whether the anise or the dill is intended; probably the latter.

Anklet. Anklets are referred to in Is. iii. 16, 18, 20. They were fastened to the ankle-band of each leg, were as common as bracelets and armlets, and made a pleasant tinkling as they knocked against each other.

An'nas, the son of one Seth, was appointed high priest in the year A. D. 7. In Luke iii. 2, Annas and Caiaphas are both called high-priests. Our Lord's first hearing (John xviii. 13) was before Annas, who then sent him bound to Caiaphas. He lived to old age, having had five sons high-priests.

Ant, mentioned twice in the O. T.: in Prov. vi. 6, xxx. 25. In the former the diligence of this insect is instanced; in the latter the wisdom. The ancient Greeks and Romans believed that the ant stored up food in summer for winter's consumption; but this is an error. The European species of ants are dormant in the winter, and require no food.

rect reference to the false Christs, whose coming, it had been foretold, should mark the last days. The allusion to Matt. xxiv. 24 was clearly in the mind of the Syriac translator, who rendered Antichrist by "the false Christ."

Antioch. 1. IN SYRIA. The capital of the Greek kings of Syria, and afterwards the residence of the Roman Governors of the province of Syria. No city, after Jerusalem, is so intimately connected with the apostolic church. Here the first Gentile church was founded (Acts xi. 20, 21); here the disciples of Jesus Christ were first called Christians (xi. 26). From Antioch St. Paul started on his missionary journeys. The city was founded in the year 300 B. C., by Seleucus Nicator. Jews were settled there from the first, and allowed political privileges. Antioch became a city of great extent and remarkable beauty. 2. IN PISIDIA (Acts xiii. 14, xiv. 19, 21; 2 Tim. iii. 11), on the borders of Phrygia. The History of the destruction of Bel and the Dragon; XII. The Prayer of Manasses, King of Judah; XIII. 1 Maccabees; XIV. 2 Maccabees. Apollos, a Jew from Alexandria, eloquent and mighty in the Scriptures; who (Acts xviii. 25) on his coming to Ephesus, A. D. 54, was more perfectly taught by Aquila and Priscilla. He preached the Gospel in Achaia and Corinth (Acts xviii. 27, xix. 1). He is mentioned in Tit. iii. 13. After this nothing is known of him.

Apollyon, or, as in the margin of Rev. ix. 11, "a destroyer," is the rendering of the Hebrew word ABADDON, "the angel of the bottomless pit."

Apostle (one sent forth, in the N. T., originally the official name of those Twelve of the disciples whom Jesus chose to send forth first to preach the Gospel; also used in a wider sense. (See 2 Cor. viii. 23; Phil. ii. 25.)

Lower down is Nachdjevan, where the patriarch is reputed to have been buried.

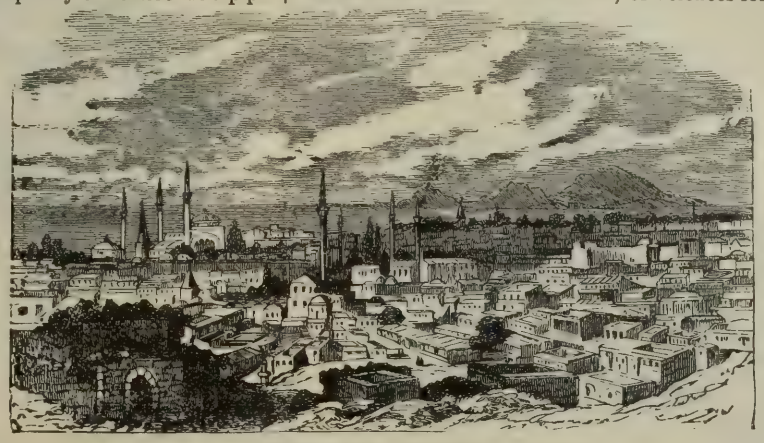
of Herod (B. C. 4) his kingdom was divided between his three sons, Herod Antipas, Archelaus, and Philip. Archelaus never properly bore the title of king (Matt. ii. 22), but only ethnarch. He was banished to Vienne in Gaul, where he died.



Archip'pus, a Christian teacher in Colossae (Col. iv. 17; Philem. 2), probably a member of Philemon's family.

Arctū'rus. The Hebrew words rendered "Arcturus" in Job ix. 9, xxxviii. 32, are believed to represent the constellation Ursa Major, known commonly as the Great Bear.

Arĕŏp'agŭs. [MARS' HILL.]

Are'tăs. 1. A contemporary of Antiochus Epiphanes (B. C. 170) and Jason (2 Macc. v. 8). 2. The Aretas alluded to by St. Paul (2 Cor. xi. 32) was father-in-law of Herod Antipas.

A'riel. A designation given by Isaiah to the city of Jerusalem (Is. xxix. 1, 2, 7). Its meaning is obscure. We must understand by it either "Lion of God, or "Hearth of God."

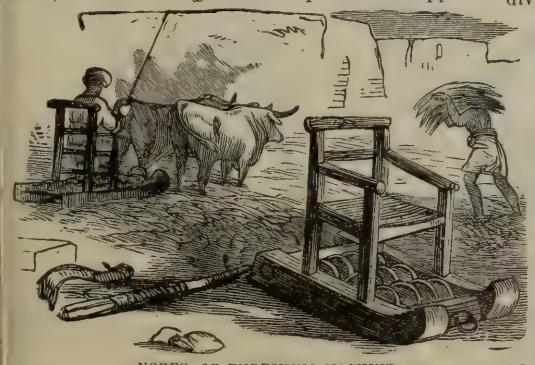
He was with the apostle on his return to Asia (Acts xx. 4); and again (xxvii. 2) on his voyage to Rome. We trace him as St. Paul's fellow-prisoner in Col. iv. 10, and Philem. 24. Tradition makes him bishop of Apamea.

Ăristobū'lus. 1. A Jewish priest (2 Macc. i. 10). 2. A resident at Rome, some of whose household are greeted in Rom. xvi. 10. Tradition makes him one of the 70 disciples.

Ark, Noah's. [NOAH.]



Ark of the Covenant. It appears to have been an oblong chest, 2½ cubits long by 1½ broad and deep. Within and without gold was overlaid on the wood, and on the upper side or lid, which was edged round about with gold, the mercy seat was placed. II. Its purpose or object was to contain inviolate the Divine autograph of the two tables. It was also probably a reliquary for the pot of manna and the rod of Aaron.

Ărmagĕd'don, "the hill, or city of Megiddo" (Rev. xvi. 16). The scene of the struggle of good and evil is suggested by that battle-field, the plain of Esdraelon, famous for the victories of Barak and of Gideon, and for the death of Saul and of Josiah.

Arme'nia occurs (2 K. xix. 37) for Ararat. That lofty plateau whence the rivers Euphrates, Tigris, Araxes, and Acampsis, pour down their waters in different directions.

Later in the monarchy, slingers formed part of the regular army (2 K. iii. 25). II. Armor. 1. The BREASTPLATE, literally a "breastplate of scales" (1 Sam. xvii. 5). 2. The habergeon is mentioned but twice (Ex. xxviii. 32, xxxix. 23). 3. The HELMET is referred to. 4. GREAVES, or defences for the feet made of brass, are named in 1 Sam. xvii. 6. 5. Two kinds of SHIELD are distinguishable, the large shield and the buckler. 6. The Shelet.

NOREG, OR THRESHING MACHINE.

Army. I. JEWISH ARMY. Every man above 20 years was a soldier (Num. 1. 3): each tribe formed a regiment with its own leader (Num. ii. 2, x. 14): their positions were accurately fixed (Num. ii.): the whole army started and stopped at a signal (Num. x. 5, 6). II. The ROMAN ARMY was divided into legions, the number of which varied, each under six tribuni ("chief captains," Acts xxi. 31), who commanded by turns. The legion was subdivided into ten cohorts ("band," Acts x. 1), the cohort into three maniples, and the maniple into two centuries, containing originally 100 men, but subsequently from 50 to 100. There were thus 60 centuries in a legion, each under the command of a centurion (Acts x. 1, 22; Matt. viii. 5, xxvii. 54).

He died greatly loved and honored in the 41st year of his reign.

As'ahel. Nephew of David. He was celebrated for his swiftness of foot. When fighting under his brother Joab, he pursued Abner, who was obliged to kill him in self-defence (2 Sam. ii. 18 ff.).

ARMOR-CLAD.

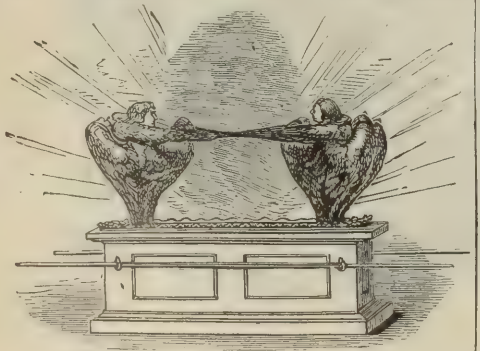
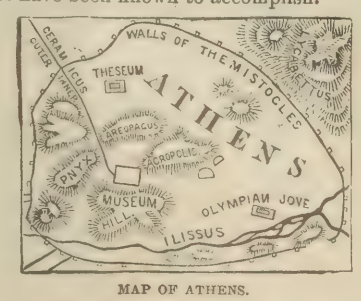
Asiar'chae (chief of Asia, A. V.; Acts xix. 31), officers chosen annually by the cities of the province of Asia, of which Ephesus was, under Roman government, the metropolis. They had charge of the public games and religious theatrical spectacles, the expenses of which they bore.

MOURNERS.



Asmode'us (Tob. iii. 8, 17), the same as Abaddon or Apollyon (Rev. ix. 11; comp. Wisd. xviii. 25).

Asp (pethen). The Hebrew word occurs: Deut. xxxii. 33; Job xx. 14, 16; Ps. lviii. 5, xci, 13; Is. xi. 8). That some kind of poisonous serpent is denoted is clear.



EGYPTIAN RING MONEY.

Ass. The species known to the ancient Jews are Asinus hemippus, which inhabits the deserts of Syria, Mesopotamia, and the northern parts of Arabia; the Asinus vulgaris of the N. E. of Africa; and probably the Asinus onager, which is found in Western Asia. Mr. Layard remarks that in fleetness the wild ass (Asinus hemippus) equals the gazelle, and to overtake them is a feat which only one or two of the most celebrated mares have been known to accomplish.

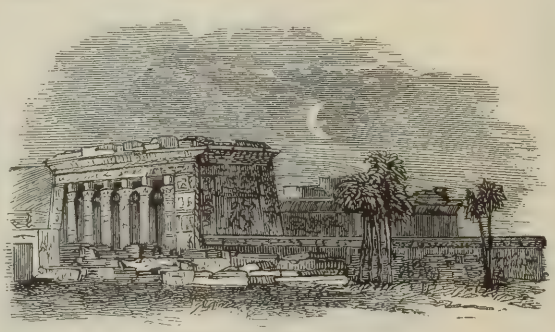
MAP OF ATHENS.

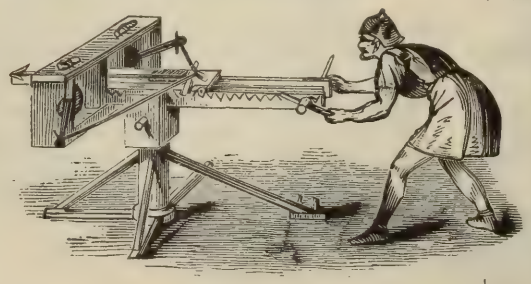
As'sos, or As'sus, a seaport of the Roman province of Asia, in the district anciently called Mysia (Acts xx. 13, 14).

Assyr'ia, Assh'ur, was a great and powerful country lying on the Tigris (Gen. ii. 14), the capital of which was Nineveh (Gen. x. 11, &c.). The boundaries of Assyria differed greatly at different periods. Scripture informs us that Assyria was peopled from Babylon (Gen. x. 11). As a country, it was evidently known to Moses (Gen. ii. 14, xxv. 18; Num. xxiv. 22, 24). The fall of Assyria, prophesied by Isaiah (x. 5–19), was effected by the growing strength and boldness of the Medes. The government of the Assyrians was rude and inartificial; their religion coarse and sensual; and their conduct of war cruel.



BATTERING-RAM.

Asty'agēs, the last king of the Medes, B. C. 595–560, or B. C. 592–558, who was conquered by Cyrus (Bel and Dragon, 1).



Asyn'critŭs, a Christian at Rome saluted by St. Paul (Rom. xvi. 14).

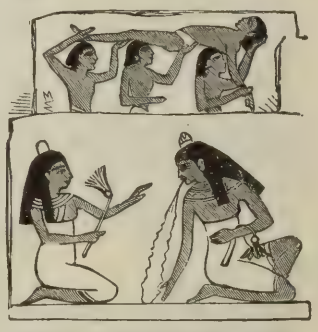
Athali'ah, daughter of Ahab and Jezebel, married Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and introduced the worship of Baal. After the revolution, by which Jehu seated himself on the throne of Samaria, she killed the members of the royal family of Judah who escaped his sword (2

EGYPTIAN RUINS.

K. xi. 1). From the slaughter one infant named Joash, the youngest son of Ahaziah, was rescued (2 Chr. xiii. 11). The child was brought up and concealed in the Temple for six years, during which period Athaliah reigned over Judah. At length Jehoiada thought it time to produce the lawful king to the people. His plan was successful, and Athaliah was put to death.

CATAPULTA.

Ath'ens, the capital of Attica, and the chief seat of Grecian learning and civilization during the golden period of Greece. St. Paul visited it in his journey from Macedonia, and remained there some time (Acts xvii. 14–34); comp. 1, Thess. iii. 1). It produced many renowned philosophers, orators and generals. The Athenians were distinguished for their attention to the worship of the gods, and the city was crowded in every direction with temples, altars, and other sacred buildings.



Atonement, The day of. The great day of national humiliation, and the only one commanded in the GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

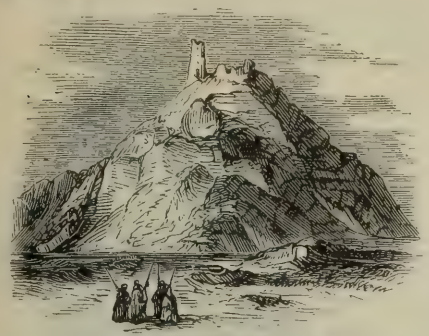
Mosaic law. [Fasts.] The mode of its observance is described in Lev. xvi., and the conduct of the people is emphatically enjoined in Lev. xxiii. 26–32.

Attali'a, a coast-town of Pamphylia, mentioned Acts xiv. 25.

EGYPTIAN MOURNERS WITH CORPSE.

At'talŭs, the name of three kings of Pergamus who reigned respectively B. C. 241–197, 159–138 (Philadelphus), 138–133 (Philometor).

Augus'tus Caes'ar, the first Roman emperor. He was born B. C. 63. He was educated by his great-uncle Julius Caesar, and was made his heir. After the murder of Julius, and the victory at Actium, B. C. 31, the young man, then Caius Julius Caesar Octavianus, was saluted Imperator by the senate, who conferred on him the title Augustus (B. C. 27). The first link binding him to N. T. history is his treatment of Herod after the battle of Actium. That prince, who had espoused Antony's side, found himself pardoned, taken into favor, and even increased in his power. After Herod's death in A. D. 4, Augustus divided his dominions among his sons. Augustus died A. D. 14, in his 76th year; but long before his death he had associated Tiberius with him in the empire.



QUEEN CANDAKE.

Axe. Seven Hebrew words are rendered "axe" in the A. V. The most common consisted of a head of iron (cf. Is. x. 34), fastened with thongs upon a handle of wood (Deut. xix. 5; 2 K. vi. 5), for felling trees (Deut. xx. 19). The "battle-axe" (Jer. li. 20) was probably a heavy mace or maul.

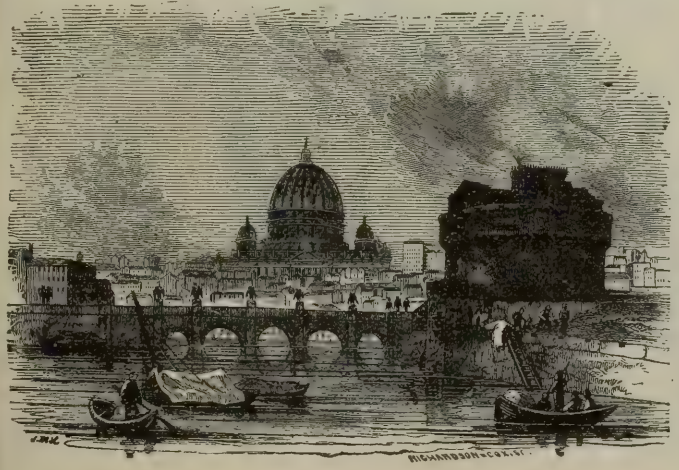
Azari'ah, a common name in Hebrew, and especially in the families of the priests of the line of ELEAZAR.



BIRS NIMROUD.

Az'zah. The more accurate rendering of Gaza (Deut. ii. 23; 1 K. iv. 24, Jer. xxv. 20).

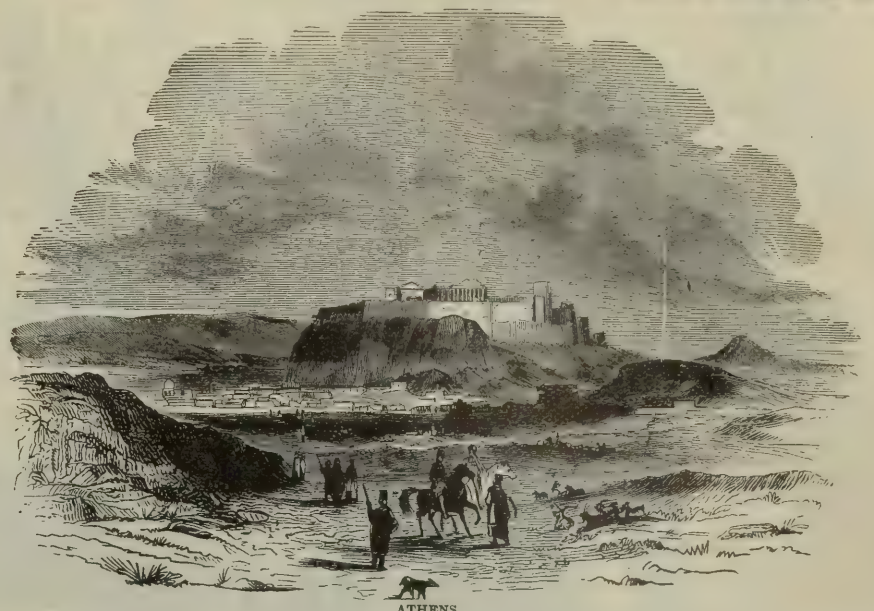
Bā'al. 1. A Reubenite, whose descendant Beerah was carried off by Tiglath-Pileser (1 Chr. v. 5). 2. The son of Jehiel, brother of Kish, and grandfather of Saul (1 Chr. viii. 30, ix. 36).

Bā'al, the supreme male divinity of the Phoenician and Canaanitish nations, as ASHTORETH was their supreme female divinity. The plural BAALIM is found frequently. The word means Lord. There can be no doubt of the very high antiquity of the worship of Baal.

ST. PETERS, ROME.

Baal, geographical. This word occurs as the prefix or suffix to the names of several places in Palestine, and such places were either near Phoenicia, or in proximity to some other seat of heathen worship.



Ba'alis, king of the Ammonites at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. xl. 14).

Ba'anah, son of Rimmon, who with his brother Rechab murdered Ishbosheth. For this they were killed by David, and their mutillated bodies hung up over the pool at Hebron (2 Sam. iv. 2, 5, 6, 9).

Ba'asha, B. C. 953–931, third sovereign of the separate kingdom of Israel. He conspired against Nadab, son of Jeroboam (1 K. xv. 27), and killed him with his whole family. Baasha died in the 24th year of his reign, and was buried in Tirzah (Cant. vi. 4), his capital (1 K. xvi. 6; 2 Chr. xvi. 1–6).

Bā'bel, Bab'ylon, is properly the capital city of the country, which is called in Genesis Shinar, and in the later books Chaldaea, or the land of the Chaldaeans. According to Herodotus, the city was built on both sides of the Euphrates. The entire area was about 200 square miles. The houses, frequently three or four stories high, were laid out in straight streets. The two portions of the city were united by a bridge. Here the Babylonish Talmud was compiled.

Bā'bel, Tower of, only mentioned once in the Scripture (Gen. xi. 4, 5). It was built of bricks, and the "slime" for mortar was probably bitumen. In one or other of the Babylonish temples the former Jews thought to recognize the tower itself. The predominant opinion was in favor of the great temple of Nebo at Borsippa, the modern Birs-Nimrud.

ATHENS.

Bab'ylon, in the Apocalypse, is the symbolical name by which Rome is denoted (Rev. xiv. 8, xvii., xviii.).

Bābylonish Garment, literally "robe of Shinar" (Josh. vii. 21). Perhaps a variegated garment for which the Babylonians were celebrated.

Bā'ca, The Valley of, a valley in Palestine, through which the exiled Psalmist sees in vision the pilgrims in their march towards Zion (Ps. lxxxiv. 6).

Badger-Skins. There is much obscurity as to the word rendered "badger" (Ex. xxv. 5, xxxv. 7, &c.); the ancient versions seem nearly all agreed that it denotes not an animal, but a color, either black or sky-blue. Perhaps the Hebrew may denote a seal.

Ba'laam, the son of Beor, a man endowed with the gift of prophecy (Num. xxii. 5). He belonged to the Midianites. He seems to have lived at Pethor, a city of Mesopotamia. When the Israelites were encamped in Moab, Balak, the king, sent for Balaam to curse them. Balaam was prohibited by God from going. The king of Moab sent again. The prophet again refused, but was at length allowed to go. Balaam therefore proceeded on his journey. But God's anger was kindled at this self will, and the angel of the Lord stood in the way against him (2 Pet. ii. 16). Balaam predicted a magnificent career for the people whom he was called to curse. A battle was afterwards fought against the Midianites, in which Balaam was slain (Num. xxxi. 8).

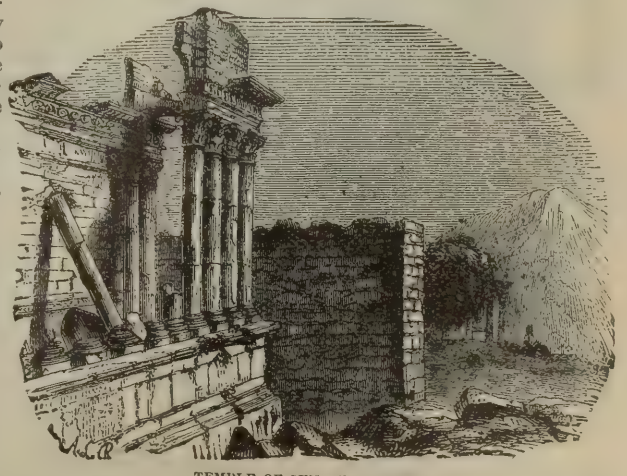
Bā'lak, king of the Moabites. Balak hired Balaam to curse the Israelites, but his designs were frustrated (Num. xxii.–xxiv.).

Baldness. Natural baldness is perpetually alluded to as squalor and misery (2 K. ii. 23; Is. iii. 24; Jer. xlvii. 5, &c.). Artificial baldness marked the conclusion of a Nazarite's vow (Acts xviii. 18; Num. vi. 9), and was a sign of mourning.

Balm occurs in Gen. xxxvii. 25, xliii. 11; Jer. viii. 22, xlvi. 11, li. 8; and Ez. xxvii. 17. It is impossible to identify it with any certainty.

Băn'quets, among the Hebrews, were common. The usual time of the banquet was the evening. The most essential materials next to the viands and wine, the last often drugged with spices (Prov. ix. 2; Cant. viii. 2), were perfumed unguents, garlands or loose flowers, white or brilliant robes; after these, exhibitions of music, singers, and dancers, riddles, jesting and merriment. The separation of the women's banquet was not a Jewish custom (Esth. i. 9).

Băp'tism. An ordinance of the Christian Church, representing the washing away of our sins and the purification of our life, through a crucified and risen Redeemer (Rom. vi. 3, 4, 11).

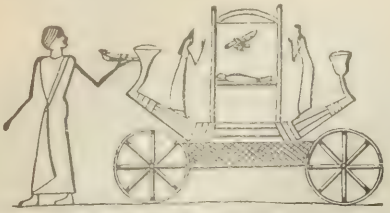


Barab'bas, a robber (John xviii. 40), who had committed murder in an insurrection (Mark xv. 7; Luke xxiii. 19) in Jerusalem, and was in prison at the time of the trial of Jesus before Pilate.

Bā'rak, son of Abinoam of Kedesh, was incited by Deborah, a prophetess of Ephraim, to deliver Israel (Judg. iv.). He utterly routed the Canaanites in the plain of Jezreel (Esdraelon).

Bărba'rian "Every one not a Greek," is the strict sense of the word in Rom. i. 14.

Bar-Je'sus. [ELYMAS.]



Bar-Jo'na. [PETER.]

TEMPLE OF SUN AT BAALBEC.

Barley was grown by the Hebrews (Lev. xxvii. 16; Deut. viii. 8; Ruth ii. 17, &c.), who used it for baking into bread, chiefly amongst the poor (Judg. vii. 13; 2 K. iv. 42; John vi. 9, 13); for making into bread by mixing it with wheat, beans, lentils, millet, &c. (Ez. iv. 9); and as fodder for horses (1 K. iv. 28).

ANCIENT FUNERAL CAR.

Bär'nabas, a name signifying "son of prophecy," or "exhortation," given by the Apostles (Acts iv. 36) to JOSEPH (or Joses), a Levite of the island of Cyprus, who was early a disciple of Christ. In Acts ix. 27, we find him introducing the newly-converted Saul to the Apostles at Jerusalem. A variance took place between Barnabas and Paul on the question of taking with them John Mark, sister's son to Barnabas (Acts xv. 36 ff.). They parted, and Barnabas took Mark, and sailed to Cyprus, his native island. Here the Scripture notices of him cease. The Epistle attributed to Barnabas is believed to have been written early in the second century.

Bar'sabas. [JOSEPH BARSABAS; JUDAS BARSABAS.]

Bärthol'omew, one of the Twelve Apostles (Matt.

x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 14; Acts i. 13). It has been not improbably conjectured that he is identical with Nathaniel (John i. 45 ff.).

Bärtimae'us, a blind beggar of Jericho (Mark x. 46 ff.).

Ba'ruch. 1. Son of Neriah, the friend (Jer. xxxii.

BIRD-SNARING.

12), amanuensis (Jer xxxvi. 4–32), and faithful attendant of Jeremiah (Jer. xxxvi. 10 ff.; B. C. 603). He was of a noble family and distinguished acquirements. His enemies accused him of influencing Jeremiah in favor of the Chaldaeans (Jer. xliii. 3; cf. xxxvii. 13); and he was thrown into prison with that prophet till the capture of Jerusalem, B. C. 586. Nothing is known certainly of the close of his life. 2. THE BOOK OF, may be divided into two main parts, i.–iii. 8, and iii. 9-end. It was held in little esteem among the Jews, and was frequently quoted both in the East and in the West as the work of Jeremiah. At the Council of Trent, Baruch was admitted into the Romish Canon.

FEMALE CARRIERS OF WATER.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN FUNERAL PROCESSION.

Bärzil'lai. 1. A wealthy Gileadite who showed hospitality to David (2 Sam. xvii. 27). He declined the offer of ending his days at court (2 Sam. xix. 32–39). 2. A Meholathite, whose son Adriel married Michal, Saul's daughter (2 Sam. xxi. 8).

Bä'shan, a district on the east of Jordan, spoken of as the "land of Bashan" (1 Chr. v. 11), and sometimes as "all Bashan" (Deut. iii. 10, 13; Josh. xii. 5).

Bash'emath, daughter of Ishmael, the last married of the three wives of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 3, 4, 13). In Gen. xxviii. 9 she is called Mahalath, another of Esau's wives, the daughter of Elon the Hittite. This is probably due to a transcriber's error.

Basin. The "basin" from which our Lord washed the disciples' feet was probably deeper and larger than the hand-basin for sprinkling.

Bäs'ket. The Hebrew terms are (1) Sal, used for holding bread. (2) Salsilloth, applied to the basket used in gathering grapes. (3) Tene, in which the first-fruits were presented. (4) Celub, used for carrying fruit. (5) Dud, for carrying fruit, as on a larger scale for carrying clay to the brickyard, or for holding bulky articles.

Bas'math, a daughter of Solomon, married to Ahimaaz (1 K. iv. 15).

Bastard. The term is not applied to illegitimate offspring, but is restricted by the Rabbins to the issue of any connection within the degrees prohibited by the Law.

Bät. (Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18.) Many travelers have noticed the immense numbers of bats in caverns in the East, and Mr. Layard says that on a visit to a cavern these noisome beasts compelled him to retreat.

Bath, Bathing. A prescribed part of the Jewish ritual of purification in cases of accident, leprous or ordinary uncleanness (Lev. xv., xvi. 28, xxii. 6; Num. xix. 7, 19); as also after mourning, which always implied defilement (Ruth iii. 3; 2 Sam. xii. 20).

Bath. [MEASURES].

Bäth'shēba (2 Sam. xi. 3, &c.; also called Bathshua in 1 Chr. iii. 5), the daughter of Eliam (2 Sam. xi. 3), or Ammiel (1 Chr. iii. 5), the son of Ahithophel (2 Sam. xxiii. 34), and wife of Uriah the Hittite. The child which was the fruit of her adulterous intercourse with David died; but after marriage she became the mother of four sons, Solomon (Matt. i. 6), Shimea, Shobab, and Nathan.

Bay-tree (ezrach). Most of the Jewish doctors understand by ezrach "a tree which grows in its own soil."

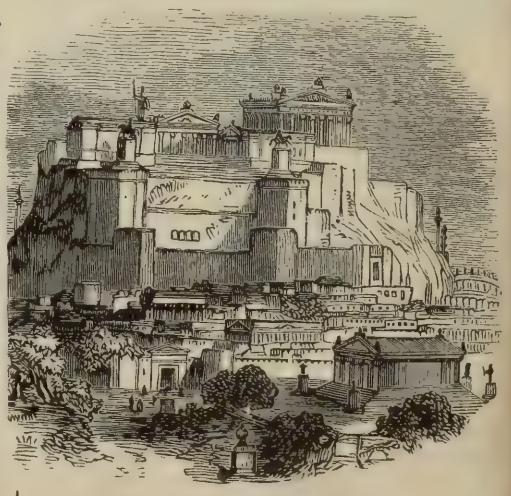
Bdel'lium (Gen. ii. 12; Num. xi. 7). An odoriferous exudation from a tree.



Beans (2 Sam. xvii. 28; Ezra iv. 9). Beans are cultivated in Palestine, which produce many of the leguminous order of plants, such as lentils, kidney-beans, vetches, &c.

Bear (1 Sam. xvii. 34; 2 Sam. xvii. 8). The Syrian bear (Ursus Syriacus), without doubt the animal mentioned in the Bible, is still found on the higher mountains of Palestine.

WINNOWING WITH THE FAN.

Beard. Western Asiatics have always cherished the beard. The Egyptians, on the contrary, for the most part, shaved the hair of the face and head. It is impossible to decide with certainty the meaning of the precept (Lev. xix. 27, xxi. 5) regarding the "corners of the beard." The custom was to shave or pluck it and the hair out in mourning; to neglect it in affliction (2 Sam. xix. 24), and to regard insult to it as the last outrage (2 Sam. x. 4). It was the object of salutation (2 Sam. xx. 9).

ATHENS, WITH MARS' HILL, OR ACROPOLIS.

POURING FROM BOTTLE SKIN.

Bed and Bed-chamber. We distinguish in the Jewish bed five principal parts: 1. The mattress, which was limited to a mere mat, or one or more quilts. 2. The covering. 3. Some fabric woven or plaited of goat's hair; something hastily adopted to serve as a pillow. 4. The bedstead was not always necessary, the divan, or platform along the side or end of an Oriental room, sufficing. 5. The ornamental portions were pillars and a canopy (Jud. xiii. 9), ivory carvings, gold and silver, and probably mosaic work, purple and fine linen (Esth. i. 6; Cant. iii. 9, 10). The ordinary furniture of a bed-chamber is given in 2 K. iv. 10.

Bee (Deborah), Deut. i. 44; Judg. xiv. 8; Ps. cxviii. 12; Is. vii. 18. That Palestine abounded in bees is evident. The honey-bee of Palestine is distinct. Swarms in the East are larger than with us, and, on account of the heat of the climate, their stings give rise to dangerous symptoms.

Beĕl'zebŭl, title of a heathen deity, to whom the Jews ascribed the sovereignty of the evil spirits (Matt. x. 25, xii. 24; Mark iii. 22; Luke xi. 15 ff.). The correct reading is Beelzebul, and not Beelzebub, as in the Syriac, Vulg., &c.

Beĕ'roth, one of the four cities of the Hivites who deluded Joshua into a treaty of peace (Josh. ix. 17).

Beĕr'sheba. One of the old places in Palestine, the southern limit of the country. There are two accounts of the origin of the name. 1. According to the first, the well was dug by Abraham, and the name given, because there he and Abimelech "sware" both of them (Gen. xxi. 31). 2. The other ascribes the origin to an occurrence almost precisely similar, in which both Abimelech and his chief captain are concerned, with Isaac instead of Abraham (Gen. xxvi. 31-33). There are at present on the spot two principal wells, and five smaller ones. The two principal wells lie just a hundred yards apart. The larger of the two is 12½ feet diam., and about 44½ feet to the surface of the water; the masonry reaches downwards 28½ feet. The other well is 5 feet diam., and about 42 feet to the water. The curb-stones round the mouth of both wells are worn into deep grooves by the action of the ropes of so many centuries.

Be'hēmoth. There can be little doubt that by this word (Job xl. 15–24) the hippopotamus is intended, since the leviathan, by almost universal consent, denotes the crocodile, the behemoth seems clearly to point to the hippopotamus, his associate in the Nile.

Be'kah. [Weights and Measures.]

Be'la. One of the five cities of the plain spared at the intercession of Lot (Gen. xiv. 2, xix. 22).

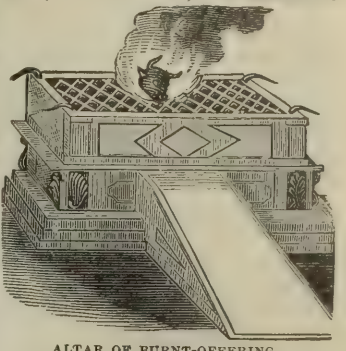
Be'lial. Its meaning is worthlessness, and hence recklessness, lawlessness. The expression son or man of Belial must be understood as meaning a worthless, lawless fellow. The term in 2 Cor. vi. 15 is generally understood as an appellative of Satan.

Bellows. They consisted of a leather, secured and fitted into a frame, from which a long pipe extended. They were worked by the operator, with one under each foot, and pressing them alternately while he pulled up each exhausted skin with a string. The pipes appear to have been of reed, with a metal point to resist the action of the fire.



Bells. In Ex. xxviii. 33, the bells alluded to were the golden ones, according to the Rabbis 72 in number, round the hem of the high-priest's ephod. The object was that his sound might be heard.

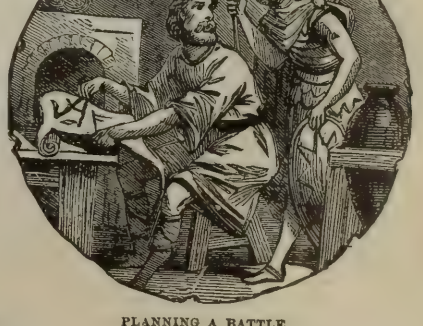
Bĕlshaz'zar, the last king of Babylon. According to Dan. v., he was slain during a splendid feast in his palace.

Benā'iah, son of Jehoiada the chief priest (1 Chr. xxvii. 5). The exploits which gave him this rank are narrated in 2 Sam. xxiii. 20, 21; 1 Chr. xi. 22. Benaiah remained faithful to Solomon and was raised into the place of Joab as commander-in-chief of the whole army (ii. 35, iv. 4).

Ben-am'mi, son of the younger daughter of Lot, and progenitor of the Ammonites (Gen. xix. 38).

Benhā'dad, the name of three kings of Damascus.—Benhadad I. was either son or grandson of Rezon. His date is B. C. 950.—Benhadad II., son of the preceding. Long wars with Israel characterized his reign. Benhadad fell sick, and sent Hazael to consult Elisha (2 K. viii. 7–15). Benhadad's death was about B. C. 890.—Benhadad III., son of Hazael, and his successor on the throne of Syria. When he succeeded to the throne, Jehoash beat him in Aphek (2 K. xiii. 17, 25). The date of Benhadad III. is B. C. 840.

ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERING.



Ben'jamĭn. The youngest of the children of Jacob, and the only one born in Palestine. His birth took place on the road between Bethel and Bethlehem, and his mother Rachel died in giving him birth, naming him Ben-oni, "son of my sorrow." This was by Jacob changed into Benjamin (Gen. xxxv. 16–18). Until the journeys of Jacob's sons and of Jacob himself into Egypt we hear nothing of Benjamin. Henceforward the history of Benjamin is the history of the tribe.

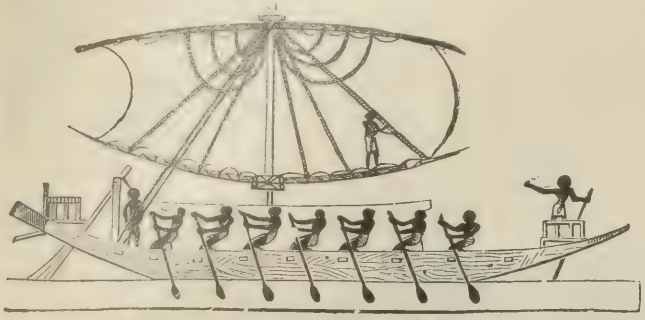
Be'ra, king of Sodom at the invasion of Chedorlaomer (Gen. xiv. 2; also 17 and 21).

Berā'chah, Valley of, in which Jehoshaphat and his people assembled to "bless" Jehovah (2 Chr. xx. 26).

Berē'a. A city of Macedonia, mentioned in Acts xvii. 10, 15. It is now called Verria.

Berni'ce and Bereni'ce, the eldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 1, &c.). She was married to her uncle Herod, king of Chalcis, and after his death (A. D. 48) lived under circumstances of great suspicion with her own brother Agrippa II., with whom she is mentioned Acts xxv. 13, 23, xxvi. 30.

PLANNING A BATTLE.



Beryl (Ex. xxviii. 20, xxxix. 13; Cant. v. 14; Ez. i. 16, x. 9, xxviii. 13; Dan. x. 6. The ancient chrysolite or modern yellow topaz has a better claim to the tarshish of the Hebrew than the beryl of the A. V.

Bĕth, the most general word for a house or habitation. It is more frequently employed in compound names of places than any other word.

Beth-ab'ara, a place beyond Jordan, in which John was baptizing (John i. 28). Bethabara may be identical with Beth-bara, the ancient ford of Jordan, or with Beth-nimrah, nearly opposite Jericho.

Beth'any, a village which, scanty as are the notices of it, is intimately associated with the most familiar acts and scenes of the last days of the life of Christ. It was situated "at" the Mount of Olives (Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29), about fifteen stadia from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), on or near the road from Jericho to the city (Luke xix. 29; comp. 1; Mark xi. 1, comp. x. 46), and close by BETHPAGE. Bethany is now known by a name derived from Lazarus,—el-'Azariyeh or Lazarieh. el-'Azariyeh is a wild mountain hamlet of some twenty families.

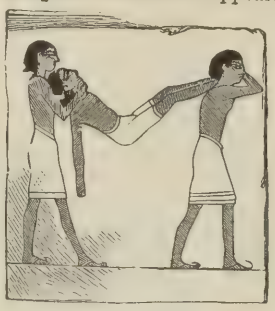
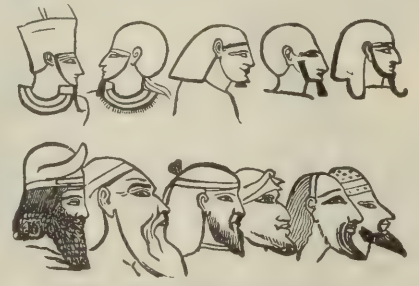
EGYPTIAN CARRIERS OR PORTERS.



Beth'el. So named by Jacob (Gen. xxviii. 19), who afterward made it his residence (Gen. xxxv. 6). Abraham pitched his tent there. The "sons of the prophets" resided there. It was about ten miles north of Jerusalem. Its ruins still lie on the right hand side of the road from Jerusalem to Nablous under the scarcely altered name of Beitin.

STICK BOOKS.



Bethes'da. A reservoir or tank, with five "porches," close upon the sheep-gate or "market" in Jerusalem (John v. 2). The porches—i. e. cloisters or colonnades—were extensive. The large reservoir Birket Israil, close by the St. Stephen's Gate, is considered to be its modern representative.

Beth'lehem. One of the oldest towns in Palestine, in existence at Jacob's return to the country. Its earliest name was EPHRATH or EPHRATAH (see Gen. xxxv. 16, 19, xlviii. 7). And long after the occupation by the Israelites we meet with its new name. After the conquest Bethlehem appears under its own name Bethlehem-judah (Judg. xvii. 7; 1 Sam. xvii. 12; Ruth i. 1, 2). The Book of Ruth is a page from the domestic history of Bethlehem. It is notable as the birthplace of David and Jesus Christ. The modern town of Beit-lahm lies to the E. of the main road from Jerusalem to Hebron, 6 miles from the former. On the top of a ridge lies the village in a kind of irregular triangle. The population is about 3000 souls, entirely Christians.

ANCIENT MODE OF WEARING THE BEARD.

Beth-pe'or, a place, no doubt dedicated to the god Baal-peor, on the east of Jordan, opposite Jericho.

BRICK-MAKING IN EGYPT.

Beth'-phage, the name of a place on the Mount of Olives, on the road between Jericho and Jerusalem. It was apparently close to BETHANY (Matt. xxi. 1; Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29), and to the eastward of it.

TIBERIAS CAESAR.

Beth-sā'ida. 1. (John xii. 21.) The native place of Andrew, Peter and Philip (John i. 44, xii. 21) in the land of Gennesareth (Mark vi. 45; comp. 53), and on the west side of the lake. 2. From Mark vi. 31–53, and Luke ix. 10–17, the Bethsaida at which the 5000 were fed must have been on the east of the lake (see illustration, p. 100).

Bethu'el, the son of Nahor by Milcah; nephew of Abraham, and father of Rebekah (Gen. xxii. 22, 23, &c.) In xxv. 20, and xxviii. 5, he is called "Bethuel the Syrian."

Bethū'lia, the city which was the scene of the chief events of the Book of Judith. Its position is there described.

CANDLESTICK.

Beū'lah, "married," the name the land of Israel is to bear, when "the land shall be married" (Is. lxii. 4).

Be'zer in the Wilderness, a city set apart by Moses as one of the three cities of refuge.

Bible. The earliest instance of such title occurs in Daniel, who refers to "the books" (Dan. ix. 2). The same word was applied by the Jews in Alexandria to the collected books of the Old Testament, whence the word BIBLE, or The Book, has been given to the collected books of the Old and New Testaments. The writers of the New Testament call the books of the Old Testament either The Scripture (Acts viii. 32; Gal. iii. 22; 2 Tim. iii. 16), or The Scriptures (Matt. xxi. 42; Luke xxiv. 27), or The Holy Scriptures (2 Tim. iii. 15). Of the Latin equivalents, adopted by different writers (Instrumentum, Testamentum), the latter perpetuated itself in the languages of modern Europe, whence the terms Old Testament and New Testament, though the Greek word properly signifies "Covenant" rather than "Testament." But the application of the word BIBLE to the collected books of the Old and New Testaments is not to be traced farther back than the fifth century of our era.

Big'than and Big'thana. Eunuch (chamberlain, A. V.) in the court of Ahasuerus, one of those who conspired with Teresh against the king's life (Esth. ii. 21).

Bil'hah, handmaid of Rachel (Gen. xxix. 29), and EASTERN FUNERAL.

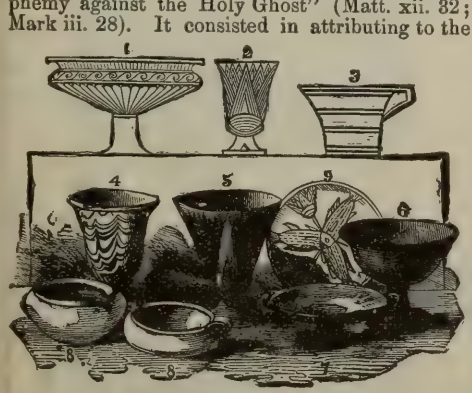
concubine of Jacob, to whom she bore Dan and Naphtali (Gen. xxx. 3–8, xxxv. 25, etc.).

Bir'sha, king of Gomorrha at the time of the invasion of Chedorlaomer (Gen. xiv. 2).

Birthdays. The custom of observing birthdays is very ancient (Gen. xl. 20, Jer. xx. 15); and in Job i. 4, &c., we read that Job's sons "feasted every one his day." It is probable that in Matt. xiv. 6, the feast to commemorate Herod's accession is intended.

Birthright. The advantages to the eldest son were not definitely fixed in patriarchal times. Great respect was paid to him in the household. A "double portion of the paternal property was allotted by the Mosaic law (Deut. xxi. 15–17).

Bishop. This word, applied in the N. T. to the officers of the Church who were charged with certain functions of superintendence, had been in use before as a title of office. That the titles of bishop and elder were originally equivalent is clear.



RUINS AT CAPERNAUM.

Bithyn'ia A province of Asia Minor, mentioned only in Acts xvi. 7, and in 1 Pet. i. 1. Bithynia, as a Roman province, was on the west contiguous to ASIA.

Bittern. The Hebrew word has been the subject of various interpretations. We believe the A. V. is correct. The bittern belongs to the Ardeidae, the heron family of birds.

Blains, violent ulcerous inflammations, the sixth plague of Egypt (Ex. ix. 9, 10), called in Deut. xxviii. 27, 35, "the botch of Egypt. Probably the black leprosy, a fearful kind of elephantiasis.

Blasphemy. Blasphemy was punished with stoning (Lev. xxiv. 11). On this charge both our Lord and St. Stephen were condemned to death by the Jews. It only remains to speak of "the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost" (Matt. xii. 32; Mark iii. 28). It consisted in attributing to the power of Satan those unquestionable miracles which Jesus performed by "the finger of God" and the power of the Holy Spirit.

EGYPTIAN CUPS.

Blas'tus, the chamberlain of Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 20).

Blindness is common in the East. Blind beggars figure repeatedly (Matt. xii. 22), and "opening the eyes of the blind" is mentioned in prophecy as a peculiar attribute of the Messiah (Is. xxix. 18, &c.). The Jews were charged to treat the blind with care (Lev. xix. xiv; Deut. xxvii. 18). Blindness wilfully inflicted is alluded to (1 Sam. xi. 2; Jer. xxxix. 7).

Blood. To blood is ascribed in Scripture the mysterious sacredness which belongs to life.

Blood, Issue of. The menstruous discharge, or the fluxus uteri (Lev. xv. 19–30; Matt. ix. 20; Mark v. 25, and Luke viii. 43). The latter caused a permanent legal uncleanness, the former a temporary one, mostly for seven days, after which the woman was to be purified by the offering.

Blood, Revenger of. It was, and is, a practice among nations of patriarchal habits, that the nearest of kin should avenge the death of a murdered relative. The law of Moses was precise. 1. The wilful murderer was to be put to death without compensation. The nearest relative became the authorized avenger (Num. xxxv. 19). 2. The law of retaliation was not to extend beyond the offender (Deut. xxiv. 16; 2 K. xiv. 6; 2 Chr. xxv. 4; Jer. xxxi. 29, 30; Ezek. xviii. 20). 3. The involuntary shedder of blood was permitted to take flight to one of the cities of refuge (Num. xxxv. 22, 23; Deut. xix. 4–6).

EGYPTIAN FUNERAL PROCESSION.

Boaner'ges, signifying "sons of thunder," given by our Lord to the two sons of Zebedee (Mark iii. 17).

Bo'az. 1. A wealthy Bethlehemite, kinsman to Elimelech, the husband of Naomi. He married Ruth. Boaz is mentioned in the genealogy of Christ (Matt. i. 5). 2. BOAZ, the name of one of Solomon's brazen pillars in the temple porch. It was 18 cubits high (1 K. vii. 15, 21; 2 Chr. iii. 15; Jer. lii. 21).

Booty, captives of both sexes, cattle, and whatever a captured city might contain. Within Canaan no captives were to be made (Deut. xx. 14 and 16); beyond, in warlike resistance, all women and children were captives, and men put to death. The law is in Num. xxxi. 26–47.

Bo'oz, Matt. i. 5; Luke iii. 32. [BOAZ.]

Bottle. 1. The Arabs keep their water, milk, and other liquors, in leathern bottles made of goat-skins. 2. Vessels of metal, earthen or glassware for liquids, were in use among the Greeks, Egyptians, Etruscans, and Assyrians, and no doubt among the Jews in later times. Thus Jer. xix. 1, "a potter's earthen bottle."

Böz'rah, in Edom—the city of Jobab, one of the early kings of that nation (Gen. xxxvi. 33; 1 Chr. i. 44). Its modern representative is el-Busaireh, S. E. of the Dead Sea.

Bracelet. Men as well as women wore bracelets (Cant. v. 14). Layard says of the Assyrian kings: "The arms were encircled by armlets, and the wrists by bracelets."

Brass. In most places of the O. T. the correct translation would be copper, although it may sometimes mean bronze, a compound of copper and tin. Copper was known at a very early period (Gen iv. 22).

Bread. This as an article of food dates from a very early period: its use is found in Gen. xviii. 6. The best bread was made of wheat. "Barley" was used only by the very poor. The bread taken by persons on a journey (Gen. xlv. 23; Josh. ix. 12) was probably a kind of biscuit.

DANIEL.

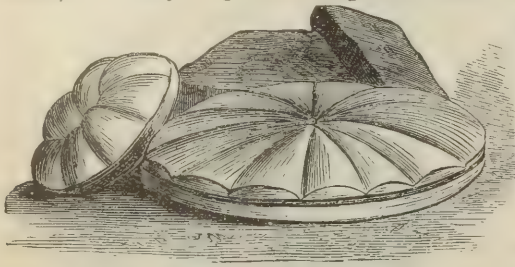
Brick. In the walls of Babylon, the clay dug out of the ditch was made into bricks as soon as carried up, and burnt in kilns. The bricks were cemented with hot bitumen. The bricks at Nineveh were chiefly sun-dried like the Egyptian, and usually from 12 to 13 inches square, and 3½ inches thick. The Jews learned the art of brick-making in Egypt, and we find the use of the brick-kiln in David's time (2 Sam. xii. 31).

EGYPTIAN COBRA.

Bridge. The only mention of a bridge is indirectly in the proper name Geshur, a district in Bashan. At this place a bridge still exists, called the bridge of the sons of Jacob.

Brimstone. The Hebrew is connected with gopher

(Gen. vi. 14), and probably signified the gum or resin from that tree; hence transferred to inflammable substances, and especially to sulphur (Gen. xix. 24).



Bull, Bullock, terms used synonymously with ox, oxen, in the A. V. In Is. li. 20, the "wild bull" ("wild ox" in Deut. xiv. 5) was possibly one of the larger species of antelope.

Burial, Sepulchres. [TOMBS.] 1. A natural cave enlarged and adapted by excavation, or an artificial imitation of one, was the standard type of sepulchre. Sepulchres were commonly prepared beforehand, and stood often in gardens, by roadsides, or even adjoining houses. Sepulchres were marked sometimes by pillars, or by pyramids. Such as were not otherwise noticeable were scrupulously "whited" (Matt. xxiii. 27). 2. "The manner of the Jews" included the use of spices, where they could command the means. It was the office of the next of kin to preside over the whole funeral office; but a company of public buriers had become, it seems, customary in the times of the N. T. (Acts v. 6, 10. The bier was borne by the nearest relatives. The grave-clothes were probably of the fashion worn in life. 3. Tombs were, in popular belief, invested with traditions.

Burnt-offering. Applied to the offering which was wholly consumed on the altar. Throughout Genesis (see xv. 9, 17, xxii. 2, 7, 8, 13) the burnt-offering appears to be the only sacrifice referred to. The ceremonies are given in Leviticus.

Butter, curdled milk (Gen. xviii. 8; Deut. xxxii. 14; Judg. v. 25; Job xx. 17). Milk is generally offered to travelers in Palestine in a curdled or sour state, "lebben," thick, almost like butter. The Arab women make butter in a leather bag, hung on three poles, in the form of a cone, and drawn to and fro by two women."

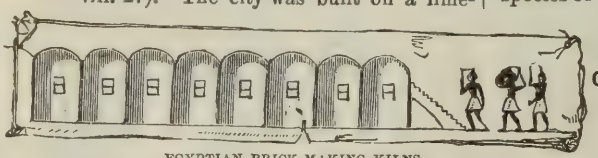
Bu'zi, father of Ezekiel the prophet (Ez. i. 3).



C

Cab. [MEASURES.]

Cae'sar, always in the N. T. the Roman Emperor, the sovereign of Judaea (John xix. 12, 15; Acts xvii. 7).

Caesarē'a (Acts viii. 40, ix. 30, x. 1, &c.) was on the coast of Palestine, on the great road from Tyre to Egypt, and half way between Joppa and Dora. The distance from Jerusalem was about 70 miles. It was the official residence of the Herodian kings, and of Festus, Felix, and the other Roman procurators of Judaea.

Caesarē'a Philip'pi is mentioned only in the two first Gospels (Matt. xvi. 13; Mark viii. 27). The city was built on a limestone terrace in a valley at the base of Mount Hermon. It has no O. T. history.

Cage. The term in Jer. v. 27 is properly a trap. In Rev. xviii. 2, the Greek term means a prison.

Caia'phas, in full JOSEPH CAIAPHAS, high-priest of the Jews under Tiberius (Matt. xxvi. 3, 57; John xi. 49, xviii. 13, 14, 24, 28; Acts iv. 6). He was son-in-law of Annas.

Cain. The historical facts in the life of Cain, in Gen. iv., are briefly:—He was the eldest son of Adam and Eve; he followed agriculture; in a fit of jealousy he committed the crime of murder; he settled in the land of Nod, and built a city named after his son Enoch; his descendants are enumerated.

Calamus. [REED.]

Ca'leb. 1. (1 Chr. ii. 9, 18, 19, 42, 50). Grandfather of Caleb the spy. 2. Son of Jephunneh, as the illustrious spy is usually designated. He and Oshea or Joshua the son of Nun were the only two who encouraged the people to enter in boldly to the land. His subsequent claim of land; his conquest of Hebron; and his reward of his younger brother, are all related in Josh. xv.

Calf. In Ex. xxxii. 4, we are told that Aaron, constrained by the people, made a molten calf of the golden earrings of the people, to represent the Elohim which brought Israel out of Egypt. Moses burnt the calf, and grinding it to powder scattered it over the water, which he made the people drink.

Cal'vary, a word occurring in the A. V. only in Luke xxiii. 23, and there arising from the translators' having literally adopted the word calvaria, i. e. a bare skull. The popular expression "Mount Calvary" is not warranted.

Camel. It is clear from Gen. xii. 16 that camels were early known to the Egyptians. The Ethiopians had camels (2 Chr. xiv. 15); the queen of Sheba came to Jerusalem with camels (1 K. x. 2); David took camels (1 Sam. xxvii. 2, &c.). The species of camel which was in common use among the Jews of Palestine was the Arabian or one-humped. The dromedary is a finer breed, the Arabs call it the Heirie.

Camphire (Heb. copher). There can be no doubt that "camphire" is an incorrect rendering (Cant. i. 14, iv. 13). The margin has "cypress." The substance really denoted is the Lawsonia alba of botanists.

Ca'na of Galilee, once Cana in Galilee, not far from Capernaum, memorable as the scene of Christ's first miracle (John ii. 1, 11, iv. 46) as of a subsequent one (iv. 46, 54), and as the native place of Nathaniel (xxi. 2). The traditional site is about 4½ miles north-west of Nazareth. The rival site is farther north.

BRICKS INSCRIBED WITH NAMES.

Cā'nāan. The fourth son of Ham (Gen. x. 6; 1 Chr. i. 8); The progenitor of the Phoenicians and of various other nations.

Cā'nāan, The Land of, lit. "Lowland," a name denoting the country west of the Jordan and Dead Sea. In later notices, we find it applied to the low maritime plains of Philistia and Phoenicia.

AUGUSTUS CAESAR.

Cā'nāanite, The, the designation of the Apostle SIMON, known as "Simon Zelotes." It occurs in Matt. x. 4; Mark iii. 18.

Cā'nāanites, The. 1. a tribe which inhabited a locality of the land west of the Jordan before the conquest; and 2. the people who inhabited generally the whole of that country.

Candā'ce, a queen of Ethiopia (Acts viii. 27). The name was that of a dynasty of Ethiopian queens.

Candlestick, which Moses was commanded to make, is described Ex. xxv. 31-37, xxxvii. 17-

THE KING'S CATTLE.

24. It is called (Lev. xxiv. 4) "the pure" and (Ecclus. xxvi. 17) "the holy candlestick." It required a talent of "pure gold," and was "of beaten work." Josephus, however, says of cast gold, and hollow.

Canon of Scripture, The, may be described as "the collection of books which form the original and authoritative written rule of the faith and practice of the Christian Church. The word Canon, in classical Greek, is properly a straight rod. In patristic writings, the word is used as "a rule" in the widest sense.

CHRIST WITH THE DOCTORS.

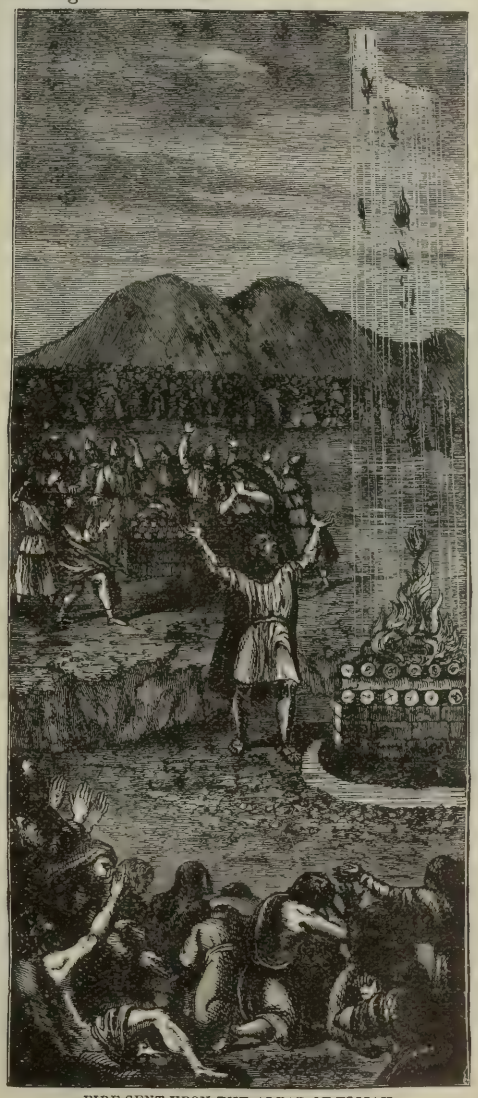
Canopy (Jud. x. 21, xiii. 9, xvi. 19). The canopy of Holofernes probably retained mosquito nets or curtains, although its description (Jud. x. 21) betrays luxury and display.

Canticles, Song of Songs, i. e. the most beautiful of songs, entitled in the A. V. THE SONG OF SOLOMON. It is intended to display the victory of humble and constant love over the temptations of wealth and royalty. We have the same evidence for its canonicity as that which is commonly adduced for the canonicity of any book of the O. T.

Căper'naum was on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee (Matt. iv. 13; comp. John vi. 24), in the "land of Gennesaret." It was called a "city," and had its own synagogue (John vi. 59; Mark i. 21; Luke iv. 33, 38, vii. 1, comp. 8; Matt. viii. 8). Besides a garrison it had a customs' station, where dues were gathered by officers. The only interest attaching to Capernaum is as the residence of our Lord and his Apostles, the scene of so many miracles and "gracious words." At Nazareth He was "brought up," but Capernaum was emphatically His "own city."

ANCIENT COMMERCE.

Ca'phar, one of the numerous words in the Bible to denote a village.



Caph'tor, Caph'torim, the primitive seat of the Philistines (Deut. ii. 23; Jer. xlvii. 4; Am. ix. 7). The country must be in Egypt, or near to it in Africa.

Cappado'cia, Cappado'cians (Acts ii. 9; 1 Pet. i. 1). In early times the name reached as far northwards as the Euxine Sea. Cappadocia is an elevated table-land. It was a good grain country, and famous for grazing. Its Roman metropolis was Caesarea.

Captain. As a purely military title, Captain answers to sar in the Hebrew army, and "tribune" in the Roman.

Captivities of the Jews. The two principle deportations were, (1) that which took place B. C. 598, when Jehoiachin with all the nobles, soldiers, and artificers, was carried away; and (2) that which followed the destruction of the Temple and the capture of Zedekiah B. C. 588.

Carbuncle, a bright sparkling gem. Probably the smaragdus or emerald.

FIRE SENT UPON THE ALTAR OF ELIJAH.

Car'chemish occupied nearly the site of Hierapolis.

Căr'mel. In form a tolerably continuous ridge, at the W. end of Palestine about 600, and E. about 1600 feet above the sea. It is familiar through its connection with the history of Elijah and Elisha. It is now commonly called Mar Elyas; Kurmel being seldom heard.

Căr'pus, a Christian at Troas (2 Tim. iv. 13).

Carriage. This word occurs only six times in the text of the A. V., and signifies what we now call "baggage." In the margin of 1 Sam. xvii. 20, and xxvi. 5–7, it is employed in the sense of a wagon or cart.

Cărt (Gen. xlv. 19, 27; Num. vii. 3, 7, 8), a vehicle drawn by cattle (2 Sam. vi. 6), to be distinguished from the chariot drawn by horses. Carts and wagons were open or covered (Num. vii. 3), and were used for conveyance.

Carving. The arts of carving and engraving were in much request (Ex. xxxi. 5, xxxv. 33; 1 K. vi. 18, 35; Ps. lxxiv. 6).

Cassia. The accounts of cassia by ancient authors are confused. The cassia-bark of commerce is yielded by various kinds of Cinnamomum, which grow in different parts of India.

CHRIST AND PETER ON THE WATER.

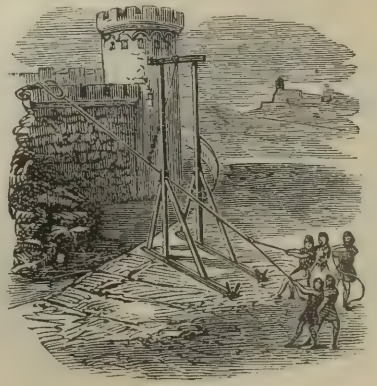
Cas'tor and Pollux (Acts xxviii. 11). The twin sons of Jupiter and Leda; the constellation Gemini. In art represented simply as stars hovering over a ship, or as young men on horseback, with conical caps and stars above them.

Cats occur only in Baruch vi. 22. The context of the passage appears to point to the domesticated animal.

Caterpillar. The Hebrew words seem to be applied to a locust, perhaps in its larva state.



RED CORAL.

Cave. The chalky limestone of which the rocks of Palestine consist, presents a vast number of natural fissures, many of which have been artificially enlarged.

Cedar. The Hebrew erez, rendered "cedar," stands for that tree in most of the passages. The cedar of Lebanon is confined in Syria to one valley of the Lebanon range.

Ce'dron, the name of the brook Kidron, below the eastern wall of Jerusalem (John xviii. 1, only). Beyond was Gethsemane.

Ceiling. The ceilings of the Temple and the palaces of the Jewish kings were formed of cedar planks applied to the beams.

THE CROW.

Cen'chrea, the eastern harbor of Corinth. St. Paul sailed from Cenchreae (Acts xviii. 18). An organized church seems to have been formed here (Rom. xvi. 1).

Censer. A small portable vessel of metal fitted to receive burning coals from the altar, and on which the incense for burning was sprinkled (2 Chr. xxvi. 18; Luke i. 9). The precepts regarding its use are in Num. iv. 14, and in Lev. xvi. 12.

Centurion. [ARMY.]

Cephas. [PETER.]

Chain. Chains were used (1) as badges of office; (2) for ornament; (3) for confining prisoners.

EASTERN BAKER SELLING THIN CAKES.

Chalcedony, only in Rev. xxi. 19. The name is applied to one of the varieties of agate.

Chalde'a. Located on both sides of the Euphrates, and having Babylon for its capital. It extended southward to the Persian Gulf, and northward as far as Ur of the Chaldees.

Chamberlain. Erastus, "the chamberlain" of Corinth, was one of those whose salutations to the Roman Christians are given (Rom. xvi. 23). The office was apparently that of public treasurer. The office held by Blastus, "the king's chamberlain," was different from this (Acts xii. 20). It was a post which involved great intimacy and influence with the king.

HOUSE AND WATER POTS AT CANA OF GALILEE.

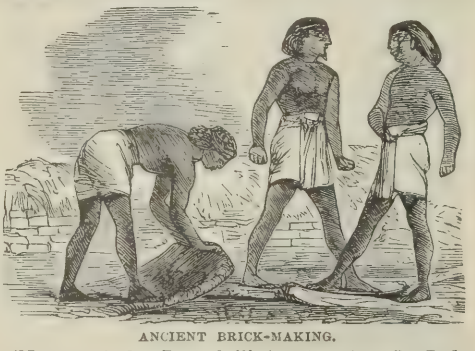
Chame'leon, the translation of the Hebrew coach, some kind of unclean animal, in Lev. xi. 30. Others suppose it to be the lizard, known as the "Monitor of the Nile," a large strong reptile.

Chăm'ois. The translation in Deut. xiv. 5, is incorrect. It is probable some mountain sheep is intended.

RUINS OF AMMON.

Chapiter, the capital of a pillar; also possibly a roll moulding at the top of a building or work of art.

Charger, a shallow vessel for receiving water or blood, also for offerings (Num. vii. 79). The daughter of Herodias brought the head of St. John the Baptist in a charger (Matt. xiv. 8); probably a trencher or platter.



Chariot. The earliest mention of chariots in Scripture is in Gen. xli. 43. They were regarded as among the most important arms of war, though the supplies appear drawn from Egypt. They were attached to one, two, and three horses.

Che'bar, a river in the "land of the Chaldeans" (Ez. i. 3), on the banks of which some of the Jews were located at the captivity, and where Ezekiel saw his earlier visions (Ez. i. 1, iii. 15, 23, &c.).

Che'dorlā'omer, a king of Elam, who with three other chiefs made war upon the kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar, and reduced them to servitude (Gen. xiv. 17).

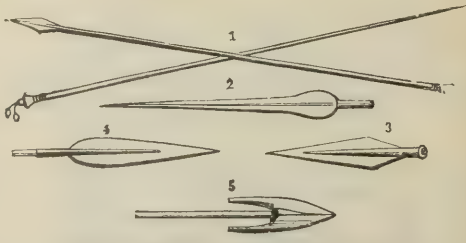
Cheese, mentioned three times in the Bible, and under different Hebrew names (Job x. 10), expressing various degrees of coagulation.

Chē'mosh, the national deity of the Mosabites (Num. xxi. 29; Jer. xlviii. 7, 13, 46). In Judg. xi. 24, also of the Ammonites. Solomon introduced, and Josiah abolished, the worship of Chemosh at Jerusalem (1 K. xi. 7; 2 K. xxiii. 13).

ANCIENT BRICK-MAKING.

Cher'ethites and Pel'ethites, the life-guards of King David (2 Sam. viii. 18; 1 K. i. 38, 44, &c.). Also "executioners and couriers."

Che'rith, The Brook, the wady in which Elijah hid himself during the part of the three years' drought (1 K. xvii. 3, 5). The position of the Cherith has been much disputed. Apparently on the east of Jordan.



ANISE.

Cher'ub, Cher'ubim. The symbolical figure so called, which finds a parallel in the religious insignia of Assyria, Egypt, and Persia, e. g. the sphinx, the winged bulls and lions of Nineveh, &c. The Hebrew idea seems to limit the number. A pair (Ex. xxv. 18, &c.) were on the mercy-seat of the ark; a pair overshadowed it in Solomon's Temple. It seems likely that the word "cherub" meant not only the composite creature-form, of which the man, lion, ox, and eagle were the elements, but, further, some peculiar and mystical form, which Ezekiel, being a priest, would know (Ez. x. 14), but which was kept secret from all others.

Chest. This word is used for the Ark of the Covenant, with two exceptions (Gen. l. 26; and 2 K. xii. 9, 10; 2 Chr. xxiv. 8–11).

Chestnut-tree (Gen. xxx. 37; Ezek. xxxi. 8), spoken of as one of the glories of Assyria, for which the "plane-tree" ought probably to have been substituted. The context indicates some tree which thrives best in moist situations.

EGYPTIAN JAVELINS, DART AND SPEAR HEADS.

Chidon. (NACHON'S THRESHING FLOOR.]

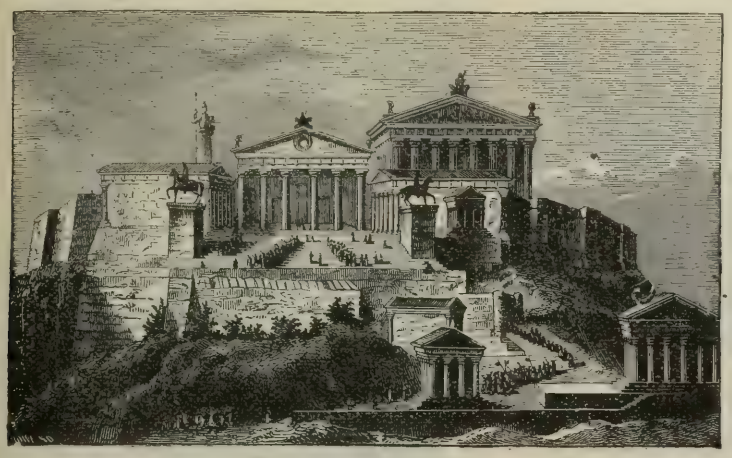
Children. The blessing of offspring, especially of male, is highly valued among Eastern nations. As soon as the child was born, it was washed in a bath, rubbed with salt, and wrapped in swaddling clothes. On the 8th day the rite of circumcision, in the case of a boy, was performed, and a name given. The period of nursing was sometimes prolonged to three years (Is. xlix. 15; 2 Macc. vii. 27). Nurses were employed in some cases (Ex. ii. 9; Gen. xxiv. 59). The time of weaning was an occasion of rejoicing (Gen. xxi. 8). Daughters usually remained in the women's apartments till marriage, or were employed in household work (Macc. iii. 19). The firstborn male children were regarded as devoted to God (Ex. xiii. 13; Num. xviii. 15; Luke ii. 22). The authority of parents was very great, as also the reverence paid them.

BAAL (From Tyrian Coin).

Chil'ion, the son of Elimelech and Naomi, and husband of Orpha (Ruth i. 2–5, iv. 9); "an Ephrathite of Bethlehem-judah."

Chinnereth, Sea of (Num. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xiii. 27), the inland sea, which is most familiarly known as the "lake of Gennesareth." It seems likely that Chinnereth was an ancient Canaanite name.

Chi'os. The position of this island is described in Acts xx. xxi. Its length is about 32 miles, and its breadth from 8 to 18.



IRRIGATING EASTERN SOIL.

Chit'tim, Kit'tim, a family or race descended from Javan (Gen. x. 4; 1 Chr. i. 7). Chittim is frequently noticed in Scripture. Josephus considered Cyprus as the original seat of the Chittim. The name Chittim, which at the first applied to Phoenicians only, passed over to the islands they had occupied.

Chlo'e, a woman mentioned in 1 Cor. i. 11.

THE ACROPOLIS AT ATHENS.

Chorā'zin, one of the cities named in Matt. xi. 21; Luke x. 13. Its site is uncertain.

Christ. [JESUS.]

Christian. The disciples (Acts xi. 26), were first called Christians at Antioch on the Orontes, somewhere about A. D. 43. It is clear that the appellation was not assumed by the Christians themselves. They were known to each other as brethren, disciples, believers, etc.

Chronicles, First and Second Books of. The constant tradition of the Jews is that these books were for the most part compiled by Ezra. The genealogies are obviously from some register, in which were preserved the genealogies of the tribes and families; while the history is from the same documents as the Books of Kings.

Chrŏnŏl'ogy. Three principal systems of Biblical Chronology have been founded, which may be termed the Long System, the Short, and the Rabbinical. The Rabbinical Chronology accepts the biblical numbers, but makes the most arbitrary corrections.

Chrys'olīte (Rev. xxi. 20), identical with the modern Oriental topaz, the tarshish of the Hebrew Bible.

Chrys'oprāse (Rev. xxi. 20), sometimes found in antique Egyptian jewelry set alternately with bits of lapis-lazuli.

Church. The derivation of the word is uncertain. Ecclesia, the Greek word for Church, originally meant an assembly called out by authority. This is the ordinary classical sense. But in the N. T. the word has lost its primary signification.

ANTIOCH.

Chŭ'shan-Rishathoā'im, king of Mesopotamia, who oppressed Israel eight years in the generation following Joshua (Judg. iii. 8).

Chu'za, Chuzas, house-steward of Herod Antipas (Luke viii. 3).

Cĭlic'ia, a province in the S. E. of Asia Minor. It was the native country of St. Paul; hence it was visited by him, Gal. i. 21; Acts ix. 30; and Acts xv. 41.

Cinnamon, a well-known aromatic substance. It is mentioned in Ex. xxx. 23, Prov. vii. 17; Cant. iv. 14, Rev. xviii. 13. It is now found in Sumatra, Borneo, China, &c., but chiefly Ceylon.

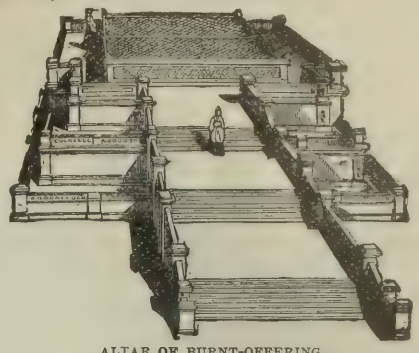
Cin'neroth, All, the small enclosed district north of Tiberias, afterwards known as "the plain of Gennesareth."

Circumcision was peculiarly, though not exclusively, a Jewish rite. It was enjoined upon Abraham as the token of the Covenant (Gen. xvii.). It was thus made a condition of Jewish nationality. Every male child was to be circumcised when eight days old (Lev. xii. 3) on pain of death. Slaves were circumcised (Gen. xvii. 12, 13); and foreigners must have their males circumcised before allowed to partake of the passover (Ex. xii. 48), or become Jewish citizens.

Cis, the father of Saul (Acts xiii. 21), usually called KISH.

Cistern, a receptacle for water, either conducted from an external spring or proceeding from rainfall. The largest sort of public reservoirs is usually called in A. V. "pool;" the smaller "cistern." Both pools and cisterns are frequent throughout Palestine. Jerusalem depends mainly for water upon its cisterns, of which almost every private house possesses one or more. The water is conducted into them from the roofs of the houses during the rainy season. Empty cisterns were sometimes used as prisons and places of confinement.

POOL OF HESHBON.



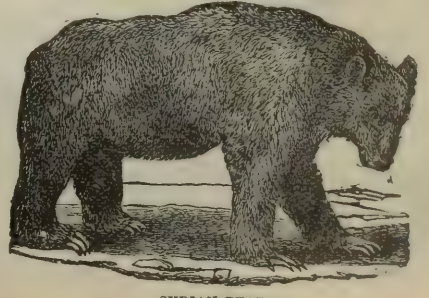
Cithern (1 Macc. iv. 54), a musical instrument, resembling a guitar, probably of Greek origin.

Cities of Refuge, six Levitical cities chosen for refuge to the involuntary homicide until released by the death of the high-priest (Num. xxxv. 6, 13, 15; Josh. xx. 2, 7, 9). There were three on each side of Jordan.

Citizenship. This term has reference to the usages of the Roman empire. The privilege of Roman citizenship was acquired by purchase (Acts xxii. 28), by military services, by favor, or by manumission. The right once obtained descended to children (Acts xxii. 28). Among the privileges a man could not be bound or imprisoned without trial (Acts xxii. 29), still less be scourged (Acts xvi. 37). Another privilege was the appeal (Acts xxv. 11).

Clau'da (Acts xxvii. 16), a small island nearly due west of Cape Matala on the south coast of Crete.

Clau'dia, a Christian woman mentioned in 2 Tim. iv. 21; a British maiden, daughter of king Cogidubnus, an ally of Rome. She appears to have become the wife of Pudens.



ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERING.

Clau'dius, fourth Roman emperor, reigned from 41 to 54 A. D. He was the son of Nero Drusus, was born in Lyons, Aug. 1, B. C. 9 or 10, and lived private and unknown till the day of his being called to the throne, January 24, A. D. 41.

Clay. As the sediment of water remaining in pits or in streets, used in O. T. (Is. lvii. 20; Jer. xxxviii. 6; Ps. xviii. 42), and in N. T. (John ix. 6), a mixture of sand or dust with spittle. It is also found in the sense of potter's clay (Is. xli. 25). Another use of clay was for sealing (Job xxxviii. 14). Our Lord's tomb may have been thus sealed (Matt. xxvii. 66).

Clem'ent (Phil. iv. 2), a fellow-laborer of St. Paul, when at Philippi. It was believed that this Clement was identical with the Bishop of Rome.

Cleo'pas, one of the two going to Emmaus on the day of the resurrection (Luke xxiv. 18). It is a question whether identical with CLEOPHAS or Alphaeus in John xix. 25.

SYRIAN BEAR.

Cleō'phăs. [CLEOPAS; ALPHAEUS.]

Cni'dus (1 Macc. xv. 23; Acts xxvii. 7), a harbor passed by St. Paul. It was situated at the S. W. of the peninsula of Asia Minor, between the islands of Cos and Rhodes (see Acts xxi. 1).

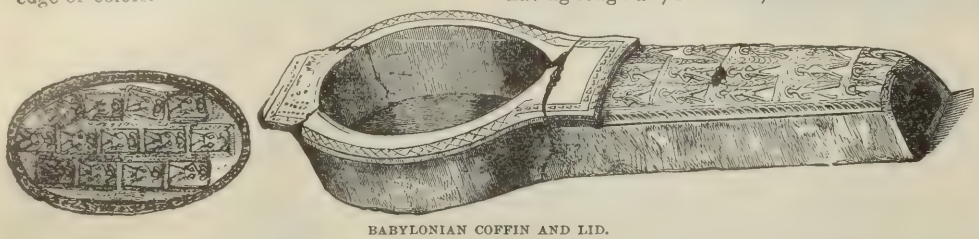
Cock. In the N. T. the "cock" is mentioned in Matt. xxvi. 34, Mark xiv. 30, xiii. 35, &c. We know that the domestic cock and hen were known to the ancient Greeks and Romans. The Romans prized these birds both as articles of food and for cock-fighting.

Cockle (Job xxxi. 40) may signify bad or smutted barley.

Coele-Syr'ia, "the hollow Syria," was the name given by the Greeks to the remarkable valley between Libanus and Anti-Libanus, stretching a distance of nearly a hundred miles. The term was also used in a wider sense.

Coffer, a movable box hanging from the side of a cart (1 Sam. vi. 8, 11, 15).

College, The (2 K. xxii. 14). It is probable that this was the "lower city," built on the hill Akra.

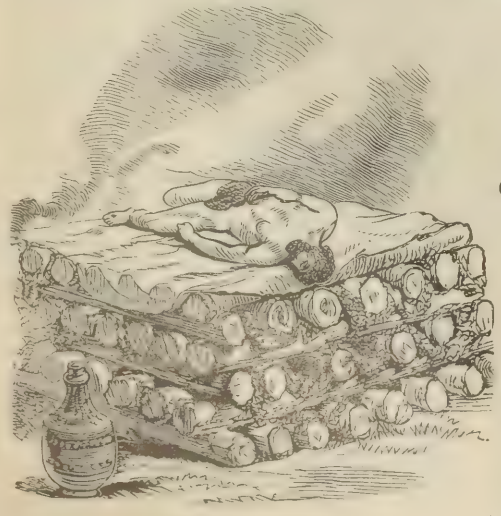


Colony, a designation of Philippi, in Acts xvi. 12.

Colors. The natural colors noticed in the Bible are white, black, red, yellow, and green. The Hebrews appear to have had no scientific knowledge of colors.

Co'ney, a gregarious animal in Palestine, living in caves and clefts of rocks, and erroneously identified with the Rabbit or Coney. The Hyrax satisfies the references to it. Its color is gray or brown; it is scarcely the size of the domestic cat, having long hair, short tail, and round ears.

HOUSE OF UNTEMPERED BRICK.

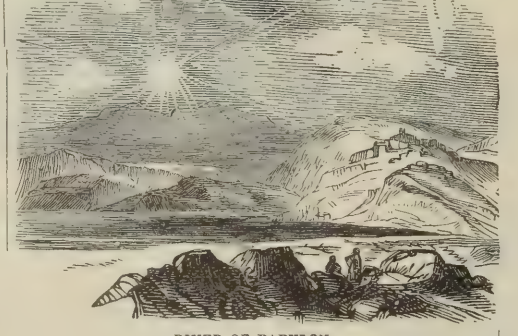


BABYLONIAN COFFIN AND LID.

Colos'se (more properly COLOS'SAE), a city on the Lycus. Hierapolis and Laodicea were in its neighborhood. Colossae fell as these two cities rose in importance. It was close to the great road from Ephesus to the Euphrates. Here Paul founded or confirmed a church.

Colossians, The Epistle to the, written by St. Paul during his first captivity at Rome (Acts xxviii. 16). It was addressed to the Christians of the city of Colossae, and was delivered by Tychicus, whom the Apostle had sent both to them (ch. iv. 7, 8) and to the church of Ephesus (ch. vi. 21). The epistle seems called forth by the information St. Paul had received from Epaphras (ch. iv. 12; Philem. 23) and Onesimus.

Concubine The concubine's condition was a definite one. With regard to the children of wife and concubine, there was no such difference as our illegitimacy implies; the latter were a supplementary family to the former. A concubine would generally be either (1) a Hebrew girl bought; (2) a Gentile captive; (3) a foreign slave bought; or (4) a Canaanitish woman. The rights of (1) and (2) were protected by law (Ex. xxi. 7; Deut. xxi. 10–14), but (3) was unrecognized, and (4) prohibited. Free Hebrew women also might become concubines.



BURNING THE DEAD.

Congrega'tion. This describes the Hebrew people in its collective capacity as a holy community, held by religious bonds. Sometimes it is used in a broad sense (Ex. xii. 19).

Convoca'tion, applied to meetings of a religious character, in contradistinction to congregation.

Co'os, Acts xxi. 1. [Cos.]

Cop'per, always rendered "brass," except in Ezr. viii. 27, and Jer. xv. 12. It was used by the ancients for common purposes. We read of copper, possessed in countless abundance (2 Chr. iv. 18), and used for every kind of instrument.

RIVER OF BABYLON.

Cor'al, the rendering of the Hebrew ramoth, in Job xxviii. 18, and in Ez. xxvii. 16). Pliny says that the Indians valued coral as the Romans valued pearls.

EMBALMING THE DEAD.

Corban, an offering to God, particularly in fulfillment of a vow. The law laid down rules for vows, 1. affirmative; 2. negative (Lev. xxvii.; Num. xxx.). Upon these rules the traditionists enlarged. A person might exempt himself from any inconvenient obligation under plea of corban. It was practices of this sort that our Lord reprehended (Matt. xv. 5; Mark vii. 11).

Cord. The materials varied. The strongest rope was probably made of strips of camel hide; the finer sorts of flax Is. xix. 9). In the N. T. the term is applied to the whip our Saviour made (John ii. 15), and the ropes of a ship (Acts xxvii. 32).

Corian'der. The plant has a round tall stalk; it bears flowers, from which arise spicy seed-corns marked with fine striae. It is mentioned twice in the Bible (Ex. xvi. 31; Num. xi. 7).

VIEW NEAR ASKELON.

Corinth. This city is alike remarkable for its eminence in Greek and Roman history, and its intimate connection with early Christianity. It was a place of great mental and commercial activity; its wealth was proverbial; and the vice and profligacy of its inhabitants universally acknowledged. The worship of Venus was attended with shameful licentiousness. St. Paul planted Christianity here between A. D. 51 and 53.

Corinthians, First Epistle to the, was written by St. Paul toward the close of his stay at Ephesus (Acts xix. 10, xx. 31). This was addressed to the whole body of the (Acts xviii. 8, 10), Judaeo-Gentile (Acts xviii. 4) church of Corinth. CORINTHIANS, SECOND EPISTLE TO THE, was written a few months subsequently, and thus about the autumn of A. D. 57 or 58, previous to the Apostle's stay in Achaia (Acts xx. 3). The place whence written was Macedonia.

ALOES.

Cormorant. The representative in the A. V. of the Hebrew words kaath and shalac. As to the former, see PELICAN. Shalac occurs only as the name of an unclean bird in Lev. xi. 17; Deut. xiv. 17).

Corn. The most common kinds were wheat, barley, spelt (A. V. Ex. ix. 32, and Is. xxviii. 25, "rie;" Ez. iv. 9, "fitches"), and millet. Corn-crops are still reckoned at twentyfold what was sown. From Solomon's time (2 Chr. ii. 10, 15) Palestine was a corn-exporting country, and her grain was largely taken by her commercial neighbor Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 17; comp. Am. viii. 5).

PERSIAN CHAIRS.

Cornē'lius, a Roman centurion in Caesarea (Acts x. 1, &c.). With his household he was baptized by St. Peter, and thus became the first-fruits of the Gentile world to Christ.

Corner. The "corner" of the field was not allowed (Lev. xix. 9) to be wholly reaped. It formed a right of the poor to carry off what was so left.

Cor'ner-stone. Some of the corner-stones in the ancient Temple foundations are 17 or 19 feet long, and 7½ feet thick.

Cornet, a loud-sounding instrument, of the horn of a ram, of a chamois, or of an ox, and used by the Hebrews for signals, for announcing the "Jubilee" (Lev. xxv. 9), for proclaiming the new year, for the purposes of war (Jer. iv. 5, 19; comp. Job xxxix. 25), as well as for sentinels at the watch-towers (Ez. xxxiii. 4, 5).

Cos or Co'os, a small island of the Grecian Archipelago. St. Paul, on the return from his third journey, passed the night here. The chief town (of same name) was on the N. E., to which, perhaps, reference is made in the Acts (xxi. 1).

Council. 1. The great council of the Sanhedrim, at Jerusalem. 2. The lesser courts (Matt. x. 17; Mark xiii. 9); two at Jerusalem, and one in each town of Palestine. 3. A kind of jury or privy council (Acts xxv. 12).

CHEBAR.

Court. An open enclosure, applied in the A. V. to the enclosures of the Tabernacle and the Temple (Ex. xxvii. 9, xl. 33; 1 K. vi. 36, &c.).

Crane. The A. V. is incorrect in rendering sus by "crane." According to the testimony of most of the ancient versions, sus denotes a "swallow."

Cres'cens (2 Tim. iv. 10), an assistant of St. Paul, said to have been one of the seventy disciples.

Crête, the modern Candia. This large island, which closes in the Greek Archipelago on the S., extends 140 miles between its extreme points of Cape SALMONE (Acts xxvii. 7) on the E. and Cape Criumetopon on the W. In early times it was celebrated for its hundred cities. The circumstances of St. Paul's recorded visit are in Acts xxvii. 7).

Cris'pus, ruler of the Jewish synagogue at Corinth (Acts xviii. 8); baptized with his family by St. Paul (1 Cor. i. 14). Tradition makes him Bishop of Aegina.

Cross. The Latin cross, on which our Lord suffered, was in the form of the letter T, and had an upright above the crossbar, on which the "title" was placed. There was a projection from the central stem, on which the body of the sufferer rested, to prevent the weight from tearing away the hands. Whether there was also a support to the feet is doubtful. An inscription was generally placed above the criminal's head. It is a question whether tying or binding to the cross was the more common method. That our Lord was nailed, according to prophecy, is certain. The cross on which our Saviour suffered is said to have been discovered A. D. 326.

SIEGE OF CORINTH.

Crown. This was of ancient and universal use. Both the ordinary priests and the high-priest wore mitres or crowns. The laurel, pine, or parsley crowns given to victors in the great games of Greece are finely alluded to by St. Paul (1 Cor. ix. 25; 2 Tim. ii. 5, &c.).

Crown of Thorns, Matt. xxvii. 29. Our Lord was crowned with thorns in mockery. The object seems to have been insult, and not the infliction of pain.

Crucifix'ion was in use among the Egyptians (Gen. xl. 19), the Carthaginians, the Persians (Esth. vii. 10), the Assyrians, Scythians, Indians, Germans, and from the earliest times among the Greeks and Romans. It was unanimously considered the most horrible form of death.

Cruse, a vessel for holding water, such as carried by Saul when after David (1 Sam. xxvi. 11, 12, 16), and by Elijah (1 K. xix. 6).

Crystal. The Greek word occurs in Rev. iv. 6, xxii. 1. It may mean either "ice" or "crystal."

Cubit. [MEASURES.]

Cuckoo. The Hebrew word occurs twice only (Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 15), as some unclean bird, and may indicate some of the larger petrels east of the Mediterranean.

Cucumbers. This occurs in Num. xi. 5. Egypt produces excellent cucumbers, melons, &c.

Cum'min (Is. xxviii. 25, 27; Matt. xxiii. 23), an umbelliferous plant something like fennel. The seeds have a bitterish warm taste with an aromatic flavor.

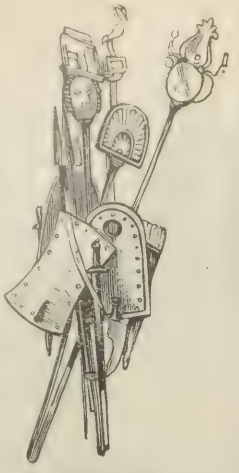
Cup. The cups of the Jews, of metal or earthenware, were possibly borrowed, in shape and design, from Egypt and from the Phoenicians. Egyptian cups were with handles or without. In Solomon's time all his drinking vessels were of gold (1 K. x. 21).

BIRD-CATCHING.

Cupbearer. An officer of high rank with Egyptian, Persian, Assyrian, as well as Jewish monarchs (1 K. x. 5). The chief cupbearer, or butler, to the king of Egypt was the means of raising Joseph to his high position (Gen. xl. 1, 21, xli. 9). Nehemiah was cupbearer to the king of Persia (Neh. i. 11, ii. 1).

Curtains. Three Hebrew terms are translated by this word, used frequently in Ex. and once in Num. and Isa. In Isaiah (xl 22) the meaning of the Hebrew word is doubtful.

Cush, a son of Ham, apparently the eldest, and a territory occupied by his descendants. 1. In the genealogy of Noah's children Cush seems an individual, for it is said "Cush begat Nimrod" (Gen. x. 8; 1 Chr. i. 10). 2. Cush as a country appears African in all passages except Gen. ii. 13. We may thus distinguish a primeval and a post-diluvian Cush. The former was encompassed by Gihon. The latter probably was Ethiopia above Egypt. The Cushites appear to have spread along tracts extending from the higher Nile to the Euphrates and Tigris.

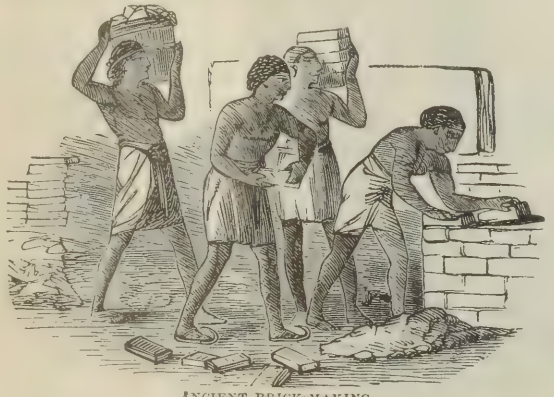


Cutting off from the People. [EXCOMMUNICATION.]

Cuttings [in the Flesh], Lev. xix. 28. The ground of the prohibition will be found in the superstitious or inhuman practices prevailing among heathen nations.

LED INTO CAPTIVITY.

Cymbal, Cymbals, a percussive musical instrument. Two kinds are mentioned in Ps. cl. 5, "loud cymbals" or castagnettes, and "high-sounding cymbals." The former consisted of four small plates of brass or some metal; two plates were attached to each hand, and were struck together. The latter consisted of two larger plates, one held in each hand.

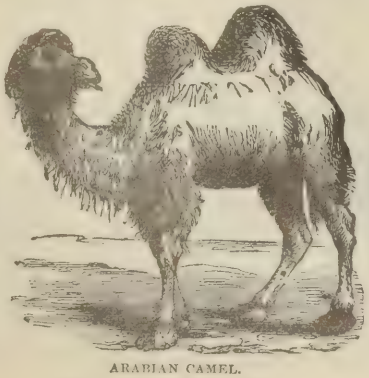


ROMAN ARMS.

Cypress. The Hebrew word is only in Is. xliv. 14. The true cypress is a native of the Taurus. The Hebrew points to some tree with a hard grain.

Cy'prus. This island was in the Mediterranean. The first notice of it in the N. T. is in Acts iv. 36, as the native place of Barnabas. In Acts xi. 19, 20, it appears with the earliest spreading of Christianity, and again with the journeys of St. Paul (Acts xiii. 4–13, xv. 39, xxi. 3), and with his voyage to Rome (xxvii. 4). The island became a Roman province (B. C. 58).

Cyrē'ne, the principal city of that part of northern Africa anciently called Cyrenaica. Many Jews lived in Cyrene. Simon, who bore our Saviour's cross (Matt. xxvii. 32; Mark xv. 21; Luke xxiii. 26) was a native of Cyrene. Jewish dwellers in Cyrenaica were in Jerusalem at Pentecost (Acts ii. 10). Christian converts from Cyrene contributed to the first Gentile church at Antioch (xi. 20).



Cyrē'niŭs, The English rendering in the A. V. of the Roman name of QUIRINUS. The full name is Publius Sulpicius Quirinus. He was consul B. C. 12, and made governor of Syria after the banishment of Archelaus in A. D. 6. He made, both in Syria and in Judaea, a census. There is good reason for believing that Quirinus was twice governor of Syria.

ANCIENT BRICK-MAKING.

Cy'rus, founder of the Persian empire (see Dan.

ARABIAN CAMEL.

vi. 28, x. 1, 13; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, 23). In B. C. 546 (?) he defeated Croesus. Babylon fell before his army, and the ancient dominions of Assyria were added to his empire (B. C. 538). His tomb is still shown at Pasargadae. An inspired prophet (Is. xliv. 28) recognized in him "a shepherd" of the Lord, an "anointed" king (Is. xlv. 1). The edict of Cyrus for the rebuilding of the Temple (2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, 23; Ezr. i. 1-4, iii. 7, iv. 3, v. 13, 17, vi. 3) was in fact the beginning of Judaism.

Dā'gon (1 Sam. v. 3, 4), the national god of the Philistines. Temples of Dagon were at Gaza (Judg. xvi. 21–30) and Ashdod (1 Sam. v. 5, 6; 1 Chr. x. 10). Dagon was represented with the face and hands of a man and the tail of a fish (1 Sam. v. 5).

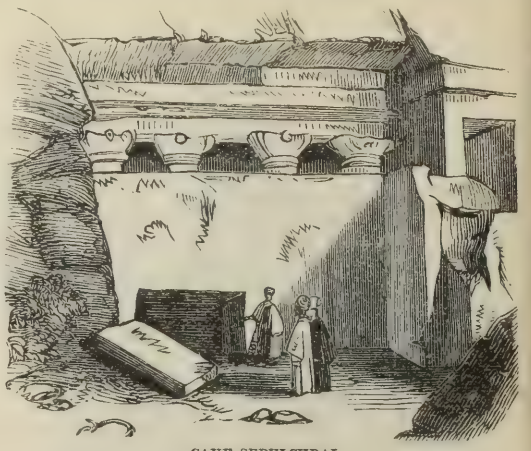
Dălmanū'tha, a town on the west side of the Sea of Galilee near Magdala (Matt. xv. 39, and Mark viii. 10). [MAGDALA.]

Dalmā'tia, a mountainous district on the Adriatic Sea. St. Paul sent Titus there (2 Tim. iv. 10), and himself preached in its neighborhood (Rom. xv. 19).

Dām'aris, an Athenian woman converted by St. Paul (Acts xvii. 34). Perhaps the wife of Dionysius the Areopagite.



Dămăs'cus, one of the most ancient and important of the cities of Syria. It is in a plain east of the great chain of Anti-Libanus. According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, the son of Aram, and grandson of Shem. It is first mentioned in connection with Abraham (Gen. xiv. 15, xv. 2). Certain localities in Damascus are shown as the site of Scriptural events. A "long wide thoroughfare," leading to the palace of the Pasha, is "called by the guides 'Straight'" (Acts ix. 11). The house of Judas is shown. That of Ananias is also pointed out. The point of the walls at which St. Paul was let down by a basket (Acts ix. 25; 2 Cor. xi. 33) is also shown.

Dan. 1. Fifth son of Jacob, and the first of Bilhah, Rachel's maid (Gen. xxx. 6). The origin of the name is in the exclamation of Rachel—"God hath judged me (dananni) . . . and given me a son; therefore she called his name Dan," i. e. "judge." The records of Dan are meagre. Only one son is attributed to him (Gen. xlvi. 23); but when the people were numbered in Sinai, his tribe contained 62,700 men able to serve. 2. The well-known city, the most northern landmark of

TOMB OF CYRUS.

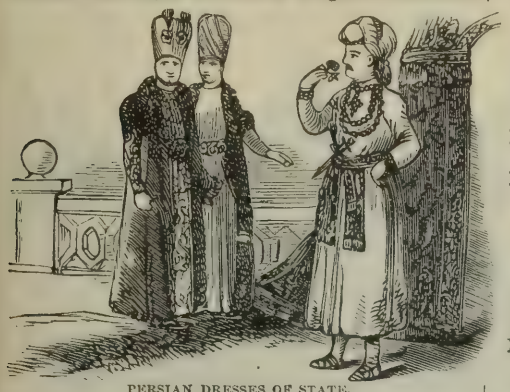
CAVE SEPULCHRAL.

Palestine, in the common expression "from Dan even to Beersheba."

Dance. The dance is spoken of in Holy Scripture as symbolical of rejoicing, and is often coupled for the sake of contrast with mourning, as in Eccl. iii. 4 (comp. Ps. xxx. 11; Matt. xi. 17).

Dance. By this word is rendered the Hebrew machol, a musical instrument of percussion. It is believed to have been made of metal, open like a ring; had many small bells attached.

Daniel. The fourth of "the greater prophets." Nothing is known of his parentage or family. He appears, however, to have been of royal or noble descent (Dan. i. 3), and to have possessed personal endowments (Dan. i. 4). He was taken to Babylon a captive, where he rose to great honor on account of his wisdom. His eminence is recorded in Ezek. xiv. 13, 14, 28; ii. 3



COLLECTING DUNG FOR FUEL.

THE BOOK OF. This is one of the most wonderful books of the O. T. Its comprehensive predictions embrace the history of the world, as also that of the Church under the Jewish and Christian dispensations, from the times in which he lived unto the end of all things. He alone foretold the precise time when the Messiah should be born. The first six chapters on historical, the remainder strictly prophetical.

Daniel, Apocryphal Additions to. The Greek translations of Daniel, like of Esther, contain several pieces not found in the original. The most important of these are in the Apocrypha of the English Bible under the titles of The Song of the Three Holy Children, The History of Susannah, and The History of . . . Bel and the Dragon. They indicate the hand of an Alexandrine writer; and it is not unlikely that the translator of Daniel wrought up traditions already current, and appended them.

Daric (A. V. "dram:" Ezr. ii. 69; Neh. vii. 70, 71, 72), a gold coin current in Palestine in the period after the return from Babylon.

Darius, the name of several kings of Media and PERSIAN DRESSES OF STATE.

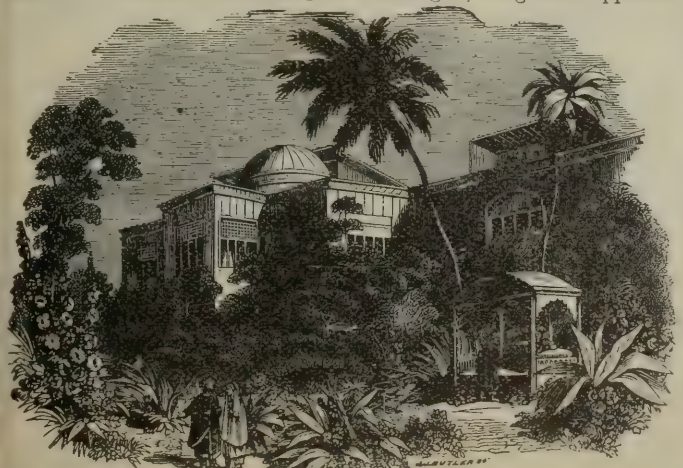
Persia. Three are mentioned in the O. T. 1. DARIUS the MEDE (Dan. xi. 1, vi. 1), "the son of Ahasuerus of the seed of the Medes" (ix. 1), who succeeded to Belshazzar (Dan. v. 31; ix. 1). Daniel was advanced by him to the highest dignity (Dan. vi. 1, ff.). He is probably "Astyages," the last king of the Medes. 2. DARIUS the son of HYSTASPES the founder of the Perso-Arian dynasty. He restored to the Jews the privileges they had lost (Ezr. v. 1, &c.; vi. 1. &c.). 3. DARIUS THE PERSIAN (Neh. xii. 22).

Darkness. The plague of Darkness in Egypt has been ascribed to non-miraculous agency. The darkness "over all the land" (Matt. xxvii. 45) attending the crucifixion has been similarly attributed to an eclipse.

Dates, 2 Chr. xxxi. 5, marg. [PALM TREE.]



Daugh'ter. The word is used in Scripture also for granddaughter or other female descendant.

David, youngest son of Jesse. His mother's name is unknown. His father was of great age in David's youth (1 Sam. xvii. 12). He became Israel's greatest king. He also wrote most of the Psalms. His history, with that of his family, embraces a large and interesting space in the sacred writings. He died at about the age of seventy, and "was buried in the city of David." Christ being a lineal descendant, is called "the Son of David."

Day. The civil day varies in different nations: the Babylonians reckoned it from sunrise to sunrise; the Romans from midnight to midnight; the Athenians from sunset to sunset. The Hebrews adopted the latter reckoning (Lev. xxiii. 32), as also specifications of the parts of the natural day. In the N. T. we have four watches, a division borrowed from the Greeks and Romans. These were, 1. from twilight till 9 o'clock (Mark xi. 11; John xx. 19); 2. midnight, from 9 till 12 o'clock (Mark xiii. 35); 3. till 3 in the morning (Mark xiii. 35; 3 Macc. v. 23); 4. till daybreak (John xviii. 28). The word held to mean "hour" is first found in Dan. iii. 6, 15. v. 5.

Daysman, an old English term, meaning umpire or arbitrator (Job ix. 33).

Dēa'con. The office appears in the N. T. as the co-relative of Bishop. [BISHOP.] The two are mentioned in Phil. i. 1; 1 Tim. iii. 2, 8. It appears first as implying subordinate activity (1 Cor. iii. 5; 2 Cor. vi. 4). The narrative of Acts vi. is commonly referred to as giving an account of the institution of this office.

Dēa'coness. The word diakonos in Rom. xvi. 1 (A. V. "servant") has led to the conclusion that there existed in the Apostolic age an order of women exercising in relation to their own sex functions analogous to those of the deacons.

Dead Sea. This name appears not to have existed until the 2d century after Christ. In the O. T. the lake is called "the Salt Sea."

Dēb'ōrah. 1. The nurse of Rebekah (Gen. xxxv. 1). 2. A prophetess who judged Israel (Judg. iv. v.). She lived in Mount Ephraim (Judg. iv. 5). Lapidoth was probably her husband, and not Barak. She was gifted with prophetic command (Judg. iv. 6, 14, v. 7). Under her direction Barak encamped on Tabor. Deborah's prophecy was fulfilled (Judg. iv. 9).

Decap'olis (Matt. iv. 25, Mark v. 20, and vii. 31), a general appellation for a large district extending along both sides of the Jordan.

Dedication, Feast of the, the festival to commemorate the purging of the Temple and rebuilding of the altar after Judas Maccabaeus had driven out the Syrians, B. C. 164.

Degrees, Songs of, a title given to fifteen Psalms, from cxx. to cxxxiv. inclusive. Pilgrim songs, sung by the people as they went up to Jerusalem.

Delī'lah, a woman of the valley of Sorek, beloved by Samson (Judg. xvi. 4–18). There seems little doubt that she was a Philistine courtesan. [SAMSON.]

Dēluge. [NOAH.]

Dē'lus (1 Macc. xv. 23), a small island in the Aegaean Sea, celebrated as the birthplace of Apollo and his sister Artemis (Diana).

Dē'mas, probably a contraction from Demetrius, or Demarchus, a companion of St. Paul (Philem.

ARABS ERECTING A TENT.

24; Col. iv. 14). Later (2 Tim. iv. 10) we find he deserted the apostle through love of this world.

Demē'trius, a maker of silver shrines at Ephesus Acts xix. 24). These were small models of the great temple Ephesian Artemis, with her statue, carried on journeys, and placed on houses, as charms. Demetrius I., surnamed Soter, son of Selencus Philopator, and grandson of Anteochus the Great. Demetrius II., "The Victorius" (Nicator), elder son of Demetrius Soter. He was, with his brother, sent by his father with treasure to Cnidus when Alex. Balas laid claim to the throne of Syra.

Demon. Its usage is various. In the Gospels demons are spoken of as spiritual beings, at enmity with God, and having power to afflict man. They "believe and tremble" (James ii. 19); they recognize the Son of God (Matt. viii. 29; Luke vi. 41), and the power of His name (Acts xix. 15); and look in terror to the judgment to come (Matt. viii. 29).

Demō'niacs, frequently in the N. T. applied to persons under the possession of a demon. It is concluded that, since the symptoms of the affliction were frequently those of bodily disease, the demoniacs were merely persons suffering under unusual diseases of body and mind. But we are led to the literal interpretation of these passages, that there are subjects of the Evil One, who, in the days of the Lord and His Apostles especially, were permitted to exercise a direct influence over the souls and bodies of certain men.

Dena'rius, A. V. "penny," Matt. xviii. 28 a Roman silver coin in the time of Our Saviour and the Apostles. From the parable it would seem that a denarius was then the ordinary pay for a day's labor (Matt. xx. 2, 4, 7, 9, 10, 13).

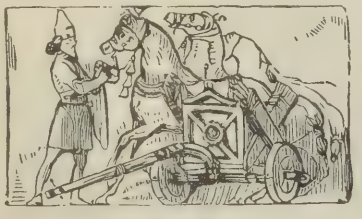
Deputy, the rendering of the Greek word which signifies "proconsul" (Acts xiii. 7, 8, 12, xix. 38).



Der'be (Acts xiv. 20, 21, xvi. 1, xx. 4). It was in the eastern part of the great upland plain of LYCAONIA.

Desert. A "desert," in the historical books, denoted a definite locality, and not answering to the common conception of a "desert."

VIEW NEAR ASKELON.

Deuteron'omy—"the repetition of the law"—consists chiefly of three discourses delivered by Moses shortly before his death. Subjoined are the Song and Blessing of Moses, and the story of his death. Modern critics say that Deuteronomy is of later origin than the other four books of the Pentateuch; but the book bears witness to its own authorship (xxxi. 19), and was of course added by a later hand, and perhaps formed originally the beginning of the book of Joshua.

ANCIENT CHARIOT.

Devil. The name describes Satan as slandering God to man, and man to God.

Dew. This in summer is so copious in Palestine that it supplies to some extent the absence of rain (Ecclus. xviii. 16, xliii. 22).

Di'adem. What the "diadem" of the Jews was, we know not. That of other nations of antiquity was a fillet of silk, two inches broad, bound round the head and tied behind. Its color was generally white, sometimes blue, and enriched with gems (Zech. ix. 16) and gold (Rev. ix. 7).

Di'al. The word ma'aloth is the same as that rendered "steps" in A. V. (Ex. xx. 26; 1 K. x. 19), and "degrees" in A. V. (2 K. xx. 9, 10, 11; Is. xxxviii. 8), where we should read the "degrees" rather than the "dial" of Ahaz. The best course is to consider that the ma'aloth were really stairs, and that the shadow of some column or obelisk fell on a greater or smaller number, according as the sun was low or high.

Diamond. A precious stone, the third in the second row on the breastplate of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 18, xxxix. 11). Some suppose the "emerald."

Dian'a. The Ephesian Diana is to be identified with Astarte and other female divinities of the East. The head wore a mural crown, each hand held a bar of metal, and the lower part ended in a rude block. This idol was believed to have fallen down from heaven (Acts xix. 35).

Didrachmon. [MONEY; SHEKEL.]

Did'ymus, that is, the Twin, a surname of the Apostle Thomas (John xi. 16, xx. 24, xxi. 2).

Di'nah, the daughter of Jacob by Leah (Gen. xxx. 21). She accompanied her father from Mesopotamia to Canaan, and was violated by Shechem the son of Hamor, the chieftain of the territory (Gen. xxxiv.) Shechem proposed the usual reparation by paying a sum and marrying her (Gen. xxxiv. 12). The sons of Jacob demanded, as a condition, the circumcision of the Shechemites. They assented; and on the third day, when the pain and fever resulting from the operation were at the highest, Simeon and Levi, own brothers to Dinah, attacked them unexpectedly, slew all the males, and plundered their city.

DELUS, A GREEK ISLAND.

Dionys'ia, "the feast of Bacchus," which was celebrated with wild extravagance and licentious enthusiasm.

Dionys'iŭs the Areopagite (Acts xvii. 34), an eminent Athenian, converted to Christianity by the preaching of St. Paul. He is said to have been first bishop of Athens.

Diony'sus (2 Macc. xiv. 33; 3 Macc. ii. 29), also called BACCHUS, the god of wine.

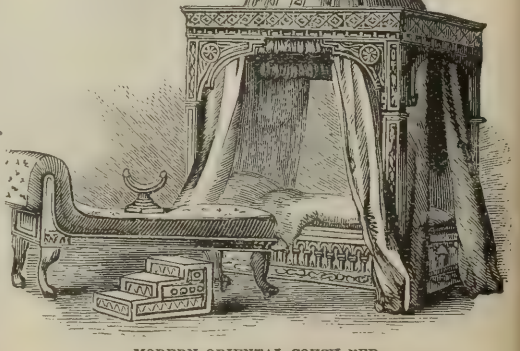
Diot'rephes, a Christian mentioned in 3 John 9, of whom nothing is known.

Dish. [BASIN; CHARGER.] In ancient Egypt, and also in Judaea, guests at the table handled their food with the fingers.

Dispersion, The Jews of the, or simply THE DISPERSION, was the general title applied to those Jews who remained settled in foreign countries after the return from the Babylonian exile.

Div'ina'tion. Numerous forms of divination are mentioned, such as by rods (Hos. iv. 12); by arrows (Ez. xxi. 21); by cups (Gen. xliv. 5); Teraphim (Zech. x. 2; Ez. xxi. 21; 1 Sam. xv. 23) [TERAPHIM]; by the liver (Ez. xxi. 21); by dreams (Deut. xiii. 2, 3; Judg. vii. 13; Jer. xxiii. 32); oracles (Is. xli. 21–24, xliv. 7). Moses forbade every species. At our Lord's coming, imposture was rampant. Hence the lucrative trades of such men as Simon Magus (Acts viii. 9), Bar-jesus (Acts viii. 6, 8), and others, as well as the dealers in magical books (Acts xix. 19).

AT CAESAR'S JUDGMENT BAR.



ANCIENT CHARIOT OF WAR.

Divorce. The law regulating this subject is found Deut. xxiv. 1–4, and the cases in which the right of a husband to divorce his wife was lost, are stated ib. xxii. 19, 29. The ground of divorce the Jewish doctors differed in.

Do'eg, an Idumaean, chief of Saul's herdmen. When Ahimelech gave David the sword of Goliath, he gave information to Saul, and himself executed the king's order to destroy the priests of Nob, with their families (1 Sam. xxi. 7, xxii. 9, 18, 22; Ps. lii.).

Dog, an animal frequently mentioned in Scripture. It was used by the Hebrews as a watch for houses (Is. lvi. 10), and for guarding flocks (Job xxx. 1). Then, as now, troops of hungry and semi-wild dogs used to wander about the fields and cities, devouring dead bodies and other offal (1 K. xiv. 11, xvi. 4, xxi. 19, 23, xxii. 38; 2 K. ix. 10, 36; Jer. xv. 3; Ps. lix. 6, 14).

Dor'cas. [TABITHA.]

Do'than, first mentioned (Gen. xxxvii. 17) with the history of Joseph. It next appears as the residence of Elisha (2 K. vi. 13). Later we encounter it under the name of Dothaim (Jud. iv. 6, vii. 3, 18, viii. 3). It was 12 miles to the N. of Sebaste (Samaria).

Dove. The dove's rapidity of flight is alluded to in Ps. lv. 6; its plumage in Ps. lxviii. 13; its voice in Is. xxxviii. 14, Nah. ii. 7; its harmlessness in Matt. x. 16; its simplicity in Hos. vii. 11, and its amativeness in Cant. i. 15, ii. 14. Doves are domesticated in many parts of the East.

Dove's Dung. Various explanations have been given of 2 K. vi. 25. Bochart has labored to show that it denotes a species of cicer, "chick-pea," which he says the Arabs call sometimes improperly "dove's or sparrow's dung."

Drachm (2 Macc. iv. 19, x. 20, xii. 43; Luke xv. 8, 9), a Greek silver coin, varying in weight. In Luke (A. V. "piece of silver") denarii seem to be intended.

Drag'on. The translators of the A. V. have rendered "dragon" the two Hebrew words Tan and Tannin, which appear distinct in meaning. I. The former refers rather to some wild beast than to a serpent. II. The word tannin seems to refer to any great monster, whether of land or sea, being more usually applied to some kind of serpent or reptile.

BABYLONISH COLUMN.

APPROACH TO JERUSALEM.

In the Apocalypse it is applied metaphorically to "the old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan."

Dram. [DARIC.]

Dreams. Under the Christian dispensation, while we read frequently of trances and visions, dreams are never referred to as vehicles of divine revelation.

Dress. The art of weaving hair was known to the Hebrews at an early period (Ex. xxvi. 7, xxxv. 6). Wool, we may presume, was introduced at a very early period (Gen. xxxviii. 12; Lev. xiii. 47; Deut. xxii. 11; &c.). It is probable that the acquaintance of the Hebrews with linen, and perhaps cotton, dates from the captivity in Egypt (1 Chr. iv. 21). Silk was not introduced until a very late period (Rev. xviii. 12). The use of mixed material, such as wool and flax, was forbidden (Lev. xix. 19; Deut. xxii. 11).

Drink, Strong. The following beverages were known to the Jews: 1. Beer, introduced from Egypt. It was made of barley; certain herbs were used for hops. 2. Cider, noticed as apple-wine. 3. Honey-wine, of two sorts. 4. Date-wine. 5. Various others are enumerated by Pliny.

Dromedary. [CAMEL.]

Drusil'la, daughter of Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 1, 19, ff.) and Cypros. She was married to Azizus, king of Emesa. Soon after, Felix, procurator of Judaea, brought about her seduction, and took her as his wife. Felix had by Drusilla a son, who, with his mother, perished in the eruption of Vesuvius under Titus.

Dulcimer, a musical instrument (Dan. iii. 5, 15), probably the bagpipe.

Dung. The uses of dung were twofold, as manure and as fuel. The mode of applying manure to trees was by digging holes about their roots and inserting it (Luke xiii. 8). Particular directions were laid down in the law to enforce cleanliness with regard to human ordure (Deut. xxiii. 12, ff.). The difficulty of procuring fuel in Syria, Arabia, and Egypt, has made dung in all ages valuable as a substitute.

Dungeon. [PRISON.]

Du'ra, the plain where Nebuchadnezzar set up the golden image (Dan. iii. 1), sometimes identified with a tract on the left bank of the Tigris, where the name Dur is still found.

Dust. [MOURNING.]

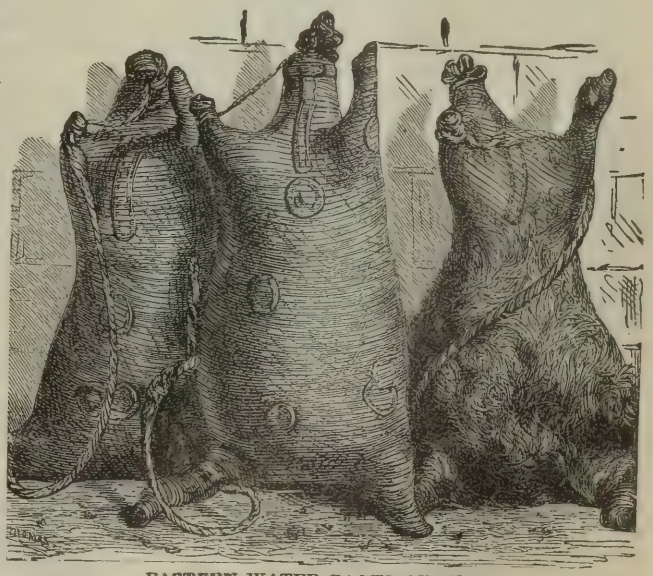
Eagle. The Hebrew word may denote a particular species of the Falconidae, as in Lev. xi. 13; Deut. xiv. 12, but the term is used also to express the griffon vulture. Four distinct kinds of eagles have been observed in Palestine, viz. the golden eagle, the spotted eagle, the imperial eagle, and the very common Circaetos gallicus. The figure of an eagle has been long a favorite military ensign. The Persians so employed it; as also the Assyrians and the Romans.

Earnest (2 Cor. i. 22, v. 5; Eph. i. 14). The Hebrew word was used generally for pledge (Gen. xxxviii. 17), and in its cognate forms for surety (Prov. xvii. 18) and hostage (2 K. xiv. 14).

Ear'rings. The material was generally gold (Ex. xxxii. 2), and their form circular. They were worn by women and youth. The earring appears to have been regarded with superstitious reverence.

Earth. The earth was regarded as the universe itself, every other body—the heavens, sun, moon, and stars—being subsidiary to it. There seem traces of the idea that the world was a disk (Is. xl. 22) bordered by the ocean, with Jerusalem as its centre.

Earth'enware. [POTTERY.]



Earth'quake. Earthquakes, more or less violent, are of frequent occurrence in Palestine. The most remarkable occurred in the reign of Uzziah (Am. i. 1; Zech. xiv. 5). From Zech. xiv. 4, we infer a great convulsion. An earthquake occurred at the time of our Saviour's crucifixion (Matt. xxvii. 51–54), which may be deemed miraculous from the conjunction of circumstances.

East. The Hebrew terms, descriptive of the east, differ; (1 kedem properly means that which is before or in front of; (2) mizrach means the place of the sun's rising. And hence the application of the term (Gen. xxv. 6) to the lands lying immediately eastward of Palestine, viz. Arabia, Mesopotamia, and Babylonia; on the other hand mizrach is used of the far east (Is. xli. 2, 25, xliii. 5, xlvi. 11).

EASTERN WATER SACKS OF SKINS.

Easter. This word in Acts xii. 4, is noticeable as an example of want of consistency in the translators. At the last revision Passover was substituted in all passages but this.

E'bal, Mount, a mount in the promised land, on which, according to the command of Moses, the Israelites were to "put" the curse which should fall upon them if they disobeyed Jehovah. The blessing consequent on obedience was on Mount Gerizim (Deut. xi. 26–29). Ebal and Gerizim are the mounts which form the sides of the fertile valley in which lies Nablus.

E'bed-Me'lech, an Aethiopian eunuch in the service of king Zedekiah, through whose interference Jeremiah was released (Jer. xxxviii. 7, ff., xxxix. 15, ff.).

Eb'en-e'zer ("the stone of help"), a stone set up by Samuel after a signal defeat of the Philistines, as a memorial of the "help" from Jehovah

(1 Sam. vii. 12). Its position is between MIZPEH and SHEN.

Ebony (Ez. xxvii. 15). The best kind of ebony is yielded by the Diospyros ebenum, a tree which grows in Ceylon and Southern India.

Ecbătăna. Many commentators in Ezr. vi. 2, translate it "in a coffer." In the apocryphal books Ecbatana is frequently mentioned (Tob. iii. 7, xiv. 12, 14; Jud. i. 1, 2; 2 Macc. ix. 3, &c.). Two cities of the name seem to have existed in ancient times, one the capital of Northern Media, the other the metropolis of Media Magna.

COAT, OR "ABA." COAT, OR TUNIC.

Ecclēsiās'tēs. The title is in Hebrew Koheleth, a feminine noun, signifying one who speaks publicly in an assembly, and hence rendered Ecclesiastes.

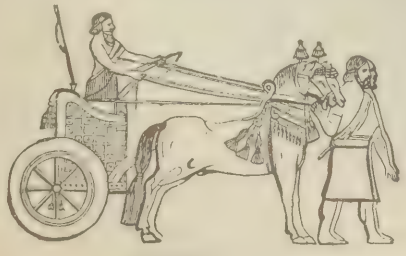
Ecclesias'ticus, one of the books of the Apocrypha, called in the Septuagint THE WISDOM OF JESUS THE SON OF SIRACH. We know nothing of the author.



CHAINED TO THE DEAD.

Eclipse of the Sun. Passages in the prophets allude to this phenomenon (Am. viii. 9; Mic. iii. 6; Zech. xiv. 6; Joel ii. 10, 31, iii. 15). The darkness at the crucifixion cannot be attributed to an eclipse, as the moon was at the full at the time of the Passover.

E'dar, Tower of, named only in Gen. xxxv. 21. According to Jerome it was 1000 paces from Bethlehem.

Eden. 1. The first residence of man, called Paradise. The latter is a word of Persian origin, and describes an extensive pleasure land. 2. One of the marts which supplied Tyre with embroidered stuffs. 3. BETH-EDEN, "house of pleasure;"

ANCIENT CHARIOT.

probably a country residence of the kings of Damascus.

E'dom, Idume'a, or Idumae'a. The name Edom was given to Esau when he sold his birthright to Jacob for a meal of lentil pottage. The name Edom signifies "red" (Gen. xxv. 29–34). The country which the Lord gave to Esau was called the "field of Edom" (Gen. xxxii. 3), and his descendants were called the Edomites.

Egyptian High-Priest's Dress.

Education. Nothing is more carefully inculcated in the Law than the duty of parents to teach its precepts and principles (Ex. xii. 26, xiii. 8, 14; Deut. iv. 5, 9, 10; vi. 2, 7, 20, &c.), yet there is little trace among the Hebrews of education in any other subjects.

Eg'lah, one of David's wives during his reign in Hebron (2 Sam. iii. 5; 1 Chr. iii. 3). According to tradition, she was Michal.

Eg'lon. 1. A king of the Moabites (Judg. iii. 12, ff.), who crossed the Jordan and took "the city of palm-trees." He was slain by Ehud. 2. A town of Judah in the low country (Josh. xv. 39).

Egypt, the northeastern angle of Africa. Its limits appear always nearly the same. In Ezekiel (xxix. 10, xxx. 6) spoken of as extending from Migdol to Syene, the same limits as at present. The name of Egypt in the Bible is "Mizraim." The Arabic name of Egypt, Mizr, signifies "red mud." Egypt is also called in the Bible "the land of Ham" Ps. cv. 23, 27; comp. lxxviii. 51). The common ancient Egyptian name of the country is written in hieroglyphics KEM. Under the Pharaohs Egypt was divided into Upper and Lower, "the two regions." The general appearance of the country cannot have greatly changed since the days of Moses. The whole country is remarkable for its extreme fertility. The inundation of the Nile fertilizes and sustains the country, and makes the river its chief blessing. The Nile was on this account anciently worshipped. As early as the age of the Great Pyramid it must have been densely populated.

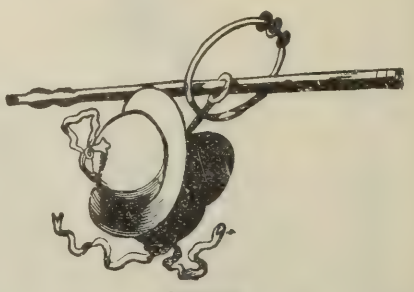
E'hud. Son of Gera of the tribe of Benjamin (Judg. iii. 15), the second Judge of the Israelites. He was chosen to destroy Eglon. He was very strong, and left-handed.

EGYPTIAN COCK.

Ek'ron. A Philistine town. Akir, the modern representative, lies 5 miles S. W. of Ramleh. In the Apocrypha it appears as ACCARON (1 Macc. x. 89, only).

E'lah. 1. Son and successor of Baasha, king of Israel (1 K. xvi. 8–10); his reign lasted little more than a year. He was killed, while drunk, by Zimri. 2. Father of Hoshea, the last king of Israel (2 K. xv. 30, xvii. 1).

Elah, The Valley of. A valley in which the Israelites were encamped against the Philistines when David killed Goliath (1 Sam. xvii. 2, 19).



E'lam seems to have been the name of a man, the son of Shem (Gen. x. 22; 1 Chr. i. 17). Commonly, however, the appellation of a country (Gen. xiv. 1, 9; Is. xi. 11; Jer. xxv. 25, &c.).

E'lath, E'loth, the name of a town in the land of Edom, and situate at the head of the Arabian Gulf, which was thence called the Elantic Gulf.

El-Beth'el, the name Jacob bestowed on the place at which God appeared to him when flying from Esau (Gen. xxv. 7).

El'dad and Me'dad, two of the 70 elders to whom was communicated the prophetic power of Moses (Num. xi. 16, 26).

Elder. The term elder or old man was one of extensive use, as an official title, among the Hebrews and the surrounding nations. It had reference to various offices (Gen. xxiv. 2, l. 7; 2 Sam. xii. 17; Ez. xxvii. 9). Wherever a patriarchal system is in force, the office of the elder will be found. The earliest notice of the elders as a political body is at the time of the Exodus. Lastly at the commencement of the Christian era, when they are noticed as a distinct body from the Sanhedrim. (Luke xxii. 66; Acts xxii. 5).

E.leā'zar, third son of Aaron, by Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab. With his brother Ithamar he ministered as a priest during their father's lifetime, and immediately before his death was invested on Mount Hor with the sacred garments, as the successor of Aaron in the office of high-priest (Num. xx. 28). The time of his death is not mentioned.

El-elo'he-Is'rael, the name bestowed by Jacob on the altar he erected facing the city of Shechem (Gen. xxxiii. 19, 20).

Elephant. The word is found as the marginal reading to Behemoth, in Job. xl. 15. "Elephant's teeth" is the marginal reading for "ivory" in 1 K. x. 22; 2 Chr. ix. 41; are mentioned in the 1st and

MANNER OF BEARING THE ARK.

2d books of Maccabees, as used in warfare (1 Macc. vi.).

Elha'nan. A distinguished warrior in the time of King David, who performed a memorable exploit against the Philistines.

E'li was descended from Aaron through Ithamar, the youngest of his two surviving sons (Lev. x. 1, 2, 12; comp. 1 K. ii. 27, with 2 Sam. viii. 17; 1 Chr. xxiv. 8); supposed to have been the first of his line who held the office. From him it appears to have passed to his grandson, Ahitub (1 Sam. xiv. 3), and it remained in his family till Abiathar was "thrust out" by Solomon (1 K. ii. 26, 27; i. 7), and the high-priesthood passed back to the family of Eleazar in the person of Zadok (1 K. ii. 35). Its return to the elder branch was part of the punishment denounced against Eli for his culpable negligence (1 Sam. ii. 22–25). Notwithstanding this blemish, the character of Eli is marked by eminent piety. In addition to high-priest, he was judge, being the immediate predecessor of his pupil Samuel (1 Sam. vii. 6, 15–17), the last of the judges. He died at the advanced age of 98 years (1 Sam. iv. 15).

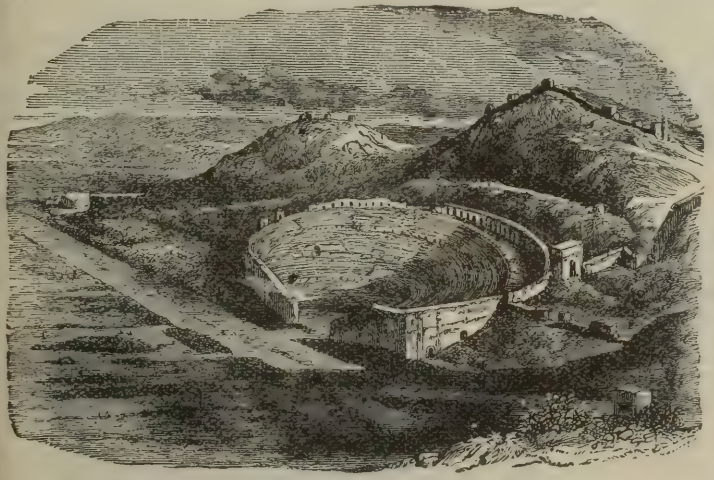
Eli'ada. 1. One of David's sons, born to him after his establishment in Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 16; 1 Chr. iii. 8). 2. A mighty man of war (2 Chr. xvii. 17).

Eli'akim. Son of Hilkiah; master of Hezekiah's household ("over the house," as Is. xxxvi. 3), 2 K. xviii. 18, 26, 37. He succeeded Shebna in this office (Is. xxii. 15–20). Eliakim was a good man (Is. xxii. 20; 2 K. xviii. 37, xix. 1–5; Is. xxii. 21).

EASTERN CHARITY.



Eli'am. Father of Bathsheba, the wife of David (1 Sam. xi. 3).

Eli'as, the form in which the name of ELIJAH is given.

Elie'zer. 1. Abraham's chief servant, "Eliezer of Damascus (Gen. xv. 2). 2. Second son of Moses and Zipporah, to whom his father gave this name (Ex. xviii. 4; 1 Chr. xxiii. 15, 17).

Eli'hu. One of the interlocutors in the book of Job. He is described as the "son of Barachel the Buzite," and thus of the family of Buz, son of Nahor, and nephew of Abraham (Gen. xxii. 21).

Eli'jah. There is no personage in the O. T. whose career is a more remarkable fascination. "Elijah the Tishbite of the inhabitants of Gilead," is all that is given us of his parentage and locality. His chief characteristic was his hair, long and thick, and hanging down his back. His ordinary clothing consisted of a girdle of skin round his loins, which he tightened when about to move quickly (1 K. xviii. 46). But in addition to this he occasionally wore the "mantle," or cape, of sheepskin. In this mantle, in moments of emotion, he would hide his face (1 K. xix. 13), or when excited would roll it up as into a kind of staff. His introduction is startling: he suddenly appears before Ahab, and proclaims the vengeance of Jehovah. It is plain that Elijah had to fly. Perhaps it was at this juncture that Jezebel "cut off the prophets of Jehovah" (1 K. xviii. 4). He was directed to the brook Cherith. Thenceforward his life is made up of wonderful miracles and events, such as the prolonging of the widow's meal; the restoring the child to life; the burning up of the sacrifice, with the slaughter of the prophets; the consuming of the fifties; the selection of Elisha; and, finally, his departure from earth in the whirlwind.

VIEW OF THEATRE AT EPHESUS.

ADAM AND EVE DRIVEN FROM EDEN. SACRIFICE OF AARON.

Elim'elech, a man of Judah, who dwelt in Bethlehem-Ephratah in the days of the Judges. In consequence of a dearth he went with his wife Naomi, and his two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, to dwell in Moab, where he and his sons died without posterity (Ruth i. 2, 3, &c.).

Eliph'alet, the last of thirteen sons born to David in Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 16; 1 Chr. xiv. 7).

Eli'phăz. 1. The son of Esau and Adah, the father of Teman (Gen. xxxvi. 4; 1 Chr. i. 35, 36). 2. The chief of the "three friends" of Job. He is called "the Temanite;" hence a descendant of Teman.

Eliph'elet, the name of a son of David, born to him in Jerusalem (1 Chr. iii, 6).

Elis'abeth, the wife of Zacharias and mother of John the Baptist. She was of the priestly family, and a relation (Luke i. 36) of the mother of our Lord.

Elise'us, the form in which the name Elisha appears in the Apocrypha and N. T. (Ecclus. xlviii. 12; Luke iv. 27).

Eli'sha, son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah; the attendant and disciple of Elijah, and his successor as prophet of Israel. 1. The earliest mention of his name is in 1 K. xix. 16, 17). Our introduction to him is in the fields of his native place. Elijah, on his way from Sinai to Damascus, lights on his successor engaged in the labors of the field. To cross to him, to throw over his shoulders the rough mantle, was to Elijah but the work of an instant. Elisha delayed merely to give the farewell kiss to his father and mother, and preside at a parting feast, and then followed the great prophet. Seven or eight years pass, during which we hear nothing of him. But he reappears, to become the most prominent figure in history during the rest of his long life. Elisha presents the most complete contrast to Elijah. The collection of his sayings and doings, preserved from the 3d to the 9th chapter of the 2d book of Kings, is full of testimonies to this contrast. We can gather that his dress was the ordinary garment of an Israelite, the beged (2 K. ii. 12), that his hair was worn trimmed behind, and that he used a walking-staff. For 55 years he held the office of "prophet in Israel" (2 K. v. 8). After the departure of his master, Elisha returned to dwell at Jericho (2 K. ii. 18). As in the case of his predecessor, his life is made up of remarkable miracles and events, among which are the destruction of the scoffing children; the multiplying of the widow's oil; the restoring of the Shunemite's child to life; the curing of the pottage; the healing of Naaman and the smiting of Gehazi; the causing of the lost axe to swim; and the smiting of the Syrian warriors with blindness.

SYRIAN CAVALRY.

Eli'shah, the eldest son of Javan (Gen. x. 4). The residence of his descendants is described in Ez. xxvii. 7, as the "isles of Elishah.

Elish'ama. 1. Son of Ammihud, the "prince" or "captain" of Ephraim in the wilderness of Sinai (Num. i. 10, ii. 18, vii. 48, x. 22). Grandfather to the great Joshua. 2. A son of King David, born to him in Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 16; 1 Chr. iii. 8, xiv. 7). 3. Another son of David (1 Chr. iii. 6), called ELISHUA.

Elish'eba, wife of Aaron (Ex. vi. 23); daughter of Amminadab, and sister of Naashon the captain of Judah (Num. ii. 3).

Elishu'a, one of David's sons, born in Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 15; 1 Chr. xiv. 5).

El'kanah. 1. Son, or rather grandson (see 1 Chr. vi. 22, 23, [7, 8]), of Korah. 2. A Kohathite Levite, father of Samuel the illustrious Judge and Prophet (1 Chr. vi. 27, 34).

El'kosh, the birthplace of the prophet Nahum; a village of Galilee.

Elm, Hos. iv. 13. See OAK.

E'lon, a Hittite, whose daughter was one of Esau's wives (Gen. xxvi. 34, xxxvi. 2).

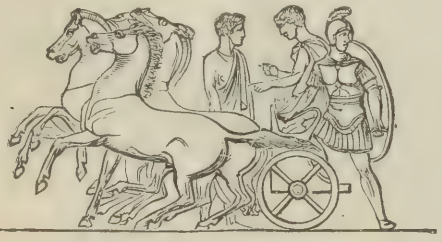
Elpa'let, one of David's sons born in Jerusalem (1 Chr. xiv. 5).

E'lul, Neh. vi. 15; 1 Macc. xiv. 27. [MONTHS.]

ANCIENT CENSERS.

El'ymăs, the Arabic name of the Jewish magus or sorcerer Barjesus (Acts xiii. 6, ff.).

Embalming. It was most general among the Egyptians (Gen. l. 2, 26). Of the Egyptian method there remain two accounts, which have a general agreement. The embalmers removed the brain and the intestines, and then filled the cavities with spices. This done, the body was sewn up, steeped in natron for some days, and then delivered to the relatives of the deceased, who provided for it in a wooden case, in the shape of a man, in which the dead was placed, and deposited in an erect position against the wall of the sepulchral chamber.



CYMBALS.

Embroiderer. Embroidery by the loom was extensively practiced among the ancients. In addition to the Egyptians, the Babylonians were celebrated for it; but embroidery with the needle was a Phrygian invention of later date.

Em'erald, a precious stone, first in the second row on the breastplate of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii.

CHARIOT AND HORSEMEN.

18, xxxix. 11), imported from Syria (Ez. xxvii. 16), used as a seal or signet (Ecclus. xxxii. 6), as an ornament (Ez. xxviii. 13), and one of the foundations of Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 19. Tob. xiii. 16).

Em'erods (Deut. xxviii. 27; 1 Sam. v. 6, 9, 12, vi. 4, 5, 11). Probably hemorrhoidal tumors, or bleeding piles, are intended.

E'mims, a tribe or family of gigantic stature which originally inhabited the region along the eastern side of the Dead Sea. The Moabites termed them Emim—that is, "terrible men" (Deut. ii. 11).

Emman'uel, Matt. i. 23. [IMMANUEL.]

Em'măus, the village to which the two disciples were going when our Lord appeared to them on the way (Luke xxiv. 13). Luke makes its distance from Jerusalem sixty stadia (A. V. "threescore furlongs"), or about 7½ miles.

Em'măus, or Nicop'olis (1 Macc. iii. 40), a town in the plain of Philistia, 22 Roman miles from Jerusalem.

En, beginning many Hebrew words, signifies a spring or fountain.

Enchant'ments. These methods of imposture were strictly forbidden in Scripture (Lev. xix. 26; Is. xlvii. 9, &c.), yet we find them still flourishing at the Christian Era (Acts xiii. 6, 8, viii. 9, 11; Gal. v. 20; Rev. ix. 21).

En'-dor, a place long held in memory by the Jewish people as connected with the great victory over Sisera and Jabin. Here the witch dwelt whom Saul consulted (1 Sam. xxviii. 7). The distance from the slopes of Gilboa to Endor is 7 or 8 miles.

En'gedi, a town on the western shore of the Dead Sea (Ez. xlvii. 10). Its site is about the middle of the western shore of the lake, at the fountain of Ain Jidy. Saul was told that David was in the "wilderness of Engedi;" and he took 3000 men and went to seek him (1 Sam. xxiv. 1-4). The vineyards of Engedi were celebrated by Solomon (Cant. i. 14).

Engine, a term applied to military affairs in the Bible. The engines were to propel missiles from the walls of a besieged town: one, with which the Hebrews were acquainted, was the battering-ram described in Ez. xxvi. 9, and still more precisely in Ez. iv. 2, xxi. 22.

Engra'ver. His chief business was cutting names or devices on rings and seals; the only notices are Ex. xxviii. 11, 21, 36.

En-hak'kore, the spring which burst out in answer to the cry of Samson after his exploit with the jawbone (Judg. xv. 19).

E'noch. 1. The eldest son of Cain (Gen. iv. 17), who called the city which he built after his name (18). 2. The son of Jared and father of Methuselah (Gen. v. 21, ff.; Luke iii. 28; see Gen. v. 22-24). The phrase "walked with God" is elsewhere only used of Noah, and is to be explained of a life spent in immediate converse with the spiritual world.

E'noch, The Book of. The first trace of its existence is generally found in the Epistle of St. Jude (14, 15), but the words of the Apostle leave it uncertain whether he derived his quotation from tradition or from writing. It is uncertain whether the Greek text was the original, or a translation from the Hebrew. The book consists of a series of revelations supposed to have been given to Enoch and Noah.

E'non, a place "near to Salim," at which John baptized (John iii. 23). It was west of the Jordan and abounded in water. This is indicated by the name, signifying "springs."

WOMAN WITH EMBROIDERED ROBE.

En-rō'gel, a spring. Here Jonathan and Ahimaaz remained, after the flight of David (2 Sam. xvii. 17); and here Adonijah held the feast (1 K. i. 9).

Ensign. The character of the Hebrew military standards is a matter of conjecture; they probably resembled the Egyptian, which consisted of a sacred emblem, such as an animal, a boat, or the king's name.

Epaene'tus, a Christian at Rome, greeted by St. Paul in Rom. xvi. 5, and designated as his beloved, and the first fruit of Asia unto Christ.

Ep'aphras, a fellow-laborer with the Apostle Paul (Col. i. 7). He was with St. Paul at Rome (Col. iv. 12), and seems to have been a Colossian by birth. Epaphras may be the same as Epaphroditus.

DIANA.

Epaphrodi'tus (Phil. ii. 25, iv. 18). See above under EPAPHRAS.

E'phes-dam'mim, a place between Socoh and Azekah, at which the Philistines were encamped before the affray in which Goliath was killed (1 Sam, xvii. 1).

Ephesians, The Epistle to the, was written by St. Paul during his first captivity at Rome (Acts xxviii. 16), apparently immediately after the Epistle to the Colossians, and (A. D. 62) when his imprisonment had not assumed the severer character. It was addressed to the Christian church at Ephesus. Its contents may be divided into doctrinal and hortatory and practical.

Eph'esus, the capital of the Roman province of Asia, and an illustrious city in the district of Ionia. Conspicuous at the head of the harbor of Ephesus was the great temple of Diana or Artemis, the tutelary divinity of the city. The magnificence of this sanctuary was a proverb throughout the civilized world. A large manufactory grew up there of portable shrines, which strangers purchased, and devotees carried with them. The city was celebrated for its magical arts. Ephesus itself was a "free city," and had its own assemblies and its own magistrates. The Jews were established there in considerable numbers (Acts ii. 9, vi. 9). The first seeds of Christian truth were possibly sown at Ephesus immediately after the Great Pentecost (Acts ii). The whole place is now desolate.

Ephod, a sacred vestment of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 4), but afterwards worn by ordinary priests (1 Sam. xxii. 18), and deemed characteristic of the office (1 Sam. ii 28, xiv. 3; Hos iii. 4).

E'phraim, the second son of JOSEPH by his wife Asenath. He was born before the beginning of the seven years of famine, 17 years before Jacob's death (Gen. xlvii. 28). Before Joseph's death

CHERUBIM OF NINEVITISH DOORWAY.

Ephraim's family had reached the third generation (Gen. l. 23), the time of the affray mentioned in 1 Chr. vii. 21. To this period, too, must be referred the circumstance alluded to in Ps. lxxviii. 9. The boundaries of the tribe are given in Josh. xvi. 1–10.

E'phraim. In "Baal-hazor which is by Ephraim" was Absalom's sheep farm, at which took place the murder of Amnon (2 Sam. xiii. 23). There is no clew to its situation.

E'phraim, a city to which our Lord retired with his disciples when threatened with violence by the priests (John xi. 54). Perhaps Ophrah and Ephraim are identical.

E'phraim, Gate of, one of the gates of Jerusalem (2 K. xiv. 13; 2 Chr. xxv. 23), probably at or near the present "Damascus gate."

E'phraim, The Wood of, a wood, or forest, E. of Jordan, in which the fatal battle was fought between the armies of David and of Absalom (2 Sam. xviii. 6).

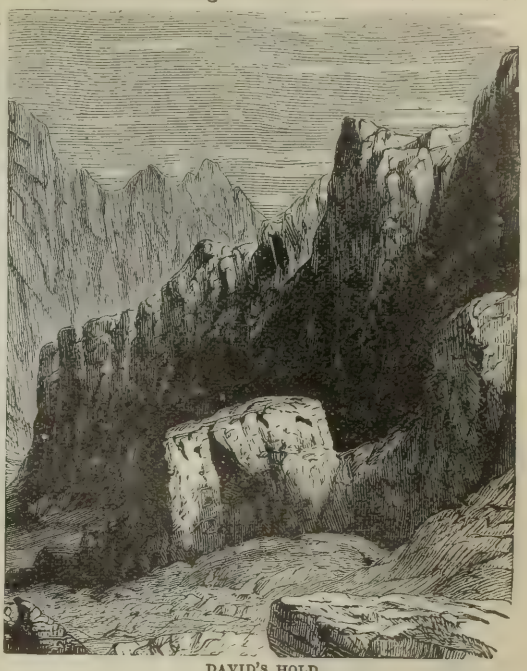
Ephra'in, a city of Israel, which with its dependent hamlets Abijah and the army of Judah captured from Jeroboam (2 Chr. xiii. 19).

Eph'ratah, or Eph'rath. The ancient name of Bethlehem-Judah, as is manifest from Gen. xxxv. 16, 19, xlviii. 7.

Eph'ron. The son of Zochar, a Hittite, from whom Abraham bought the field and cave of Machpelah (Gen. xxiii. 8–17: xxv. 9, xlix. 29, 39, l. 13).

Epicū'reans, The, derived their name from Epicurus (342–271 B. C). True pleasure and not absolute truth was the end, experience and not reason the test on which he relied. When St. Paul addressed "Epicureans and Stoics" (Acts xvii. 18) at Athens, the philosophy of life was reduced to the teaching of those two antagonistic schools.

Epistle. The epistles of the N. T. in form harmonize with Greek and Roman customs. They begin (Heb. and 1 John excepted) with the names of the writer, and those to whom addressed. Then follows the salutation. Then the letter. After the letter the individual messages. When done the Apostle added (Gal. vi. 11) the authentica'ing autograph.



Er. First born of Judah. "The Lord slew him" (Gen. xxxviii. 3–7; Num xxvi. 19).

Eras'tus. One of the attendants or deacons of St. Paul at Ephesus (Acts xix. 22). Probably the same with Erastus who is again mentioned in 2 Tim. iii. 20.

Esa'ias, the form of the name of the prophet Isaiah in the N. T.

E'sar-had'don, one of the greatest of the kings of Assyria, was the son of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 37). Nothing is really known of Esar-haddon until his accession (ab. B. C. 680; 2 K. xix. 37; Is. xxxvii. 38). He appears one of the most powerful of all the Assyrian monarchs. His Babylonian reign lasted thirteen years, from B. C. 680 to B. C. 667.

E'sau, the eldest son of Isaac, and twin-brother of Jacob. The singular appearance of the child at his birth originated the name (Esau means hairy, Gen. xxv. 25). Even in the womb the twin-brothers struggled together (xxv. 22). Jacob in his brother's distress robbed him of that which was dear as life to an Eastern patriarch. Esau married at 40, and contrary to the wish of his parents. His wives were both Canaanites (Gen. xxvi. 34, 35). The next episode is doubly painful Jacob, through the craft of his mother, secures irrevocably the covenant blessing. Esau married his cousin Mahalath (xxviii. 8, 9), and soon afterwards established himself in Mount Seir. He was residing in Mount Seir when Jacob returned from Padan-aram, and had become rich and powerful. It does not appear that the brothers again met until 20 years afterwards. They united in laying Isaac's body in the cave of Machpelah. Of Esau's subsequent history nothing is known.

E'say, the form of the name of Isaiah in Ecclus. xlviii. 20, 22; 2 Esd. ii. 18.

Ĕsdraē'lon, the Greek form of the Hebrew word JEZREEL, the battle-field on which Gideon triumphed, and Saul and Jonathan were overthrown (Judg. vii. 1, sq.; 1 Sam. xxix and xxxi.). Two things are worthy of notice: 1. Its wonderful richness. 2. Its desolation. It is the home of the wild wandering Bedouin.

Es'dras. The form of the name of Ezra the scribe in 1 and 2 Esdras. ESDRAS, FIRST BOOK OF, the first in order of the Apocryphal books in the English Bible. It was never known to exist in Hebrew, and formed no part of the Hebrew Canon. ESDRAS, THE SECOND BOOK OF. Though this book is included among those "read for examples of life" by the English Church, no use of it is there made in public worship.

his boyhood, and hither his body was brought (Judg. xiii. 25, xvi. 31, xviii. 2, 8, 11, 12).

Esse'nes, a Jewish sect, distinguished by an aspiration after ideal purity rather than by any special code of doctrines. All things were held in common, without distinction of property.

Es'ther, the Persian name of HADASSAH, daughter of Abihail. Esther was a beautiful Jewish maiden, whose ancestor Kish had been among the captives from Jerusalem. She was an orphan, brought up by her cousin Mordecai, who had an office in the household of Ahasuerus king of Persia. When Vashti was dismissed the choice fell upon Esther. The plan of Haman to kill all the Jews, and its frustration by Esther are fully recorded in the book of Esther.

Es'ther, Book of, one of the latest of the canonical books of Scripture. The author is not known, but may have been Mordecai himself. Those who ascribe it to Ezra, or the Great Synagogue, may have meant that Ezra edited and added it to the canon of Scripture.

E'tam, A place in Judah, fortified by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 6). Here, according to Josephus and the Talmudists, were the sources of the water from which Solomon's gardens were fed, and Bethlehem and the Temple supplied.

E'tam, The Rock, a cliff or lofty rock, into a cleft or chasm of which Samson retired after his slaughter of the Philistines (Judg. xv. 8, 11).

Eth'anim. [MONTHS.]

Ethba'al, king of Sidon and father of Jezebel (1 K. xvi. 31). The date of Ethbaal's reign may be given as about B. C. 940–908.

Ethio'pia. The country described by the Hebrews as "Cush" lay to the S. of Egypt. The inhabitants of Ethiopia were a Hamitic race (Gen. x. 6). Shortly before our Saviour's birth a native dynasty of females, holding the official title of Candace (Plin. vi. 35), held sway in Ethiopia. One of these is the queen noticed in Acts viii. 27.

Ethio'pian Woman. The wife of Moses is so described in Num. xii. 1; elsewhere said to have been the daughter of a Midianite.

Eubu'lus, a Christian at Rome mentioned by St. Paul (2 Tim. iv. 21).

Euni'ce, mother of Timotheus (2 Tim. i. 5).

Eu'nuch. The law (Deut. xxiii. 1; comp. Lev. xxii. 24) is repugnant to thus treating any Israelite. The origination of the practice is ascribed to Semiramis, and is no doubt as early as Eastern despotism itself. The court of Herod of course had its eunuchs, as had also that of Queen Candace (Acts viii. 27).

Euo'dias, a Christian woman at Philippi (Phil iv. 2). The name is correctly EUODIA.

Euphra'tes is probably a word signifying "the good and abounding river." The Euphrates is the largest, the longest, and by far the most important of the rivers of Western Asia. It rises in the Armenian mountains and flows into the Persian Gulf. The entire course is 1780 miles. The Euphrates is first mentioned in Gen. ii. 14. We next hear of it in Gen. xv. 18.

Eurŏc'lydŏn, the name given (Acts xxvii. 14) to the gale which off Crete seized the ship in which St. Paul was ultimately wrecked on the coast of Malta.

Eu'tychŭs, a youth at Troas (Acts xx. 9) who sitting in a window, and having fallen asleep while St. Paul was discoursing far into the night, fell from the third story, and taken up dead, was miraculously restored by the Apostle.

Evangelist means "the publisher of glad tidings." In Eph. iv. 11, the "evangelists" appear after the "apostles" and "prophets," and before the "pastors" and "teachers." The Apostles, so far as they evangelized (Acts viii. 25, xiv. 7; 1 Cor. i. 17), might claim the title.

Ēve, the name given in Scripture to the first woman. The account of Eve's creation and sin is found at Gen. ii. 21, 22.

Evil-mero'dach (2 K. xxv. 27), the son and successor of Nebuchadnezzar. He reigned but a short time, being (B. C. 559) murdered by Nerigissar.

Ex'ecūtioner. Potiphar was "captain of the executioners" (Gen xxxvii. 36). The "captain of the guard" occasionally performed the duty of an executioner (1 K. ii. 25, 34). The post was of high dignity.

Ex'ōdus, the second book of the Law or Pentateuch. It may be divided into two principal parts: I. Historical, i. 1–xviii. 27; and, II. Legislative, xix. 1–xl. 38.

Ex'orcist. That some possessed the power of exorcising, appears in Matt. xii. 27. What means were employed by real exorcists we are not informed. The power of casting out devils was bestowed by Christ upon the Apostles (Matt. x. 8) and the seventy disciples (Luke x. 17–19), and was (Mark xvi. 17) exercised by believers after His Ascension (Acts xvi. 18).

ANCIENT JEWISH ROBE.

Ezē'kiel, one of the four greater prophets, the son of Buzi, and taken captive eleven years before the destruction of Jerusalem. His call took place "in the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity," B. C. 595 (i. 2). He lived in the highest consideration among his companions in exile, and their elders consulted him on all occasions (viii. 1, xi. 25, xiv. 1. xx. 1, &c.). His mission extended over twenty-two years. He is said to have been murdered in Babylon. The book is divided into two great parts—of which the destruction of Jerusalem is the turning-point. In the Apocalypse there are many parallels and obvious allusions to the later chapters (xl.–xlviii.).

E'zel, The Stone. A well-known stone near Saul's residence, the scene of the parting of David and Jonathan (1 Sam. xx. 19).

Ez'ra, called ESDRAS in the Apocrypha, the famous Scribe and Priest, descended from Hilkiah the high-priest in Josiah's reign. All that is really known of Ezra is contained in the four last chapters of the book of Ezra and in Neh. viii. and xii. 26. To him is ascribed the settling the canon of Scripture, and restoring, correcting, and editing the whole sacred volume.

Ez'ra, Book of, is a continuation of the books of Chronicles. Like these books, it consists of contemporary historical journals kept from time to time.

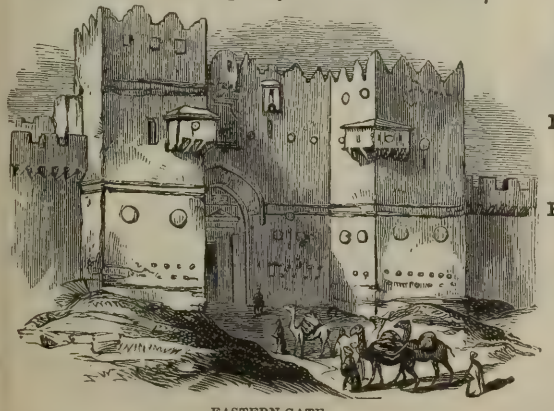
F

Fable. Of the fable, as distinguished from the parable, we have two examples in the Bible,

SHAVING THE HEAD.

(1) that of Judg. ix. 8–15; (2) that of 2 K. xiv. 9. The fables alluded to (1 Tim. i. 4, iv. 7; Tit. i. 14; 2 Pet. i. 16) do not appear such.

Fair Ha'vens, a harbor in the island of CRETE (Acts xxvii. 8), still known by its own Greek name.



Fairs, a word which occurs only in Ez. xxvii., seven times (ver. 12, 14, 16, 19, 22, 27, 33): in the last of these rendered "wares," the true meaning of the word throughout.

Fallow-deer, the Heb. word mentioned only in Deut. xiv. 5, and in 1 K. iv. 23. Probably the size of a stag, and lives in herds.

Famine. The first famine recorded is that of Abraham (Gen. xii. 10). We hear no more of times of scarcity until the great famine of Egypt which "was over all the face of the earth." In Arabia, famines are of frequent occurrence.

Farthing. Two names of coins in the N. T. are rendered in the A. V. by this word.—1. quadrans (Matt. v. 26; Mark xii. 42), a coin current in Palestine in the time of our Lord. It was equivalent to two lepta (A. V. "mites"). 2. (Matt. x. 29; Luke xii. 6). A small as, assarium.

Fasts. I. One fast only was appointed by the law, that of Atonement. There is no mention of any other periodical fast in the O. T., except in Zech. vii. 1–7, viii. 19. II. Public fasts were occasionally proclaimed to express national humiliation, and to supplicate divine favor. III. Private occasional fasts are recognized in one passage of the law (Num. xxx. 13). IV. In the N. T. the only references to the Jewish fasts are the mention of "the Fast" in Acts xxvii. 9, and the allusions to the weekly fasts (Matt. ix. 14; Mark ii. 18; Luke v. 33, xviii. 12; Acts x. 30). These originated after the captivity. V. The sacrifice of the personal will, which gives to fasting all its value, is expressed in the old term in the law, afflicting the soul.

Fat. The Hebrews distinguished between the suet or pure fat of an animal, and the fat which was intermixed with the lean (Neh. viii. 10).

Father. The position and authority of the father as the head of the family are expressly assumed and sanctioned in Scripture.

Fathom. [MEASURES.]

Feasts. [FESTIVALS.]

Fe'lix, a Roman procurator of Judaea, appointed by the Emperor Claudius. He ruled in a mean, cruel, and profligate manner. St. Paul was brought before Felix in Caesarea. He was remanded to prison and kept two years, in hopes of extorting money from him (Acts xxiv. 26, 27). At the end of that time Porcius Festus was appointed to supercede Felix. The wife of Felix was Drusilla, daughter of Herod Agrippa I., the former wife of Azizus king of Emesa.

Fenced Cities. The fortifications of the cities of Palestine, regularly fenced, consisted of one or more walls crowned with battlemented parapets, having towers at regular intervals (2 Chr. xxxii. 5; Jer. xxxi. 38).

Ferret. One of the unclean creeping things mentioned in Lev. xi. 30, probably a reptile. Rabbinical writers identify the hedgehog.

Festivals. I. The religious times ordained in the Law fall under three heads: (1.) those connected with the Sabbath; (2.) The historical or great festivals; (3.) The Day of Atonement. (1.) Immediately connected with the Sabbath are: (a) The weekly Sabbath itself. (b) The seventh new moon or Feast of Trumpets. (c) The Sabbatical Year. (d) The Year of Jubilee. (2.) The great feasts are: (a) The Passover. (b) The Feast of Pentecost, of Weeks, of Wheat-harvest, or, of the First Fruits. (c) The Feast of Tabernacles, or of Ingathering. On each of these occasions every male Israelite was commanded "to appear before the Lord" (Deut. xxvii. 7; Neh. viii. 9–12). II. After the captivity, the Feast of Purim (Esth. ix. 20, sq.) and that of the Dedication (1 Macc. iv. 56) were instituted.

Fes'tus Por'cius, successor of Felix as procurator of Judaea (Acts xxiv. 27), sent by Nero 60 A. D. Festus heard the cause of St. Paul in the presence of Herod Agrippa II. and Bernice his sister (Acts xxv. 11, 12). He died probably 62 A. D.

Fetters. Fetters were usually made of brass, and also in pairs. Iron was occasionally employed (Ps. cv. 18, cxlix. 8).

Fever (Lev. xxvi. 16; Deut. xxviii. 22). Intermittent fever and dysentery, the latter often fatal, are ordinary Arabian diseases.

Fig, Fig-tree. The fig-tree is very common in Palestine (Deut. viii. 8). Mount Olivet was famous for its fig-trees, and they are still found there.

Fir (Is. xiv. 8; Ez. xxvii. 5, &c.). "Fir" in the A. V. represents probably one or other of the following trees: 1. Pinus sylvestris, or Scotch fir; 2. Larch; 3. Cupressus sempervirens, or cypress.

Fire, represented as the symbol of Jehovah's presence, and the instrument of his power (Ex. iii. 2, xiv. 19, &c.). Fire for sacred purposes obtained elsewhere than from the altar was called "strange fire," and for the use of such Nadab and Abihu were punished with death (Lev. x. 1, 2; Num. iii. 4, xxvi. 61).

Firepan. Two articles so called: one, like a chafing-dish, to carry live coals for the incense; another, like a snuffer-dish, used in trimming the lamps.

Firkin. [WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.]

First-born. Under the Law, the eldest son was regarded as devoted to God, and was to be redeemed by an offering. The eldest son received a double portion of the father's inheritance (Deut. xxi. 17). Under the monarchy, the eldest son usually succeeded in the kingdom (1 K. i. 30, ii. 22). The male first-born of animals was also devoted to God (Ex. xiii. 2, 12, 13, xxii. 29, xxxiv. 19 20).

First-fruits. The Law ordered in general, that the first of first-fruits should be offered in God's house (Ex. xxii. 29, xxiii. 19, xxxiv. 27).

Fish. The Hebrews recognized fish as one of the great divisions of the animal kingdom. The Mosaic Law (Lev. xi. 9, 10) pronounced unclean such as were devoid of fins and scales. In Palestine, the Sea of Galilee was and still is remarkably well stored with fish. Jerusalem derived its supply chiefly from the Mediterranean (comp. Ez. xlvii. 10).

Fitches (i. e. VETCHES), the representative of two Hebrew words sussemeth and ketsach. As to the former see RYE. Ketsach denotes without doubt the Nigella sativa, an herbaceous annual plant.

EGYPTIAN DANCERS.

Flag. It seems probable that some specific plant is denoted in Job viii. 11. In Gen. xli. 2, 18, it is perhaps the Cyperus esculentus. Ex. ii. 3, 5; Is. xix. 6, denote "weeds of any kind."

Flagon. In 2 Sam. vi. 19; 1 Chr. xvi. 3; Cant. ii. 5; Hos. iii. 1, it really means a cake of pressed raisins. In Is. xxii. 24, is commonly used for a bottle or vessel.

Flax. It seems probable that the cultivation of flax for linen was by no means confined to Egypt. That it was grown in Palestine before the conquest by the Israelites appears from Josh. ii. 6. That flax was one of the most important crops in Palestine appears from Hos. ii. 5, 9.

Flea, mentioned in 1 Sam. xxiv. 14, xxvi. 20. Fleas are abundant in the East, and afford the subject of many proverbial expressions.

Flour. [BREAD.]

Flute, a musical instrument mentioned amongst others (Dan. iii. 5, 7, 10, 15) as used at the worship of the golden image Nebuchadnezzar set up.

Flux, Bloody (Acts xxviii. 8), same as our dysentery, which in the East is generally epidemic and infectious, and then assumes its worst form.

Fly, Flies. 1. Zebub occurs in Eccl. x. 1 and Is.

RUINS OF TOMBS BUILT IN TIME OF LAZI.

vii. 18, and is probably a generic name for any insect. 2. 'Arob, the name of the insect, or insects, which God sent to punish Pharaoh; see Ex. viii. 21–31; Ps. lxxviii. 45, cv. 31. It seems not improbable that common flies are intended.

Food. The diet of Eastern nations has been in all ages light and simple. As compared with our habits, the points of contrast are the small amount of animal food consumed, the variety of articles used as accompaniments to bread, the substitution of milk for our liquors, and the combination of heterogeneous elements in the same dish, or meal. The chief point of agreement is the large consumption of bread.

Forest. Although Palestine has never been a woodland country, yet no doubt there was much more wood formerly than at present.

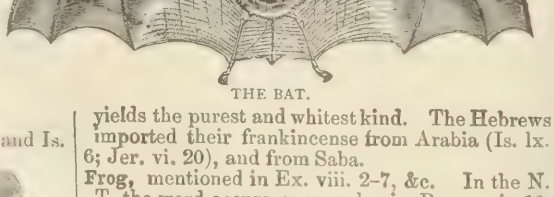
Fortuna'tus (1 Cor. xvi. 17), one of three Corinthians, the others being Stephanas and Achaicus, who were at Ephesus when St. Paul wrote his first Epistle.

Foun'tain. The springs of Palestine, though short-lived, are remarkable for their abundance and beauty. In Oriental cities generally public fountains are frequent.



FLOWERS AND GRASSES OF PALESTINE.

Fowl. Several Hebrew and Greek words are thus rendered in the A. V. Of these the most common is 'oph, a collective term for all kinds of birds.

Fox (Heb. shual). Probably the "jackal" is the animal signified in almost all the passages in the O. T. where the Hebrew term occurs. The shu'alim of Judg. xv. 4 are evidently "jackals."

Frankincense, a vegetable resin, brittle, glittering, and of a bitter taste, used for the purpose of sacrificial fumigation (Ex. xxx. 34–36). It is obtained by successive incisions in the bark of a tree called the arbor thuris, the first of which yields the purest and whitest kind. The Hebrews imported their frankincense from Arabia (Is. lx. 6; Jer. vi. 20), and from Saba.

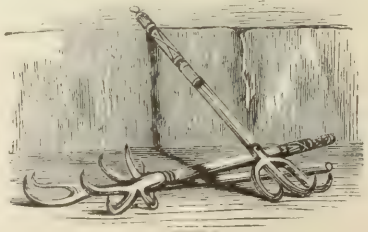
Frog, mentioned in Ex. viii. 2–7, &c. In the N. T. the word occurs once only, in Rev. xvi. 13. There is no question as to the animal meant. The only known species in Egypt is the edible frog of the continent.

Frontlets, or Phylacteries (Ex. xiii. 16; Deut. vi. 8, xi. 18, Matt. xxiii. 5), strips of parchment on which were written four passages of Scripture (Ex. xiii. 2–10, 11–17; Deut. vi. 4–9, 13–23) in ink. They were then rolled up in a case of black calfskin, and placed at the bend of the left arm. Those on the forehead were on four strips of parchment.

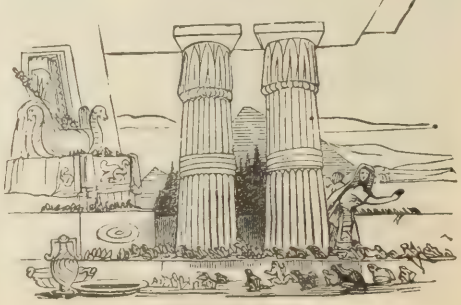
Fuller. The trade of the fullers, so far as mentioned in Scripture, appears chiefly in cleansing garments and whitening them. The substances used are natrum (Prov. xxv. 20; Jer. ii. 22) and soap (Mal. iii. 2). Other substances also are mentioned, which identify the Jewish with the Roman process, as urine and chalk. The trade of the fullers appears to have been carried on at Jerusalem outside the city.



FISH-GOD (from Nimroud).

Fullers' Field, The, a spot near Jerusalem (2 K. xviii. 17; Is. vii. 3, xxxvi. 2), so close to the walls that a person speaking from there could be heard on them (2 K. xviii. 17, 26).

Fur'nace. Various kinds of furnaces are noticed, such as a smelting or calcining furnace (Gen. xix. 28; Ex. ix. 8, 10), especially a lime-kiln (Is. xxxiii. 12), a refining furnace (Ez. xxii. 18, ff.); a large furnace built like a brick-kiln (Dan. iii. 22, 23); the potter's furnace (Ecclus. xxvii. 5); the blacksmith's furnace (Ecclus. xxxviii. 28). The Persians used the furnace as a means of inflicting punishment (Jer. xxix. 22; Hos. vii. 7).



G

Gā'al, son of Ebed, aided the Shechemites in their rebellion against Abimelech (Judg. ix.).

FLESH-HOOKS.

Găb'batha, the Hebrew or Chaldee appellation of a place, also called "Pavement," where the judgment-seat or bema was, from which Pilate delivered our Lord to death (John xix. 13). The place was outside the praetorium. It seems as if Gabbatha designated the elevated Bema; and the "pavement" was possibly some mosaic or tessellated work, either forming the bema itself, or the flooring of the court round it.

Gā'briel, used in Dan. viii. 16, ix. 21, and in Luke

i. 19, 26. In the ordinary traditions, Jewish and Christian, Gabriel is spoken of as one of the archangels. In Scripture he is set forth only as the representative of the angelic nature.

Gad, Jacob's seventh son, the first-born of Zilpah,

EGYPTIAN CROWNS.

Leah's maid, and whole-brother to Asher (Gen. xxx. 11–13, xlvi. 16, 18). The word means either "fortune" or "troop" (Gen. xxx. 11; comp. xlix. 19). At the time of the descent into Egypt seven sons are ascribed to him.

Gad, "the seer" (1 Chr. xxix. 29; 2 Chr. xxix. 25; 2 Sam. xxiv. 11; 1 Chr. xxi. 9), a "prophet" who joined David when in the hold (1 Sam. xxii. 5). He wrote a book of the Acts of David (1 Chr. xxix. 29).

Gad'ara, a strong city east of the Sea of Galilee. A large district was attached to it. Gadara is evidently identical with the "country of the Gadarenes," or Gergesenes (Matt. viii. 28; Mark v. 1; Luke viii. 26, 37). Gadara derives its greatest interest from Matt. viii. 28–34; Mark v. 1–21; Luke viii. 26–40. The most interesting remains of Gadara are its tombs, which dot the cliffs round the city.

Ga'ham, son of Nahor, Abraham's brother, by his concubine Reumah (Gen. xxii. 24).

Gai'us. [JOHN, SECOND AND THIRD EPISTLES OF.]

Gala'tia, literally the "Gallia" of the East. The Roman province of Galatia may be described as the central region of the peninsula of Asia Minor. The prevailing speech of the district was Greek.

Galatians, The Epistle to the, was written by the Apostle St. Paul, and appears called forth by the machinations of Judaizing teachers. It was written at Corinth (Acts xx. 2, 3), apparently the winter of A. D. 57 or 58.

Galbanum, one of the perfumes in the sacred incense (Ex. xxx. 34). It is a resinous gum of a brownish yellow color, and strong, disagreeable smell.

Gal'eed, the name given by Jacob to the heap which he and Laban made on Mount Gilead (Gen. xxxi. 47, 48; comp. 23, 25).

Gal'ilee, originally a little "circuit" of country round Kedesh. In the time of our Lord, Palestine was divided into Judaea, Samaria, and Galilee (Acts ix. 31; Luke xvii. 11. Galilee was divided into "Lower" and "Upper." Lower Galilee was one of the richest and most beautiful sections of Palestine. The chief towns were Tiberias, Tarichaea, and Sepphoris. The towns most celebrated in N. T. history are Nazareth, Cana, and Tiberias (Luke i. 26; John ii. 1, vi. 1). To Upper Galilee, the name "Galilee of the Gentiles" is given (Is. ix. 1; Matt. iv. 15). Capernaum, our Lord's home, was in Upper Galilee (Matt. iv. 13, ix. 1). The Apostles were all Galileans by birth or residence (Acts i. 11).

Galilee, Sea of. [GENNESARETH.]

Gall denotes that which is bitter. Some bitter, and perhaps poisonous plant.

Gallery, an architectural term, describing the porticos or verandas in Eastern houses. It is doubtful, however, whether the Hebrew words, so translated, have reference to such object.

Galley. [SHIP.]

Gal'lim ("heaps"), the native place of the man to whom Michal, David's wife, was given (1 Sam. xxv. 44).

Gal'lio, Junius Annaeus Gallio, the Roman proconsul of Achaia when St. Paul was at Corinth, A. D. 53, under the Emperor Claudius (Acts xviii. 12). Jerome says he committed suicide in 65 A. D.

GODS OF THE GRECIANS.

Gama'liel. A Pharisee and celebrated doctor of the law, who gave prudent worldly advice in the Sanhedrim respecting the treatment of the followers of Jesus of Nazareth (Acts v. 34, ff.). He was the preceptor of St. Paul. He was President of the Sanhedrim under Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius, and died shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Games. Among the Greeks every city of any size possessed its theatre and stadium. At Ephesus an annual contest was held in honor of Diana. It is probable that St. Paul was present when these games were proceeding. A direct reference is made in 1 Cor. xv. 32. St. Paul's Epistles abound with allusions to the Greek contests at which he may well have been present during his first visit to Corinth. These contests (2 Tim. iv. 7; 1 Tim. vi. 12) were divided into boxing, wrestling, leaping, running, quoiting, and hurling the spear.

Gam'madims (Ez. xxvii. 11). The rendering "guards," furnishes the simplest explanation.

Gar'den. Gardens in the East are enclosures, on the outskirts of towns, planted with various trees and shrubs. They were surrounded by hedges of thorn (Is. v. 5), or walls of stone (Prov. xxiv. 31). For further protection lodges (Is. i. 8; Lam. ii. 6) or watchtowers (Mark xii. 1) were built in them. The gardens of the Hebrews were planted with flowers and aromatic shrubs (Cant. vi. 2, iv. 16), besides olives, fig-trees, nuts, or walnuts (Cant. vi. 11), pomegranates, and others for domestic use (Ex. xxiii. 11; Jer. xxix. 5; Am. ix 14). Gardens of herbs, or kitchen-gardens, are mentioned in Deut. xi. 10, and 1 K. xxi. 2.

Garlic (Num. xi. 5), the Allium Sativum of Linnaeus, which abounds in Egypt.

Garrison. The Heb. words so rendered are derivatives from the root natsab to "place, erect."

Gate. The gates of eastern cities are sometimes taken as representing the city itself. They were used as places of public resort (Gen. xix. 1, xxiii. 10), for public deliberation, administration of justice, or of audience for kings and rulers, or ambassadors (Deut. xvi. 18; Josh. xx. 4; Judg. ix. 35, &c.). They were carefully guarded and closed at nightfall; contained chambers over the gateway (2 Sam. xviii. 24). The doors were two-leaved, plated with metal, closed with locks and fastened with metal bars (Deut. iii. 5; Ps. cvii.

IMPERIAL EAGLE OF PALESTINE.

16; Is. xlv. 1, 2). The gateways were often richly ornamented. Sentences were inscribed on and above the gates (Deut. vi. 9; Is. lv. 12; Rev. xxi 21).

Gath, a city of the Philistines (Josh. xiii. 3; 1 Sam.

vi. 17), and the native place of the giant Goliath 1 Sam. xvii. 4, 23). It probably stood upon the hill now called Tell-es-Safieh, 10 miles E. of Ashdod.

Gath-he'pher, or Git'tah-he'pher, now Yafa, (Josh.

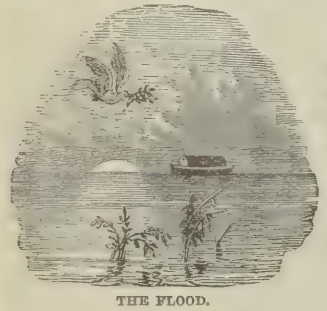
ANCIENT FORT ON A ROCK.



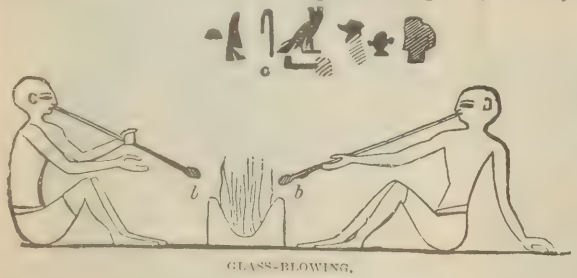
xix. 12, 13), celebrated as the native place of the prophet Jonah (2 K. xiv. 25).

Ga'za (properly Azzah), one of the five chief cities of the Philistines. It is the last town in the S. W. of Palestine, on the frontier towards Egypt. Its name means "the strong." In Gen. x. 19 it appears. The passage where Gaza is mentioned in the N. T. (Acts viii. 26) is full of interest.

Gē'bal, a proper name, occurring in Ps. lxxxiii. 7. One and the same city with the Gebal of Ezekiel (xxvii. 9), a maritime town of Phoenicia.

Ged'eon. The Greek form of the Hebrew name GIDEON (Heb. xi. 32).

Geha'zi, the servant of Elisha. He was sent on two occasions to the Shunammite (2 K. iv.); obtained fraudulently money and garments from Naaman; was smitten with leprosy, and dismissed the prophet's service (2 K. v.). Later he is mentioned as relating to King Joram the great things Elisha had done (2 K. viii.).



THE FLOOD.

Gehen'na. [HINNOM.]

Gemari'ah. 1. Son of Shaphan the scribe. He had a chamber in the house of the Lord (Jer. xxxvi.). 2. Son of Hilkiah, bearer of Jeremiah's letter to the captive Jews (Jer. xxix.).

Gĕneăl'ogy. The promise of Canaan to the seed of Abraham; the separation of the Israelites; the expectation of Messiah from the tribe of Judah; the hereditary priesthood of Aaron; the succession in the line of David; and the division and occupation of the land, gave a deeper importance to the science of genealogy among the Jews than perhaps any other nation.

Gĕneăl'ogy of Jesus Christ. The N. T. gives us the genealogy of but one person, that of our Saviour. The following will explain these genealogies: 1. They are both the genealogies of Joseph i. e. of Jesus Christ as legal son of Joseph and Mary. 2. The genealogy of St. Matthew is Joseph's genealogy as legal successor to the throne of David. St. Luke's is Joseph's private genealogy. 3. Mary, the mother of Jesus, was in all probability the daughter of Jacob, and first cousin to Joseph her husband.

GLASS-BLOWING.

Gĕn'erā'tion. In the Patriarchal age a generation seems to have been 100 years (Gen. xv. 16; comp. 13, and Ex. xii. 40); but subsequently the reckoning was from thirty to forty years (Job. xlii. 16).

Gen'esis, the first book of the Law or Pentateuch, so called from its title in the Septuagint, that is, Creation. The book begins with the creation of the world. Five principal persons are the pillars, so to speak, on which the whole superstructure rests: Adam, Noah, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Gennes'aret, Land of (Matt. xiv. 34; Mark vi. 53). It is generally believed that this term was applied to the fertile crescent-shaped plain on the western shore of the lake. Mr. Porter gives the length as three miles, and the greatest breadth as about one mile.

MOUNTAIN GOAT OF PALESTINE.

Gennes'aret, Sea of, called in the O. T. "the Sea of Chinnereth," or "Cinneroth" (Num. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xii. 3). The lake is also called in the N. T. "the Sea of Galilee," and "the Sea of Tiberias." Most of our Lord's public life was spent in its environs. This region was the most densely peopled in all Palestine. The sea is an oval shape, about thirteen geographical miles long, and six broad. The water is sweet, cool, and transparent, and the beach everywhere pebbly. It abounds in fish now as in ancient times.

Gentiles. In the O. T. the Heb. signified the surrounding nations, foreigners as opposed to Israel (Neh. v. 8), and was used with an invidious meaning. In the N. T. it is used as equivalent to Greek. But the A. V. is not consistent in its translation of the word Hellen, sometimes rendering it by "Greek" (Acts xiv. 1, xvii. 4; Rom. i. 16, x. 12), sometimes by "Gentile" (Rom. ii. 9, 10, iii. 9; 1 Cor. x. 32). The latter use seems to have arisen from the almost universal adoption of the Greek language.

Gerah. [WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.]

Ge'rar, a very ancient city south of Gaza. It occurs chiefly in Genesis (x. 19. xx. 1, xxvi. 16).

Gergesenes. [GADARA.]

Geriz'im. The Samaritans, through whom the tradition of the true site of Gerizim has been preserved, are probably not wrong when they point out still—as they have done from time immemorial—Gerizim as the hill upon which Abraham's "faith was made perfect." The altar Jacob built was not on Gerizim, though probably about its base, between it and Ebal. Here was likewise his well (John iv. 6), and the tomb of his son Joseph (Josh. xxiv. 32), both of which are still shown.

Ger'izites, 1 Sam. xxvii. 8. [GERZITES.]

Ger'shom, the first-born son of Moses and Zipporah (Ex. ii. 22, xviii. 3).

Ger'shon, the eldest of the three sons of Levi, born before the descent of Jacob's family into Egypt (Gen. xlvi. 11; Ex. vi. 16).

Gethsĕm'ane. A small "farm" (A. V. "place;" Matt. xxvi. 36; Mark xiv. 32), situated across the brook Kedron (John xviii. 1). There was a "garden," or rather orchard, attached to it, to which the olive, fig, and pomegranate doubtless invited resort by their hospitable shade. And we know from the Evangelists Luke (xxii. 39) and John (xviii. 2) that our Lord ofttimes resorted thither with his disciples.

SYRIAN GOAT.

Gez'er, an ancient city of Canaan, whose king, Horam, or Elam, coming to the assistance of GETHSEMANE.

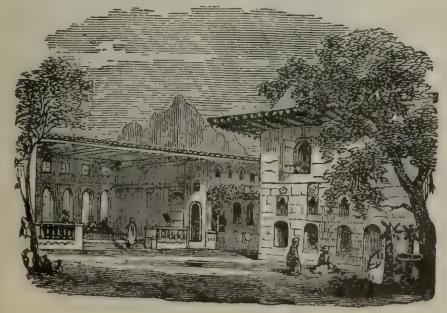
POOL OF HEZEKIAH.

Lachish, was killed with all his people by Joshua (Josh. 33, xii. 12).

Giants. 1. First spoken of in Gen. vi. 4, under the name Nephilim. They were most probably the pious Sethites, though the opinion in the Jewish and early Christian Church is that they were angels. 2. THE REPHAIM, a name which frequently occurs. The earliest mention of them is in Gen. xiv. 5).

Gib'eah, a word employed in the Bible to denote a "hill." It gave its name to several towns and places in Palestine, doubtless on or near a hill.



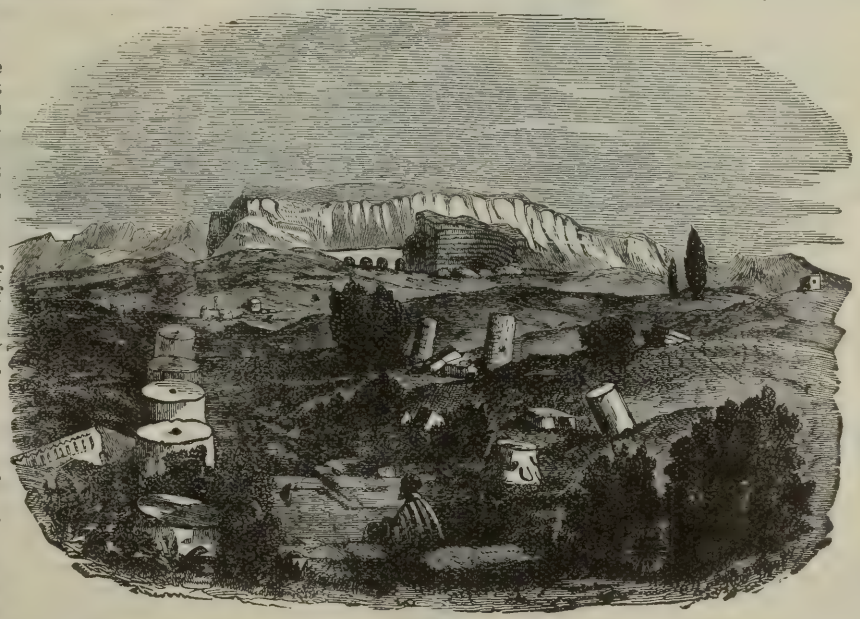
Gib'eon, one of the four cities of the HIVITES, which made a league with Joshua (ix. 3–15), and escaped the fate of Jericho and Ai (comp. xi. 19).

Gib'eonites, The, the people of Gibeon, and perhaps also of the three cities associated with Gibeon (Josh. ix. 17)—Hivites. Saul killed some, and devised a general massacre of the rest (2 Sam. xxi. 1. 2, 5). This was expiated many years after (4, 6, 9).

Gid'eon, a Manassite. He was the fifth recorded Judge of Israel, and greatest of them all. When we first hear of him he was grown up and had sons (Judg. vi. 11, viii. 20), and (vi. 12) we conclude had distinguished himself in war against the roving bands who had oppressed Israel for seven years. His call to be a deliverer, and his destruction of Baal's altar, are related in Judg. vi.

Gier-eagle, an unclean bird (Lev. xi. 18 and Deut. xiv. 17); doubtless the Egyptian vulture.

Gift. The Hebrew possesses no less than fifteen different expressions for the one idea. The nature of presents was as various as were the occasions. The mode of presentation was with much parade. The refusal was a high indignity. No less an insult was it, not to bring a present when the position of the parties demanded it (1 Sam. x. 27).



COURT OF HOUSE.

Gi'hon. 1. The second river of Paradise (Gen. ii. 13). 2. A place near Jerusalem, the scene of the anointing of Solomon as king (1 K. i. 33, 38, 45).

Gilbo'a, a mountain range on the eastern side of the plain of Esdraelon, rising over the city of Jezreel (comp. 1 Sam. xxviii. 4 with xxix. 1). It is mentioned (1 Sam. xxxi. 1; 2 Sam. i. 6, xxi. 12; 1 Chr. x. 1, 8).

Gil'ead. 1. A mountainous region bounded by the Jordan, by Bashan, by the Arabian plateau, and by Moab and Ammon (Gen. xxxi. 21; Deut. iii. 12–17). The name signifies "a hard rocky region."

Gil'eadites, The (Judg. xii. 4, 5; Num. xxvi. 29; Judg. x. 3), a branch of Manasseh, descended from Gilead.

GADARA.

Gil'gal. The site of the first camp of the Israelites on the west of the Jordan, and where the twelve stones were set up (Josh. iv. 19, 20, comp. 3); where also they kept their first passover in Canaan (v. 10).

Gi'loh, a town in the mountainous part of Judah; the native place of Ahithophel (2 Sam. xv. 12).

Gin, a trap for birds or beasts. It consisted of a net (Is. viii. 14), and a stick to act as a spring.

Girdle, in the East worn both by men and women. The common girdle was made of leather (2 K. i. 8; Matt. iii. 4). A finer girdle was made of linen (Jer. xiii. 1; Ez. xvi. 10), embroidered with silk, or with gold and silver thread (Dan. x. 5; Rev. i. 13, xv. 6), and frequently studded with gold and precious stones or pearls.

Git'tites, the 600 men who followed David from Gath, under Ittai the Gittite (2 Sam. xv. 18, 19). "Gittite" may have been so named from the town of Gittaim in Benjamin (2 Sam. iv. 3; Neh. xi. 33), or from Gath-rimmon.

Gittith, a musical instrument, supposed to have been used by the people of Gath, or employed at the festivities of the vintage (Ps. viii., lxxxi., lxxxiv.).

Glass. The Heb. word occurs only in Job xxviii. 17, where in A. V. it is rendered "crystal." From paintings we know that the invention is as remote as 3500 years ago. Fragments, too, of wine vases as old as the Exodus have been discovered in Egypt. The art was known to the ancient Assyrians.

Gleaning. The gleaning of fruit trees, as of corn fields, was reserved for the poor.

Glede, the old name for the common kite (Deut. xiv. 13).

Gnat, mentioned only by our Saviour in Matt. xxiii. 24.

Goad (Judg. iii. 31; 1 Sam. xiii. 21). The Hebrew in the latter passage probably means the point of the ploughshare. The former refers to the goad, the long handle of which might be used as a weapon.

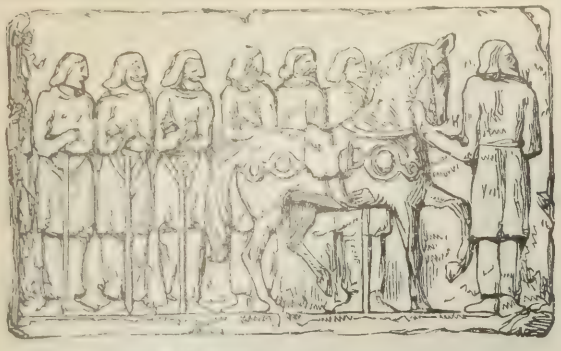
Goat. There appear two or three varieties of the common goat bred in Palestine and Syria, but whether identical with those of the ancient Hebrews it is not possible to say.

Goat, Scape. [ATONEMENT, DAY OF.]

Gob (2 Sam. xxi. 18, 19), the scene of two encounters between David's warriors and the Philistines. Given also as GEZER.

God. Throughout the Hebrew two chief names are used for the one true divine Being—ELOHIM, translated God, and JEHOVAH, translated Lord. ELOHIM is the plural of ELOAH (in Arabic Allah). It is either what grammarians call the plural of majesty, or it denotes the fulness of divine strength, the sum of the powers displayed by God.

Gog. [MAGOG.]



Gold, used as an emblem of purity (Job xxiii. 10) and nobility (Lam. iv. 1). Gold was known from the earliest times (Gen. ii. 11). It was used for ornaments, &c. (Gen. xxiv. 22). Coined money was not known to the ancients. Gold was extremely abundant in ancient times (1 Chr. xxii. 14, 2 Chr. i. 15, ix. 9; Nah. ii. 9; Dan. iii. 1).

Golgo'tha, the Hebrew name of the spot at which our Lord was crucified (Matt. xxviii. 33; Mark xv. 22; John xix. 17), interpreted the "place of a skull." The name arises from (1) being the spot where executions ordinarily took place, and abounded in skulls; or (2) it may come from the look or form of the spot itself, bald, round, and skull-like.

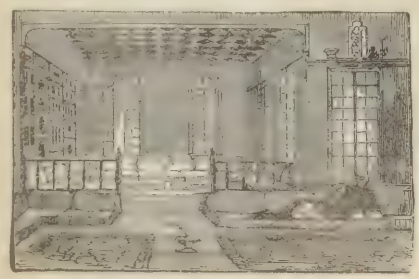
Goli'ath, a famous giant of Gath (1 Sam. xvii.). He was possibly descended from the old Rephaim, of whom a scattered remnant took refuge with the Philistines (Deut. ii. 20, 21; 2 Sam. xxi. 22). His height was "six cubits and a span;" taking the cubit at 21 inches, 10½ feet high. But the LXX. and Josephus read "four cubits and a span." The scene of his combat with David was the Valley of the Terebinth.



EGYPTIAN DRESS.

Go'mer, 1. The eldest son of Japheth (Gen. x. 2, 3), generally recognized as the progenitor of the early Cimmerians, of the later Cimbri and the other branches of the Celtic family.

Gomor'rah, in the N. T. written Gomor'rha, one of the five "cities of the plain" that joined battle with Chedorlaomer (Gen. xiv. 2–8). Four out of the five were afterwards destroyed by fire from heaven (Gen. xix. 23–29). Of these Gomorrah seems second to Sodom in importance. [SODOM.]

Gopher Wood (Gen. vi. 14). Two conjectures have been proposed: 1. That the "trees of Gopher" are any trees of the resinous kind, such as pine, fir, &c. 2. That Gopher is cypress.

Go'shen, the name of a part of Egypt where the Israelites dwelt for the whole period of their sojourn in that country. It was between Joseph's residence at the time and the frontier of Palestine (Gen. xlvi. 29).

Gospels. The name Gospel (good message or news) is applied to the four inspired histories of the life and teaching of Christ contained in the N. T., of which separate accounts are given in their place.

Gourd. 1. (Jon. iv. 6-10.) The plant intended, and which afforded shade to Jonah before Nineveh, is the castor-oil plant. 2. With regard to the "wild gourds" of 2 K. iv. 39, there can be no doubt that it is a species of the gourd tribe, which contains plants of a very bitter and dangerous character.

Gov'ernor. This English word is the representative of no less than ten Hebrew and four Greek words.

Grasshopper. [LOCUST.]

A WALL CHAMBER.

Greaves (1 Sam. xvii. 6), a piece of defensive armor which reached from the foot to the knee. But in this passage it would appear to have been a kind of shoe or boot.

Greece, Greeks, Grecians. In Gen. x. 2–5 Moses mentions the descendants of Javan as peopling the isles of the Gentiles. Prophetical notice of Greece occurs in Dan. viii. 21, &c. The name of the country, Greece, occurs once in N. T. (Acts xx. 2) as opposed to Macedonia. [GENTILES.]

WAR HORSES.

Grove. A word used, with two exceptions, to translate Asherah which is probably an idol. In the religion of the ancient heathen world groves play a prominent part.

Gur, The going up to, an ascent at which Ahaziah received his death-blow while flying from Jehu (2 K. ix. 27).

H

Hab'akkuk, the eighth in order of the minor prophets. He probably delivered his prophecy about the 12th or 13th year of Josiah (B. C. 630 or 629). The prophet commences by announcing his office and important mission (i. 1), and closes with the magnificent Psalm in chap. iii., a composition unrivalled.

Habergeon, a coat of mail covering the neck and breast.

Hach'ilah, The Hill, a hill apparently in the wood in the neighborhood of Ziph (1 Sam. xxiii. 19; comp. 14, 15, 18).

Ha'dad, originally the indigenous appellation of the Sun among the Syrians, and thence transferred to the king, as the highest of earthly authorities. The title appears an official one, like Pharaoh.

EGYPTIAN GATEWAY.

Ha'dad-rim'mon, according to Zech. xii. 11, a place in the valley of Megiddo, named after two Syrian idols, where a lamentation was held for the death of Josiah.

Hădarē'zer, son of Rehob (2 Sam. viii. 3), was pursued by David, and defeated (1 Chr. xviii. 3, 4).

Hadăs'sah, early name of Esther (Esth. ii. 7).

Hā'dēs. The habitation of the dead (Luke x. 15, xvi. 23; Acts ii. 27, 31; Rev. i. 18, vi. 8, xx. 13, 14. N. R.).

Hadō'ram. The form assumed in Chronicles by the name of the intendant of taxes under David, Solomon and Rehoboam (2 Chr. x. 18). In Kings the name is ADONIRAM; in 2 Sam. xx. 24 ADORAM.

HIPPOPOTAMUS.

Ha'gar, an Egyptian woman, the handmaid, or slave, of Sarah (Gen. xvi. 1), whom the latter gave as a concubine to Abraham. It is recorded that "when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was despised" (4, and Sarah, with anger, reproached Abraham. Hagar fled. By the fountain in the way to Shur, the angel of the Lord charged her to return and delivered the prophecy in ver 10–12. On her return, she gave birth to Ishmael. Mention is not again made of Hagar until the feast at the weaning of Isaac, when Sarah saw Ishmael mocking; and we now read of her expulsion. The name of Hagar occurs when she takes a wife to Ishmael (xxi. 21); and in the genealogy (xxv. 12).

EASTERN HOUSEHOLD GODS.

Hagarenes', Ha'garites, a people dwelling east of Palestine (1 Chr. v. 10, 18–20). The same people are mentioned in Ps. lxxxiii. 6. It is believed they were named after Hagar.

Hăg'gai, the tenth of the Minor Prophets, and first of those who prophesied after the Captivity. According to tradition, Haggai was born in Babylon, was a young man when he came to Jerusalem, and was buried with honor near the sepulchres of the priests. THE BOOK OF. The style of Haggai is generally tame and prosaic, though at times it rises to severe invective.

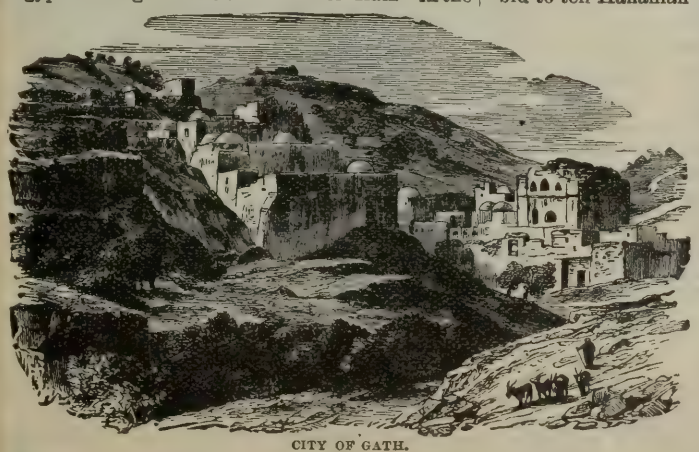
Hag'gith, one of David's wives, the mother of Adonijah (2 Sam. iii. 4; 1 K. i. 5; 1 Chr. iii. 2).



Ha'i. The form in which the well-known place AI appears in the A. V. on its first introduction (Gen. xii. 8, xiii. 3).

Hair. The Hebrews were alive to the importance of the hair as an element of personal beauty. In affliction the hair was cut off (Is. iii. 17, 24, xv. 2). Tearing the hair (Ezr. ix. 3) and letting it go dishevelled were tokens of grief. The favorite color was black (Cant. v. 11). Pure white hair was deemed characteristic of the Divine Majesty (Dan. vii. 9; Rev. i. 14). The chief beauty of the hair consisted in curls, natural or artificial character. The Hebrews anointed the hair profusely with ointments. It appears to have been the custom of the Jews in our Saviour's time to swear by the hair (Matt. v. 36).

Hall, used of the court of the high-priest's house (Luke xxii. 55). In Matt. xxvii. 27, and Mark xv. 16, synonymous with "praetorium," which in John xviii. 28 is "judgment-hall."

Hallelujah. [ALLELUIA.]

Ham. 1. The name of one of the three sons of Noah, apparently the second in age. It signifies "warm" or "hot." Of the history of Ham nothing is related except his irreverence to his father, and the curse pronounced. The sons of Ham are stated to have been "Cush and Mizraim and Phut and Canaan" (Gen. x. 6; comp. 1 Chr. i. 8). Egypt is recognized as the "land of Ham" in the

CITY OF GATH.

Bible (Ps. lxxviii. 51, cv. 23, cvi. 22).

Ha'man, the chief minister or vizier of king Ahasuerus (Esth. iii. 1). After his attempt to cut off the Jews he was hanged on the gallows he had erected for Mordecai.

Ha'math, the principal city of Upper Syria, was in the valley of the Orontes, which it commanded. the Hamathites were a Hamitic race, and are included among the descendants of Canaan (Gen. x. 18).

Hammed'atha, father of the infamous Haman (Esth. iii. 1. 10, viii. 5, ix. 24).

Ham'melech, lit. "the king," unnecessarily rendered a proper name (Jer. xxxvi. 26, xxxviii. 6).

Ha'mon-gog, The Valley of, the name to be bestowed on a ravine after the burial there of "Gog and all his multitude" (Ez. xxxix. 11, 15).

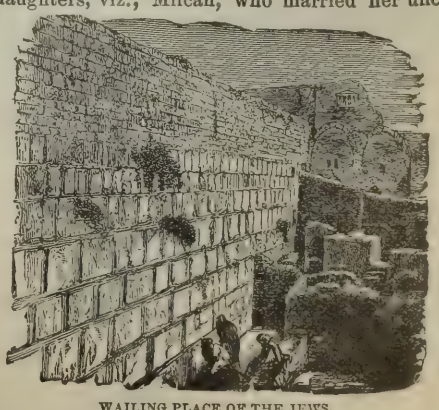
Hanan'eel, The Tower of, a tower which formed part of the wall of Jerusalem (Neh. iii. 1, xii. 39).

Hănani'ah. 1. A false prophet in the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah. In the 4th year of his reign, B. C. 595, Hananiah withstood Jeremiah the prophet, and prophesied in the temple (Jer. xxviii.). Hananiah corroborated his prophecy by taking from the neck of

MOUNT HOREB.

Jeremiah the yoke he wore by Divine command (Jer. xxvii.) and breaking it. But Jeremiah was bid to tell Hananiah that for the wooden yokes broken he should make yokes of iron, so firm was the dominion of Babylon destined to be for seventy years. Jeremiah added this rebuke and prediction of Hananiah's death. 2. The Hebrew name of Shadrach. He was of the house of David, according to tradition (Dan. i. 3, 6, 7, 11, 19; ii. 17). 3. Son of Zerubbabel (1 Chr. iii. 19), from whom CHRIST derived his descent. He is by St. Luke called Joanna.

Hand'icraft (Acts xviii. 3, xix. 25; Rev. xviii. 22), with iron, working in brass, or copper alloyed with tin, bronze, is mentioned as practised (Gen. iv. 22). The worker in gold and silver must have found employment in very early times (Gen. xxiv. 22, 53, xxxv. 4, xxxviii. 18; Deut. vii. 23). 2. The work of the carpenter is often mentioned (Gen. vi. 14; Ex. xxxvii.; Is. xliv. 13). Jewish carpenters must have been able to carve with some skill (Is. xli. 7, xliv. 13).



NEAR THE SOURCE OF THE JORDAN.

3. Masons employed by David and Solomon were Phoenicians (1 K. v. 18; Ez. xxvii. 9). For ordinary building, mortar was used; sometimes, perhaps, bitumen (Gen. xi. 3). The use of whitewash is remarked (Matt. xxiii. 27). Houses infected with leprosy were required to be re-plastered (Lev. xiv. 40-45). 4. Ship and boat building must have been exercised (Matt. viii. 23, ix. 1; John xxi. 3, 8). Solomon built, at Ezion-Geber, ships for his foreign trade. 5. The perfumes used imply practice in the art of the "apothecaries." 6. The arts of spinning and weaving wool and linen were carried on. The loom with beam (1 Sam. xvii. 7), pin (Judg. xvi. 14), and shuttle (Job vii. 6), was as early as David's time (1 Sam. xvii. 7). We read also of embroidery with gold and silver threads (Ex. xxvi. 1, xxviii. 4; xxxix. 6–13). 7. Besides these arts, dyeing, dressing cloth, and tanning and dressing leather were practiced (Josh. ii. 15–18; 2 K. i. 8; Matt. iii. 4; Acts ix. 43). Tent-makers are noticed in the Acts (xviii. 3), as also the potters. 8. Bakers are noticed (Jer. xxxvii. 21; Hos. vii. 4).

Hanging, Hangings. (1.) The "hanging" was a curtain or "covering" to close an entrance (Ex. xxvi. 36, 37, xxxix. 38). (2.) The "hangings" were used for covering the walls of the court of the Tabernacle (Ex. xxvii. 9, xxxv. 17, xxxviii. 9; Num. iii. 26, iv. 26).

Han'nah, one of the wives of Elkanah, and mother of Samuel (1 Sam. i. ii.).

Hā'ran. 1. Third son of Terah, and youngest brother of Abram (Gen. xi. 26). Three children are ascribed to him—Lot (27, 31), and two daughters, viz., Milcah, who married her uncle

WAILING PLACE OF THE JEWS.

Nahor (29), and Iscah (29). Haran was born in Ur of the Chaldees, and he died there while his father was living (28). 2. HARAN OR CHARRAN (Acts vii. 2, 4), name of the place whither Abraham migrated. It is said to be in Mesopotamia (Gen. xxiv. 10).

Hare occurs (Lev. xi. 6, and Deut. xiv. 7) amongst the animals disallowed. It was erroneously thought by the Jews to have chewed the cud.

JOSEPH'S COAT BROUGHT TO JACOB.

They were misled by the habit these animals have of moving the jaw about.

Harlot. That this class of persons existed is clear from Gen. xxxviii. 15. The "harlots" are classed with "publicans," as under the ban of society in the N. T. (Matt. xxi. 32).

Ha'rod, The Well of, a spring by which Gideon and his great army encamped on the morning of the rout of the Midianites (Judg. vii. 1).

Har'ŏsheth "of the Gentiles," a city in the north of Canaan. It was the residence of Sisera (Judg.

HERA.

HEAD-DRESS.

iv. 2), and the point to which Barak pursued the discomfited host (Judg. iv. 16).

Harp, the national instrument of the Hebrews. Moses assigns its invention to the antediluvian period (Gen. iv. 21).

Harrow. The word so rendered (2 Sam. xii. 31; 1 Chr. xx. 3) is probably a threshing-machine.

Hart. The hart is among the clean animals (Deut. xii. 15, xiv. 5) commonly killed for food. The Heb. masc. noun ayyal denotes either the fallow-deer or the Barbary deer.

Hav'ilah. 1. A son of Cush (Gen. x. 7); and, 2. A son of Joktan (x. 29). It appears probable both stocks settled in the same country, and intermarried.

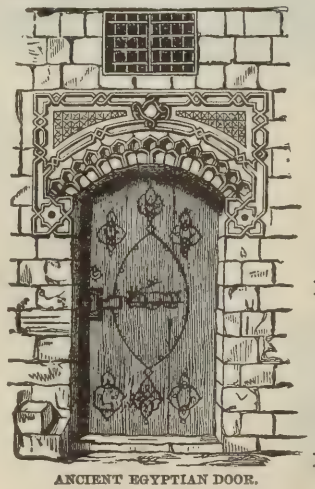
Hav'ilah (Gen. ii. 11). [EDEN.]

HEAD-DRESS OF EASTERN RIDING HORSE.

Hăvoth-jā'ir, certain villages east of Jordan taken by Jair the son of Manasseh, and called after his name (Num. xxxii. 41; Deut. iii. 14).

Hawk (Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 15; Job. xxxix. 26). The word is doubtless generic, and includes various species of the Falconidae.

AN EASTERN KING.



Hay, the rendering in Prov. xxvii. 25, and Is. xv. 6, of a word which denotes "grass" of any kind. It is certain that the ancients did mow their grass and use the dry material. See Ps. xxxvii. 2.

Haz'ael, a king of Damascus, who reigned from about B. C. 886 to B. C. 840. He appears in a high position at the court of Benhadad, and was sent to Elisha to inquire if his master would recover from his malady. Elisha's answer led to the murder of Benhadad by his servant, who mounted the throne (2 K. viii. 7–15). Hazael appears to have died about the year B. C. 840, having reigned 46 years.

Hazel (Gen. xxx. 37). Authorities are divided between the hazel and the almond tree. The latter is probably correct.

Ha'zo, a son of Nahor, by Milcah his wife (Gen. xxii. 22).

Head-dress. The earliest notice is in Ex. xxviii. 40. We infer that it was not ordinarily worn in the Mosaic age. The Assyrian head-dress is described in Ez. xxiii. 15. The word rendered "hats" in Dan. iii. 21, properly applies to a cloak.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN DOOR.

Hearth. The cakes baked "on the hearth" (Gen. xviii. 6) were probably baked on hot stones covered with ashes.

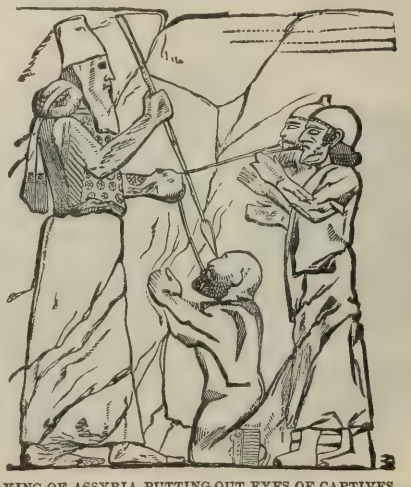
Heath (Jer. xvii. 6), some species of juniper, probably the savin.

Heathen. [GENTILES.]

Heaven. Four Hebrew words are thus rendered. St. Paul's expression "third heaven" (2 Cor. xii. 2) has led to much conjecture. The Jews divided the heaven into three parts, viz., 1. the atmosphere, where clouds gather; 2. the firmament, in which sun, moon, and stars are fixed; 3. the upper heaven, the abode of God and his angels.

He'brew. This word first occurs as given to Abram by the Canaanites (Gen. xiv. 13) because he had crossed the Euphrates. The name is also derived from 'eber, "beyond, on the other side."

He'brews, Epistle to the. There is no reason to doubt that at first, everywhere, except in North Africa, St. Paul was regarded as the author. The Epistle was probably addressed to the Jews in Jerusalem and Palestine. It was evidently written before the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70. The date which best agrees with tradition is A. D. 63, about the end of St. Paul's imprisonment at Rome.



EASTERN HEAD-DRESS.

He'bron. A city of Judah (Josh. xv. 54); situated among the mountains (Josh. xx. 7), 20 Roman miles south of Jerusalem. Hebron is one of the most ancient cities still existing; and in this is the rival of Damascus. It was a well-known town when Abraham entered Canaan 3780 years ago (Gen. xiii. 18). Its original name was Kirjath-Arba (Judg. i. 10), so called from Arba the progenitor of the giant Anakim (Josh. xxi. 14, xv. 13, 14). Sarah died at Hebron, and Abraham then bought the field and cave of Machpelah (Gen. xxiii. 2–20). The cave is still there. Hebron now contains about 5000 inhabitants, of whom some 50 families are Jews.

JEWISH CAPTIVES BEFORE KING OF BABYLON.

Hedge. The Heb. thus rendered denotes that which surrounds or encloses, whether a stone wall (Prov. xxiv. 31; Ez. xlii. 10) or a fence of other materials.

KING OF ASSYRIA PUTTING OUT EYES OF CAPTIVES.

Heifer. The Hebrew is applied to cows that have calved (1 Sam. vi. 7–12; Job xxi. 10; Is. vii. 21). The heifer or young cow was used only for treading out the corn (Hos. x. 11).

Heir. Under the Patriarchal system the property was divided among the sons of the legitimate wives (Gen. xxi. 10, xxiv. 36, xxv. 5), a larger portion being assigned to the eldest, on whom devolved the maintaining the females of the family. The sons of concubines were portioned off with presents (Gen. xxv. 6). The Mosaic law regulated the succession (Deut. xxi. 17; Num. xxvii. 8, xxxvi. 6, ff.).

APPROACH TO JERUSALEM.

He'li, the father of Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary (Luke iii. 23); maintained to have been the real brother of Jacob, the father of the Virgin herself.

Hel'kath Hez'zurim, a smooth ground close to the pool of Gibeon, where the combat took place mentioned in 2 Sam. ii. 16).

Hell. The word generally used to render the Hebrew Sheol. It would have been better to retain the Hebrew. The word most frequently used in the N. T. for the place of future punishment is Gehenna or Gehenna of fire.

Hel'lenist. In the first Christian Church at Jerusalem (Acts vi. 1), two distinct parties are recognized, "Hebrews" and "Hellenists" (Grecians). The Hellenists included not only proselytes of Greek parentage, but also Jews who had adopted Greek civilization and the Greek dialect.

HOOPOE.

Hem of Garment. The importance the later Jews, especially the Pharisees (Matt. xxiii. 5), attached to the hem of their garments was founded upon Num. xv. 38, 39.

He'man. Son of Joel, the grandson of Samuel the prophet. He is called "the singer," rather the musician (1 Chr. vi. 33), to whom was committed the vocal and instrumental music of the temple-service in the reign of David (1 Chr. xv. 16–22). In 1 Chr. xxv. he is called (ver. 5) "the king's seer in the matters of God."

Hem'lock. The Hebrew rosh is rendered "hemlock" (Hos. x. 4); elsewhere "gall."

Hen. The hen is nowhere noticed in the Bible except in Matt. xxiii. 37; Luke xiii. 34.

He'pher, a place in ancient Canaan (Josh. xii. 17), on the west of Jordan.

Hĕr'ald (Dan. iii. 4). The term might be substituted for "preacher" in 1 Tim. ii. 7; 2 Tim. i. 11; 2 Pet. ii. 5.

Herd, Herds'man. The herd was greatly regarded both in the patriarchal and Mosaic period. The ox was the most precious stock next to horse and mule. Cattle formed thus one of the traditions of the Israelitish nation in its greatest period. The occupation of herdsman was honorable in early times (Gen. xlvii. 6; 1 Sam. xi. 5; 1 Chr. xxvii. 29, xxviii. 1). Saul himself resumed it in the interval of his cares as king. David's herd-masters were among his chief officers of state.

Her'mas, the name of a Christian at Rome to whom St. Paul sends greeting (Romans xvi. 14). Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Origen agree in attributing to him the work called the Shepherd; while others affirm it to have been the work of a namesake.

Her'mes (Rom. xvi. 14). According to tradition he was one of the Seventy disciples, and afterwards Bishop of Dalmatia.

Hermŏg'enēs, a person mentioned by St. Paul (2 Tim. i. 15) when all in Asia had turned away from him, and among their number "Phygellus and Hermogenes."

Her'mon, the most conspicuous and beautiful mountain in Palestine. When the country is parched with the sun, lines of snow streak the head of Hermon. This mountain was the great landmark of the Israelites. The height has never been measured. It may safely be reckoned at 10,000 feet.

Her'od. This family, though of Idumaean origin, and aliens by race, were Jews in faith. I. Herod the Great was the second son of Antipater, appointed Procurator of Judaea by Julius Caesar, B. C. 47. At fifteen years old, he received the government of Galilee. At Rome he was appointed by the senate king of Judaea. In a few years, by the help of the Romans, he took Jerusalem (B. C. 37), and completely established his authority. His domestic life was embittered by cruel acts of vengeance. The greatest of his works was the rebuilding of the Temple. The restoration was begun B. C. 20. II. Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great. His father appointed him "tetrarch of Galilee and Peraea" (Matt. xiv. 1; Luke iii. 19; Acts xiii. 1). He first married a daughter of Aretas, but after made overtures of marriage to Herodias, the wife of his half-brother Herod Philip, which she received favorably. Pilate sent our Lord for examination (Luke xxiii. 6, ff.) to Herod Antipas. Herod finally died in exile. III. Herod Agrippa I. was the son of Aristobulus and grandson of Herod the Great. He received (A. D. 41) the government of Judaea and Samaria. He put to death James the son of Zebedee, and further imprisoned Peter (Acts xii. 1, ff.). In the fourth year of his reign over the whole of Judaea (A. D. 44) Agrippa attended some games at Caesarea. When he appeared (Acts xii. 21) his flatterers saluted him as a god; and suddenly he was seized with terrible pains, and being carried to the palace died after five days' agony. IV. Herod Agrippa II. was the son of Herod Agrippa I. The relation in which he stood to his sister Berenice (Acts xxv. 13) was the cause of grave suspicion. In the last Roman war, after the fall of Jerusalem Agrippa retired with Berenice to Rome, where he died in the third year of Trajan (A. D. 100).

JEWISH HIGH-PRIEST OFFERING INCENSE.

Herō'dians. A party under the name of Herodians is represented as acting in concert with the Pharisees (Matt. xxii. 16; Mark xii. 13; comp. also iii. 6, viii. 15). There were probably many who saw in the Herodian family the pledge of their national existence in the face of Roman ambition.

Herō'dias, daughter of Aristobulus, one of the sons of Mariamne and Herod the Great, and consequently sister of Agrippa I. She first married Herod Philip I.; then she eloped from him to marry Herod Antipas. The head of John the Baptist was granted to the request of Herodias (Matt. xiv. 8–11; Mark vi. 24–28). According to Josephus the execution took place in a fortress called Machaerus. She accompanied Antipas into exile to Lugdunum.

EASTERN INN, OR CARAVANSARAI.

Herō'dion, a relative of St. Paul, to whom he sends his salutation (Rom. xvi. 11).

Heron. The Hebrew appears as an unclean bird in Lev. vi. 19, Deut. xiv. 18. It was probably a generic name. The only point on which commentators agree is, that it is not the heron.

Hesh'bon, the capital city of Sihon king of the Amorites (Num. xxi. 26). The ruins of Hesban, 20 miles east of the Jordan, mark the site. There are many cisterns among the ruins (comp. Cant. vii. 4).

Heth, the forefather of the nation of THE HITTITES, a Hamite race, neither of the "country" nor EGYPTIAN LADIES.

"kindred" of Abraham (Gen. xxiv. 3, 4, xxviii. 1, 2).

Hezeki'ah. Twelfth king of Judah, son of the apostate Ahaz and Abi (or Abijah), ascended the throne at the age of 25, B. C. 726. Hezekiah was one of the three most perfect kings of Judah (2 K. xviii. 5; Ecclus. xlix. 4). His first act was to purge, and repair, and reopen the Temple, which had been despoiled during the idolatrous reign of his father. A still more decisive act was the destruction of a brazen serpent. Hezekiah's dangerous illness (2 K. xx.; Is. xxxviii.; 2 Chr. xxxii. 24) nearly synchronized with Sargon's futile invasion, in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah's reign. His kingdom was in a dangerous crisis, and he "turned his face to the wall and wept sore" at the threatened approach of dissolution. God heard his prayer. Isaiah was ordered to promise the king recovery, ratifying the promise by curing the boil by a plaster of figs. Sennacherib's two invasions occupy the greater part of the records concerning Hezekiah. Hezekiah slept with his fathers after a reign of twenty-nine years, in the 56th year of his age (B. C. 697).

OBELISK AT HELIOPOLIS.

He'zion, a king of Aram (Syria), grandfather of Benhadad I., probably identical with REZON (1 K. xi. 23).

Hid'dekel, one of the rivers of Eden (Gen. ii. 14) identified with the Tigris.

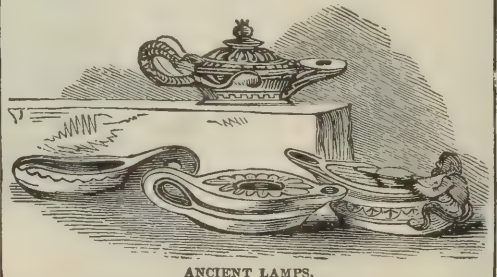
Hi'el, of Bethel, who rebuilt Jericho (1 K. xvi. 34); and in whom was fulfilled the curse by Joshua (Josh. v. i. 26).

Hierap'olis, mentioned (Col. iv. 13) with COLOSSAE and LAODICEA. The three towns were all in the basin of the Maeander, within a few miles of one another.

Higgai'on occurs three times in the book of Psalms (ix. 17, xix. 15, xcii. 4). The word has two meanings, which cannot be determined.

High-priest. 1. LEGALLY. The first distinct separation of Aaron to the office of the priesthood was that recorded Ex. xxviii. We find the following characteristic attributes: (1.) Aaron alone was anointed (Lev. viii. 12). The anointing of the sons of Aaron seems confined to sprinkling their garments with the anointing oil (Ex. xxix. 21, xxviii. 41, &c.). (2.) The high-priest had a peculiar dress, which passed to his successor at his death. According to the LXX. and Josephus, it was the twelve stones of the breastplate which constituted the Urim and Thummim. The history of the high-priests embraces a period of about 1370 years, and a succession of about 80 high-priests, beginning with Aaron and ending with Phannias.

Hilki'ah, high-priest in the reign of Joshua (2 K. xxii. 4, sqq.; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 9, sqq.). According to Ezr. vii. 1, the ancestor of Ezra the scribe. His high-priesthood was illustrious by the discovery which he made of the book of the law of Moses in the Temple.



Hin. [MEASURES.]

Hind, the female of the common stag or cervus elaphus. It is frequently noticed.

DRIVEN FROM JERUSALEM.

Hinge. Ancient Egyptian doors were hung by means of pivots turning in sockets both on the upper and lower sides (1 K. vii. 50).

ANCIENT LAMPS.

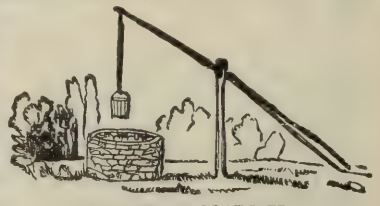
Hin'nom, Valley of, a deep and narrow ravine S. and W. of Jerusalem. The earliest mention is in Josh. xv. 8, xviii. 16. Ahaz and Manasseh made their children "pass through the fire" in this valley (2 K. xvi. 3, 2 Chr. xxviii. 3, xxxiii. 6, and the fiendish custom of infant sacrifice to the fire-gods seems to have been kept up in Tophet, at its S. E. extremity (Jer. vii. 31; 2 K. xxx. 10). To put an end to these abominations the place was polluted by Josiah. The later Jews applied the name of this valley; Ge Hinnom, Gehenna, to denote the place of eternal torment.

Hip'popŏt'amŭs. [BEHEMOTH.]

Hi'ram, or Ha'ram, the king of Tyre who sent workmen and materials to Jerusalem (2 Sam. v. 11; 1 Chr. xiv. 1) to build a palace for David (1 K. v. 1), and again (1 K. v. 10, vii. 13, 2 Chr. 14, 16) to build the Temple for Solomon (1 K. v. 11, 12).

Hit'tites, The, the nation descended from Cheth (A. V. "Heth"), the second son of Canaan.

JOSEPH BEFORE PHARAOH.



Abraham bought from the "Children of Heth" the field and the cave of Machpelah, belonging to Ephron the Hittite.

Hi'vites, The. In the genealogical tables of Genesis, "the Hivite" is named as one of the descendants—the sixth in order—of Canaan, the son of Ham (Gen. x. 17; 1 Chr. i. 15).

Hō'băb (Num. x. 29; Judg. iv. 11). It seems doubtful whether this name denotes the father-in-law or brother-in-law of Moses.

Hō'bah, the place to which Abraham pursued the kings (Gen. xiv. 15). It was "to the north of Damascus."

Höl'ofer'nēs, or, more correctly, OLO-

WELL AND BUCKET AT JAFFA.

FERNES, a general of Nebuchadnezzar (Jud. ii. 4), slain by the Jewish heroine Judith.

Homer. [MEASURES.]

Honey. The Hebrew debash, in the first place, applies to the product of the bee. In the second place, the term debash applies to a decoction of the juice of the grape, which is still called dibs. It was this, and not ordinary bee-honey, which Jacob sent to Joseph (Gen. xliii. 11).

Hook, Hooks. Various kinds of hooks are noticed. 1. Fishing-hooks (Job xli. 2; Is. xix. 8). 2. Properly a ring (A. V. "thorn"). 3. Was led with rings (2 Chr. xxxii. 11; A. V. "in the thorns"). An illustration of this: The hooks of the pillars of the Tabernacle. 4. A vine-dresser's pruning-hook (Is. ii. 4, xviii. 5). 5. A flesh-hook (Ex. xxvii. 3; 1 Sam. ii. 13, 14).

Höph'ni and Phĭn'eas, the two sons of Eli, who fulfilled their sacerdotal duties at Shiloh. Their brutal rapacity and lust (1 Sam. ii. 22, 12–17), filled the people with disgust. They were both cut off in one day.

Hor, Mount. The mountain on which Aaron died (Num. xx. 25, 27). The word Hor is probably an archaic form of Har, the Hebrew for "mountain." It was "on the boundary line" (Num. xx. 23) of the land of Edom. It is surmounted by a circular dome of the tomb of Aaron.

MOUNT HOREB.

Hō'reb. [SINAI.]

Hō'rites and Hō'rims, the aboriginal inhabitants of Mount Seir (Gen. xiv. 6). The name appears derived from their habits as "cave-dwellers." Their excavated dwellings are still found in hundreds.

Horn, often used to signify strength and honor. Horns of iron were worn defiantly and symbolically on the head.

Hornet, referred to as the means Jehovah employed for the extirpation of the Canaanites (Ex. xxiii. 28; Deut. vii. 20; Josh. xxiv. 12; Wisd. xii. 8).

HARE OF MOUNT LEBANON.

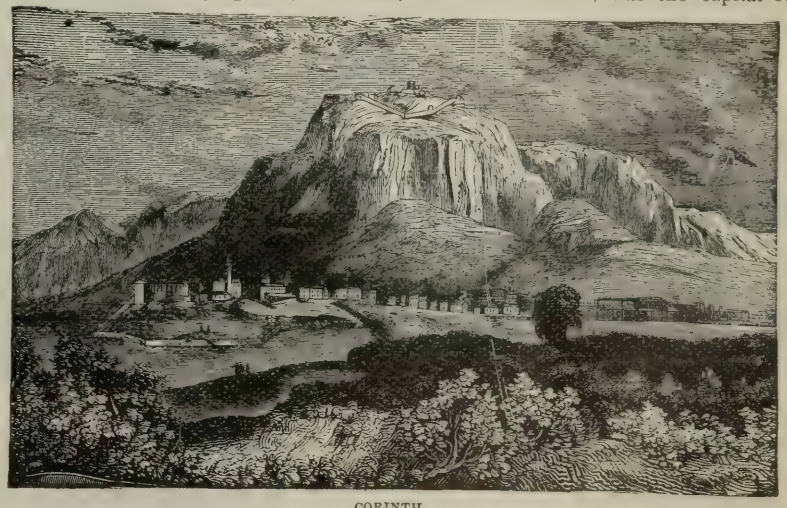
Horse. The animated description of the horse in Job. xxxix. 19–25 applies solely to the war-horse. The Hebrews in the patriarchal age did not stand in need of the horse. David first established a force of cavalry and chariots after the defeat of Hadadezer (2 Sam. viii. 4). But the great supply of horses was subsequently effected by Solomon (1 K. iv. 26).

Horse-leech (Prov. xxx. 15) denotes some species of leech, or rather is the generic term for any bloodsucking annelid.

Hosan'na (Save, we pray"), the cry of the multitudes as they thronged in our Lord's triumphal procession into Jerusalem (Matt. xxi. 9, 15; Mark xi. 9, 10; John xii. 13).

TOMB OF EZRA.

Hosē'a, son of Beeri, and first of the Minor Prophets. It seems almost certain that very few of his prophecies were written until after the death of Jeroboam (783). The prophetic career of Hosea extended over a period of fifty-nine years.



Hoshē'a, the nineteenth, last, and best king of Israel. He succeeded Pekah, whom he slew in a successful conspiracy, thereby fulfilling a prophecy of Isaiah (Is. vii. 16). It took place B. C. 737.

Hoshē'a, the son of Nun, i. e. Joshua (Deut. xxxii. 44; and also in Num. xiii. 8, though there the A. V. has OSHEA).

Hŏspĭtăl'ity. Hospitality was regarded by most nations of the ancient world as one of the chief virtues. The laws respecting strangers (Lev. xix. 33, 34), and the poor, Lev. xxv. 14, seqq.; Deut. xv. 7), and redemption (Lev. xxv. 23, seqq.), &c., are in accordance with hospitality.

Hour. The Greeks adopted the division of the day into twelve hours from the Babylonians. At what period the Jews became first acquainted with this way of reckoning time is unknown, but probably during the captivity.

House. The houses of the rural poor in Egypt, as in Syria, Arabia, and Persia, are for the most part huts of mud, or sunburnt bricks. In some parts of Palestine and Arabia stone is used. In Oriental domestic habits the roof is important. Its flat surface is made useful for drying corn, hanging up linen and preparing figs and raisins. The roofs are used as places of recreation in the evening, and often as sleeping places at night (2 Sam. xi. 2, xvi. 22; Dan. iv. 29; 1 Sam. ix. 25, 26). They were also used as places for devotion, and even idolatrous worship (Jer. xxxii. 29; 2 K. xxiii. 12). Protection of the roof by parapets was enjoined by the law (Deut. xxii. 8).

CORINTH.

Hŭl'dah, a prophetess in the time of king Josiah (2 K. xxii. 14; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 22).

Hur, mentioned with Moses and Aaron on the occasion of the battle with Amalek at Rephidim (Ex. xvii. 10). He is mentioned again in xxiv. 14, as being, with Aaron, in charge of the people. The Jewish tradition is that he was the husband of Miriam.

Hū'shāi, an Archite, i. e. possibly an inhabitant of a place called Erec (2 Sam. xv. 32, ff.; xvi. 16, ff.). To him David confided the delicate and dangerous part of a pretended adherence to the cause of Absalom.

Husks. The word rendered in the A. V. "husks" (Luke xv. 16) describes the fruit of a tree, viz.: the carob. This is commonly met. It produces pods, shaped like a horn, varying in length from 6 to 10 inches, and about a finger's breadth, or rather more.

Hŭz, the eldest son of Nahor and Milcah (Gen. xxii. 21).

Hyaēna. Authorities are at variance as to whether the term tzabu'a in Jer. xii. 9 means a "hyaena," a "speckled bird." The hyaena was common in ancient as in modern Egypt.

Hymenae'us, the name of a person occurring first with Alexander (1 Tim. i. 20), and second with Philetus 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18).

Hyssop, used to sprinkle the doorposts of the Israelites in Egypt with the blood of the paschal lamb (Ex. xii. 22); it was employed in the purification of lepers and leprous houses (Lev. xiv. 4, 51), and in the sacrifice of the red heifer (Num. xix. 6). It is described in 1 K. iv. 33 as growing on or near walls.

JEHOAHAZ LED CAPTIVE BY PHARAOH.

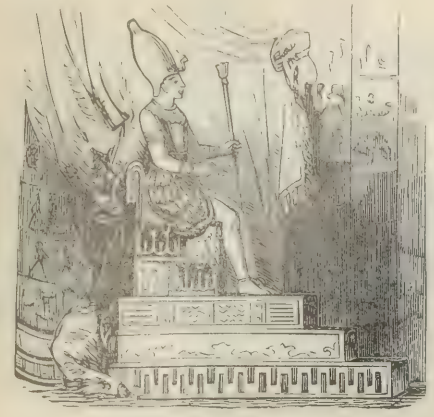
I

Ĭb'har, one of the sons of David (2 Sam. v. 15), born in Jerusalem.

Ĭb'zăn, a native of Bethlehem, who judged Israel seven years after Jephthah (Judg. xii. 8, 10).

Ĭch'abod, the son of Phinehas, and grandson of Eli (1 Sam. iv. 21).

Ĭco'nium, the modern Konieh, was the capital of LYCAONIA. It was between Ephesus and Tarsus, Antioch and the Euphrates.



Ĭd'do. A seer whose "visions" against Jeroboam incidentally contained some of the acts of Solomon (2 Chr. ix. 29). He appears to have written a chronicle or story relating to Abijah (2 Chr. xiii. 22), and also a book "concerning genealogies" (xii. 15). These books are lost, but may have formed part of the foundation of the books of Chronicles.

HARPIST PLAYING BEFORE A KING.

Idolatry, strictly speaking, denotes the worship of deity in a visible form, whether the images to which homage is paid are symbolical represent-tions of the true God or of the false divinities which have been made the objects of worship in His stead. The first undoubted allusion to idolatry is in Gen. xxxi. 19.

EGYPTIAN IDOL.

Idume'a. [EDOM.]

Illyr'icum, an extensive district along the eastern coast of the Adriatic, and contiguous to Moesia and Macedonia (Rom. xv. 19).

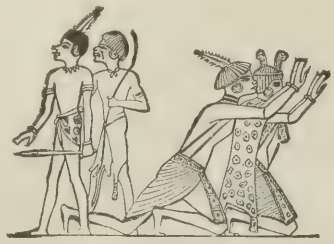
Imman'uel (God with us), the symbolical name given by the prophet Isaiah to the child announced to Ahaz and Judah, as the sign God would give of their deliverance (Is. vii. 14). It is applied to the Messiah (Matt. i. 23).

In'cense. The incense employed in the tabernacle was compounded of stacte, onycha, galbanum, and pure frankincense. All incense not made of these ingredients was forbidden to be offered (Ex. xxx. 9).

RUINS AT KARNAC.

India. The name does not occur in the Bible before the book of Esther, where it is noticed as the limit of the territories of Ahasuerus in the east; as Ethiopia was in the west (i. 1; viii. 9).

Ink, Inkhorn. [WRITING.]



Inn. The Hebrew literally signifies "a lodging-place for the night." Inns, in our sense of the term, were unknown in the East, where hospitality is religiously practiced. The halting-place of a caravan was selected on account of its proximity to water or pasture. Such was undoubtedly the "inn" at which occurred the incident narrated in Ex. iv. 24 (comp. Gen. xlii. 27).

GATE AT JERUSALEM.

Iri'jah, son of Shelemiah who met Jeremiah in the gate, accused him of being about to desert to the Chaldeans, and led him to the princes (Jer. xxxvii. 13, 14).

Iron is mentioned with brass as the earliest of known metals (Gen. iv. 22). The book of Job contains passages which indicate that iron was a metal well known. Sheet-iron was used for cooking utensils (Ez. iv. 3; cf. Lev. vii. 9). That it was plentiful in the time of David appears from 1 Chr. xxii. 3. The market of Tyre was supplied with bright or polished iron by the merchants of Dan and Javan (Ez. xxvii. 19).

I'saac, the son whom Sarah bore to Abraham, in the hundredth year of his age, at Gerar. In his infancy he became the object of Ishmael's jealousy; and in his youth the victim, in intention, of Abraham's great sacrificial act of faith. When forty years old he married Rebekah his cousin, by whom, when sixty, he had two sons, Esau and Jacob. In his seventy-fifth year, he and his brother Ishmael buried their father. From the well Lahai-roi, in the South Country, Isaac was driven by a famine to Gerar. Here Jehovah renewed to him the promises to Abraham. He died at Hebron (xxxv. 27) at the age of 180 years, and was buried by his two sons in the cave of Machpelah.

Isa'iah, the prophet, son of Amoz. He prophesied concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah (Is. i. 1). Isaiah must have been an old man at the close of Hezekiah's reign. The ordinary chronology gives 698 A. D. for the date of Hezekiah's death. This gives us a period of sixty years. THE BOOK OF. The great number and minuteness of the predictions of Isaiah concerning the advent, character, preaching, labors, suffering, and death of our Lord, have secured to him the name of the evangelical prophet. The size, importance, and style of the book give it a leading position among the prophets.

Is'cah, daughter of Haran the brother of Abram, and sister of Milcah and of Lot (Gen. xi. 29). In the Jewish traditions identified with SARAI.

Iscar'iot. [JUDAS ISCARIOT.]

Ish'bak, a son of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2; 1 Chr. i. 32), and progenitor of a tribe of northern Arabia.

Ish'bi-be'nob, one of the race of Philistine giants, who was slain by Abishai (2 Sam. xxi. 16, 17).

EASTERN MODE OF SITTING.

Ish-bo'sheth, the youngest of Saul's four sons, and his legitimate successor. Ishbosheth was "40 years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years" (2 Sam. iii. 10). During these two years he reigned at Mahanaim, only in name. The wars and negotiations with David were carried on by Abner (2 Sam. ii. 12, iii. 6, 12). The death of Abner deprived the house of Saul of their last remaining support. He fell a victim, probably, to revenge for crime of his father (2 Sam. iv. 4).

Ish'mael, son of Abraham by Hagar the Egyptian; born when Abraham was fourscore and six years old (Gen. xvi. 15, 16). Ishmael was the first-born of his father. On the institution of circumcision he was circumcised, being thirteen years old (xvii.

JOPPA.

25). He does not again appear until the weaning of Isaac. He must have been between fifteen and sixteen years of age. "Sarah saw the son of Hagar mocking." The patriarch, comforted by God's promise, sent them both away. "His mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt" (Gen. xxi. 9–21). Of the later life of Ishmael we know little. He was present at the burial of Abraham. He died at the age of 137 years (xxv. 17, 18). The sons of Ishmael eventually formed the chief element of the Arab nation.

Is'rael. 1. The name given (Gen. xxxii. 28) to Jacob after his wrestling with the Angel (Hos.

JACKAL.

xii. 4) at Peniel. Gesenius interprets Israel "soldier of God." 2. It became the national name of the twelve tribes collectively.

Is'sachar, the ninth son of Jacob and the fifth of Leah; the first born to Leah. At the descent into Egypt four sons are ascribed to him.

Ith'amar, the youngest son of Aaron (Ex. vi. 23). After the deaths of Nadab and Abihu (Lev. x. 1), Eleazar and Ithamar were appointed to succeed in the priestly office (Ex. xxviii. 1. 40, 43; Num. iii. 3, 4; 1 Chr. xxiv. 2). The high-priesthood passed into the family of Ithamar in the person of Eli.

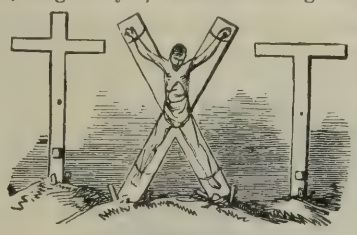
It'tai. "ITTAI THE GITTITE," i. e. of Gath, a Philistine in the Army of David. He appears during the revolution of Absalom. Last in procession came 600 heroes who had formed David's band during his wanderings. Amongst these, apparently commanding, was Ittai (ver. 19). He caught the eye of the king, who besought him to return "with his brethren" (19, 20). But Ittai is firm. When the army was numbered at Mahanaim, Ittai again appears, now in command of a third part of the force (2 Sam. xviii. 2, 5, 12).



SUPPOSED TOMB OF ESTHER AND MORDECAI.

Ituraea, a small province on the northwestern border of Palestine, along the base of Mount Hermon, only mentioned in Luke iii. 1.

Ivah, or Ava (2 K. xviii. 34, xix. 13; comp. Is. xxxvii. 13); probably identical with the modern Hit, on the Euphrates.

Ivory. The Heb. signifies the "tooth' of any animal, and hence the substance of the projecting tusks of elephants. The skilled workmen of Hiram, king of Tyre, fashioned the great ivory throne of Solomon, and overlaid it with pure gold (1 K. x. 18; 2 Chr. ix. 17). The "ivory house" of Ahab (1 K. xxii. 39) was probably a palace, the walls panelled with ivory.

Izhar, son of Kohath, grandson of Levi, uncle of Aaron and Moses, and father of Korah (Ex. vi. 18, 21; Num. iii. 19; xvi. 1; 1 Chr. vi. 2, 18).

J

Jaasiel, son of the great Abner (1 Chr. xxvii. 21).

Jabal, son of Lamech and Adah (Gen. iv. 20), described as father of such as dwell in tents and have cattle.

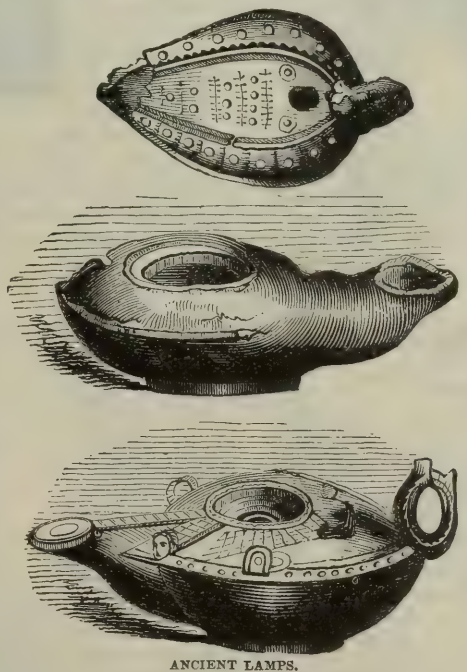
Jabbok, a stream which falls into the Jordan about midway between the sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea. On the south bank the interview took place between Jacob and Esau (Gen. xxxii. 22).



Jabin. 1. King of Hazor, who organized a confederacy against the Israelites (Josh. xi. 1–3). Joshua surprised the allied forces (ver. 7) and routed them. 2. A king of Hazor, whose general, Sisera, was defeated by Barak (Judg. iv. 3, 13).

Jachin. One of the two pillars set up "in the porch" (1 K. vii. 21) or before the temple (2 Chr. iii. 17) of Solomon.

Jacinth, a precious stone, forming one of the foundations of the walls of the new Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 20).

Jacob, second son of Isaac and Rebekah. He was born with Esau, when Isaac was 59 and Abraham 159 years old, probably at the well Lahai-roi. His history is related in the latter half of the book of Genesis. In sign of the grace won by a night of wrestling with God his name was changed at Jabbok into Israel. Joseph was sold into Egypt eleven years before the death of Isaac; and Jacob had probably exceeded his 130th year when he went thither. He was presented to Pharaoh, and dwelt seventeen years in Rameses and Goshen. He died in his 147th year. His body was embalmed, carried with great pomp into Canaan, and deposited in the cave of Machpelah.

by Barak, Sisera fled to the tent of the Kenite chieftainess. He accepted Jael's invitation to enter. At last the weary general resigned himself to deep sleep. Then Jael took in her left hand one of the great wooden pins which fastened down the cords of the tent, and in her right hand a mallet, and with one terrible blow dashed it through Sisera's temples deep into the earth (Judg. v. 27). She then waited to meet the pursuing Barak, and led him into her tent that she might claim the glory of the deed!

Jah, the abbreviated form of "Jehovah," used only in poetry.

Jair. 1. A man descended from Judah and Manasseh. During the conquest he took Argob (Deut. iii. 14), and villages in Gilead, which he called Havvoth-Jair (Num. xxxii. 41; 1 Chr. ii. 23). 2. "Jair the Gileadite," who judged Israel for two-and-twenty years (Judg. x. 3–5). He had thirty sons who rode thirty asses, and possessed thirty cities in Gilead, also called Havvoth-Jair.

Jairus, a ruler of a synagogue near the western shore of the Sea of Galilee (Matt. ix. 18; Mark v. 22; Luke viii. 41).

Jambres. [Jannes and Jambres.]

James. 1. James the son of Zebedee, one of the Twelve. We first hear of him in A. D. 27, when Zebedee, a fisherman (Mark i. 20), was out on the Sea of Galilee with his two sons, James and John, and some boatmen. The name of Boaner-ges was given to the sons of Zebedee.—The "Sons of Thunder" had a burning and impetuous spirit (Luke ix. 54; Mark x. 37). Shortly before the Passover, in 44, he was put to death by Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 1, 2). 2. James the son of Alphaeus, one of the Twelve Apostles (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18, Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13). 3. James the brother of the Lord (Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3; Gal. i. 19).

James the Less, son of Alphaeus or Clopas, and brother of our Lord (see above) was called to the Apostolate, with his brother Jude, in the spring of the year 28. He was eventually appointed to preside over the church at Jerusalem in a position equivalent to that of Bishop. According to tradition, James was thrown from the Temple by the Scribes and Pharisees; then stoned and his brains dashed out by a fuller's club.

BEFORE THE KING.

James, The General Epistle of. The author of this Epistle was in all probability James the son of Alphaeus, and our Lord's brother. It was written from Jerusalem. Its main object is to improve morality. St. James is the moral teacher of the N. T.

Jan'na, son of Joseph, and father of Melchi, in the genealogy of Christ (Luke iii. 24).

Jan'nes and Jam'bres, the names of two Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses. St. Paul alone mentions them, and says they "withstood Moses," and that their folly became manifest (2 Tim. iii. 8, 9).

Japheth, one of the three sons of Noah. The descendants of Japheth occupied the "isles of the Gentiles" (Gen. x. 5), i. e. the coast-lands of the Mediterranean Sea in Europe and Asia Minor.

Jā'red, one of the antediluvian patriarchs, the fifth from Adam; father of Enoch (Gen. v. 15, 16, 18–20; Luke iii. 37).

ANTELOPES OF JUDAEA.

Ja'sher, Book of, or, as the margin gives it, "the book of the upright," a record alluded to in Josh. x. 13, and 2 Sam. i. 18, and the subject of much dispute.

Jā'son. 1. JASON THE HIGH-PRIEST, the second son of Simon II., and brother of Onias III. 2. JASON THE THESSALONIAN, who entertained Paul and Silas, and was in consequence attacked by the Jewish mob (Acts xvii. 5, 6, 7, 9). Probably the same as the Jason in Rom. xvi. 21.

Jasper, a precious stone frequently noticed in Scripture. It was the last of the twelve in the high-priest's breastplate (Ex. xxviii. 20, xxxix. 13).

HOUSE AT JERUSALEM.

Jā'van. There can be no doubt that Javan was regarded as the representative of the Greek race.

Je'bus, one of the names of Jerusalem (Josh. xv. 8; Judg. xix. 10, 11).

Jeb'usites, The, were descended from the third son of Canaan (Gen. x. 16; 1 Chr. i. 14). First appear in Num. xiii. 29).

Jĕd'idāh, queen of Amon, and mother of the good king Josiah (2 K. xxii. 1).

Jĕdidī'ah, JEDID-JAH, "darling of Jehovah," the name bestowed, through Nathan the prophet, on David's son Solomon (2 Sam. xii. 25).

Jĕd'uthŭn, a Levite, probably the same as Ethan. His office was to preside over the music of the temple service. Jeduthun's name stands at the head of the 39th, 62d, and 77th Psalms.

Jē'gar-sāhadū'tha ("heap of testimony"), the Aramaean name given by Laban to the heap of stones he erected as a memorial of the compact between Jacob and himself, while Jacob commemorated the same by setting up a pillar (Gen. xxxi. 47).

Jehō'ahăz, the son and successor of Jehu, reigned 17 years B. C. 856–840 over Israel in Samaria. His inglorious history is given in 2 K. xiii. 1–9.

Jehoi'achĭn, son of Jehoiakim and Nehushta, and for three months and ten days king of Judah, B. C. 597. Nebuchadnezzar carried him to Babylon (Jer. xxix. 2)

Jehoi'ada, high-priest at the time of Athaliah's usurpation of the throne of Judah (B. C. 884–878.) He married JEHOSHEBA, or Jehoshabeath, daughter of king Jehoram, and sister of king Ahaziah (2 Chr. xxii. 11); and when Athaliah slew the seed royal he and his wife stole Joash from among the king's sons, and hid him in the Temple, and eventually placed him on the throne. The destruction of Baal-worship and the restoration of the Temple were effected by Jehoiada. He died B. C. 834.

WINNOWING WITH WOODEN SHOVELS. TREADING OUT THE GRAIN. RAKING UP THE EARS.

Jehoi'akĭm, called ELIAKIM, son of Josiah and Zebudah, and king of Judah. After deposing Jehoahaz, Pharaoh Necho set Eliakim, his elder brother, upon the throne, and changed his name to Jehoiakim, B. C. 608–597. Jehoiakim came to a violent end in the 11th year of his reign. His body, after being exposed, was dragged away and buried "with the burial of an ass" (Jer. xxii. 18, 19, xxxvi. 30). All accounts ascribe to him a vicious and irreligious character.

Jehŏn'adăb and Jon'adab, the son of Rechab, founder of the Rechabites. It appears from 1 Chr. ii. 55, that his ancestor belonged to a branch of the Kenites. He is expressly mentioned in 2 K. x.

Jehō'ram. 1. Son of Ahab king of Israel, who succeeded his brother Ahaziah, B. C. 896, and died B. C. 884. He practiced idolatry during the greater part of his life. In 1st and 2d Kings are given many incidents of his reign in which the prophet Elisha figured. Jehoram fell pierced by an arrow from Jehu's bow on the very plot of ground Ahab had wrested from Naboth; thus fulfilling the prophecy of Elijah (1 K. xxi. 21-29). 2. Eldest son of Jehoshaphat, succeeded his father on the throne of Judah, and reigned eight years, from B. C. 893–2 to 885–4. As soon as fixed on the throne, he put his six brothers to death, with many of the chief nobles. He then proceeded to establish the worship of Baal. He died of a terrible disease (2 Chr. xxi. 19, 20).

Jĕhoshăb'eăth, the form in which JEHOSHEBA is given in 2 Chr. xxii. 11.

Jehŏsh'aphăt, king of Judah, son of Asa, succeeded to the throne B. C. 914, when he was 35 years old, and reigned 25 years. His history is to be found in 1 K. xv. 24; 2 K. viii. 16, or in 2 Chr. xvii. 1–xxi. 3. He was contemporary with Ahab, Ahaziah, and Jehoram.

Jehŏsh'aphăt, Valley of. That deep ravine which separates Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, through which at one time the Kedron forced its stream.

Jehŏsh'eba, daughter of Joram king of Israel, and wife of Jehoiada the high-priest (2 K. xi. 2).

Jehŏsh'ua, that is, "help of Jehovah" or "Saviour." In this form is given the name of Joshua in Num. xiii. 16.

JEHOVAH. The true pronunciation of this name, known to the Hebrews, has been lost, the Jews avoiding every mention of it. This custom was founded upon Lev. xxiv. 16. According to tradition, it was pronounced once a year by the high-priest when he entered the Holy of Holies; but on this there is some doubt.

Jehōvah-jireh, i. e. "Jehovah will see," or "provide," the name given by Abraham to the place on which he had been commanded to offer Isaac (Gen. xxii. 14).

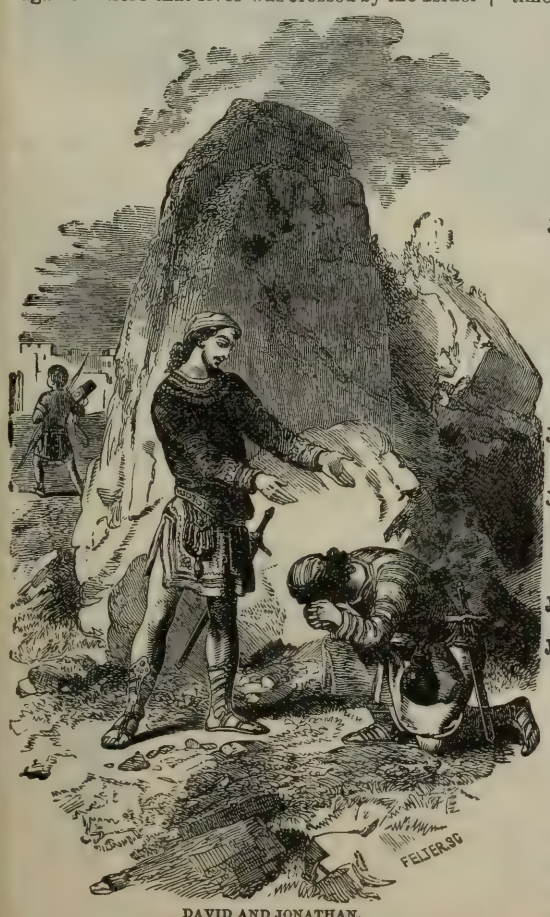
Jehō'vahnĭs'si, i. e. "Jehovah my banner," the name given by Moses to the altar built in commemoration of the discomfiture of the Amalekites at Rephidim (Ex. xvii. 15).

VICTORY OVER THE AMMONITES.

Jehō'vah-shā'lom, i. e. "Jehovah (is) peace," or, "Jehovah, the God of peace," the altar erected by Gideon in Ophrah (Judg. vi. 24).

Jē'hu, the founder of the fifth dynasty of the kingdom of Israel, son of Jehoshaphat (2 K. ix. 2). His appointment to the kingly office; his appearance at Jezreel; his destruction of the family and court of Ahab, and his slaughter of the idolaters in the Temple, are recorded in the books of Kings. He reigned 27 years and was succeeded by his son Jehoahaz (2 K. x. 35).

WATER CARRIER OF JERICHO.



Jĕph'thah, a judge, about B. C. 1143-1137. His history is continued in Judg. xi. 1–xii. 8. He was a Gileadite, the son of Gilead and a concubine. He judged Israel six years and died. That the daughter of Jephthah was really offered in sacrifice, is a conclusion it seems impossible to avoid.

Jĕremī'ah was "the son of Hilkiah of the priests that were in Anathoth" (Jer. i. 1), and was a child in the reign of Josiah, B. C. 638–608 (i. 6). In his youth he was called to the prophetic office. In Egypt, in the city of Tahpanhes, we have the last clear glimpses of the Prophet's life. He does not shrink from speaking of the Chaldean king as "the servant of Jehovah" (xliii. 10). After this all is uncertain. THE BOOK OF, is made up principally of prophesies delivered at various times. The last chapter was probably by Ezra.

Jĕremī'as, the Greek form of Jeremiah (Matt. xvi. 14).

Jĕr'emy, the prophet Jeremiah (Matt. ii. 17. xxvii. 9).

Jer'icho, a city of high antiquity, situated in a plain traversed by the Jordan, and exactly over against where that river was crossed by the Israelites under Joshua (Josh. iii. 16). It had a king. Its walls were considerable (ii. 15), and its gates were shut "when it was dark" (v. 5). The spoil found in it betokened its affluence.

DAVID AND JONATHAN.

Jer'imoth. Son of king David, whose daughter Mahalath was one of the wives of Rehoboam, her cousin Abihail being the other (2 Chr. xi. 18).

Jĕrobō'am. 1. The first king of the divided kingdom of Israel (B. C. 975–954), the son of Nebat an Ephraimite. He was employed by Solomon (1 K. xi. 28). After Solomon's death, upon the revolt of the ten tribes, he was elevated to the throne of the northern kingdom. He wickedly resorted to idol worship. After a reign of 22 years, he died (2 Chr. xiii. 20; 1 K. xiv. 20). 2. JEROBOAM II., son of Joash (B. C. 825-784). The most prosperous of the kings of Israel (2 K. xiv. 28, xiii. 5; 1 Chr. v. 17–22).

Jerŭbba'ăl, the surname of Gideon, acquired in destroying the altar of Baal (Judg. vi. 32).

Jeru'salem. The earliest notice is in Josh. xv. 8 and xviii. 16, 28. Here it is styled Ha-Jebusi, after its occupiers. Next, we find the form JEBUS (Judg. xix. 10, 11); and lastly, Jerusalem (Josh. x. 1 &c., xii. 10; Judg. i. 7, &c.). It is 32 miles from the sea, 18 from the Jordan, 20 from Hebron, and 36 from Samaria. Its elevation is remarkable. The various spots of special interest about the city are described under their own names, and to them the reader is referred. In the fifteen centuries between the first mention of the city in the Old Testament and the latest mention in the New, it was besieged no fewer than seventeen times; twice it was razed to the ground; and on two other occasions its walls were levelled. It was taken by the Crusaders in 1099. In 1187 it was retaken by Saladin. In 1277 Jerusalem was nominally annexed to Sicily. In 1517 it passed under the Ottoman Sultan Selim I. The Pasha of Egypt took possession of it in 1832; and in 1840 it was again restored to the Sultan.

Jĕs'se, the father of David, was the son of OBED, the fruit of the union of Boaz and Ruth. His great grandmother was Rahab the Canaanite, of Jericho (Matt. i. 5). Jesse's genealogy is twice given in the O. T., viz. Ruth iv. 18–22, and 1 Chr. ii. 5–12. He is designated "Jesse the Bethlehemite" (1 Sam. xvi. 1, 18). Jesse's wealth consisted of sheep and goats, which were under the care of David (xxvi. 11, xvii. 34, 35).

JĒSUS, the Greek form of Joshua or Jeshua, a contraction of Jehoshua, that is, "help of Jehovah" or "Saviour" (Num. xiii. 16).

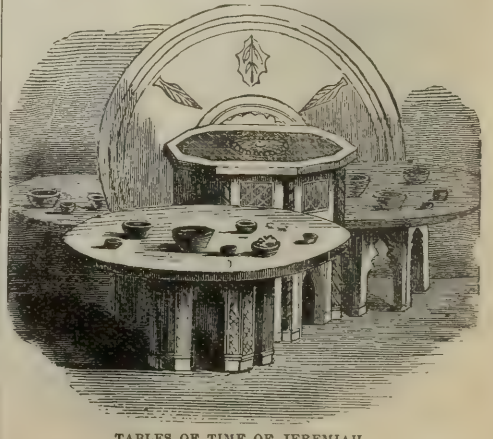
Jesus the Son of Sirach is described in Ecclesiasticus (i. 27) as the author of that book, which generally is called the Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, or simply the Wisdom of Sirach.

Je'sus, called Justus, a Christian who was with St. Paul at Rome (Col. iv. 11).

Je'sus Christ. The name Jesus signifies Saviour. The name of Christ signifies Anointed. In the N. T. the name Christ is used as equivalent to Messiah (John i. 41), the name given to the long-promised Prophet and King whom the Jews had been taught to expect (Acts xix. 4; Matt. xi. 3). The name of Jesus is the proper name of our Lord, and that of Christ is added to identify Him with the promised Messiah. According to received chronology, the Birth of Christ occurred in the year of Rome 754 (A. D. 1). The life, embracing the childhood, youth, ministry, and crucifixion of our Saviour are given in the Gospels.

Jē'ther. Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses (Ex. iv. 18).

Jē'thro was priest or prince of Midian. Moses spent his exile from Egypt with him, and married his daughter Zipporah.



INTERPRETING TO KING OF BABYLON.

Jew. This name was applied to a member of the kingdom of Judah after the separation of the ten tribes. The term first makes its appearance just before the captivity of the ten tribes (2 K. xvi. 6).

Jew'ry, elsewhere rendered Judah and Judaea. Jewry comes to us through the Norman-French, and is of frequent occurrence in Old English.

Jĕz'ebĕl, wife of Ahab king of Israel, and mother of Athaliah, queen of Judah, and Ahaziah and Joram, kings of Israel. She was a Phoenician princess. In her hands her husband became a mere puppet (1 K. xxi. 25). She was a firm supporter of the idolatries of the Phoenicians, and brought upon herself and her husband the curse and its fulfillment recorded in 1 K. xxi. 23.

Jĕz're-el, a city in the plain, now called Esdraelon. Its historical importance dates from the reign of Ahab, who chose it for his chief residence. The situation of the modern village of Zerin still remains to show the fitness of his choice.

TABLES OF TIME OF JEREMIAH.

Jō'ab, the most remarkable of the three nephews of David, the children of Zeruiah, David's sister.

Joab first appears after David's accession at Hebron. At the siege of Jebus he was appointed for his prowess commander-in-chief. In the wide range of wars which David undertook, Joab was the acting general. At the close of his long life, he turned after Adonijah (1 K. ii. 28). Joab fled to the altar at Gibeon, and was there slain by Benaiah.

Joăn'na. 1. (Luke iii. 27). One of the ancestors of Christ. 2. The (Luke viii. 3, xxiv. 10) "wife of Chuza, steward of Herod," that is, Antipas.

TEAR BOTTLE.

Jō'ăsh, contr. from JEHOASH. Son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, the only one who escaped the murderous Athaliah. After his father's sister, the wife of Jehoiada the high-priest, had stolen him, he was hidden for six years in the Temple. In the 7th year of his age and concealment, a successful revolution placed him on the throne. While Jehoiada lived, this reign was prosperous. But, after, Joash fell into the hands of bad advisers, and he revived the worship of Baal and Ashtaroth. Following this came calamity and violent death.

Jŏb, the patriarch, the name of one of the books of the O. T. His residence in the land of Uz—its name from a son of Aram (Gen. x. 23), or Nahor (Gen. xxii. 21)—marks him as of the ASSYRIAN, PERSIAN, ROMAN, AND GREEK SWORDS.

Aramaean race, which settled in lower Mesopotamia. The date of the book is doubtful. It may be regarded as settled that the book was written long before the exile. All critics have recognized its grand archaic character. In all the descriptions of manners and customs, domestic, social, and political, the genuine coloring of the age of Job is very faithfully observed.

Jŏch'ebĕd, wife and aunt of Amram, and mother of Moses and Aaron (Ex. ii. 1, vi. 20; Num. xxvi. 59).

Jō'el. 1. Eldest son of Samuel the prophet (1 Sam. viii. 2; 1 Chr. vi. 33, xv. 17). 2. The second of the twelve minor prophets. probably prophesied in Judah in the reign of Uzziah. THE BOOK OF. This is a grand outline of the whole terrible scene, which was to be depicted more and more in detail by subsequent prophets.

John the Apostle was the son of Zebedee, a fisherman on the Lake of Galilee, and of Salome, and brother of James, also an apostle. Peter and

KING AND PRISONERS (Egyptian drawing).

James and John come within the innermost circle of their Lord's friends. To John belongs the memorable distinction of being the disciple whom Jesus loved. Tradition relates that under Domitian he is taken to Rome and thrown into boiling oil, which has no power to hurt him. He is then sent to Patmos. The accession of Nerva frees him, and he returns to Ephesus. The dates assigned for his death range from A. D. 89 to A. D. 120.

John the Baptist was of the priestly race by both parents. His father Zacharias was of the course of Abia, or Abijah (1 Chr. xxiv. 10), and Elizabeth was of the daughters of Aaron (Luke i. 5). His birth was foretold by an angel sent from God, and is related at length in the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke. The birth of John preceded by six months that of our Lord. Shortly after his testimony to the Messiah, John's public ministry was brought to a close. Herod Antipas had him executed.

John, Gospel of. Probably the date of this Gospel may lie about A. D. 78. The Gospel was addressed primarily to Christians, not to heathens.

STORMING A CITY.

John, The First, Second, and Third Epistles General of, probably written from Ephesus, and about the close of the first century delivered his doctrine (i. 3, ii. 7). In the introduction (i. 1-4) the Apostle states the purpose of the First Epistle. The Second was to warn the lady to whom he wrote against the teaching of Basilides and his followers. The Third was written for the purpose of commending to Caius some Christians.

Jō'na, the father of Peter (John i. 42), who is addressed as Simon Barjona (i. e. son of Jona) in Matt. xvi. 17.

Jŏn'adăb, son of Shimeah and nephew of David, described as "very subtil" (2 Sam. xiii. 3). His age naturally made him the friend of his cousin Amnon. He gave him the fatal advice for insnaring Tamar (5, 6).

Jō'nah, the fifth of the Minor Prophets, was the son of Amittai, and a native of Gathhepher (2 K. xiv. 25). He lived after the reign of Jehu (2 K. x. 32). Having prophesied to Israel, he was sent to Nineveh. The prophet attempted to escape to Tarshish. God, however, watched over him, first in storm, and then in his being swallowed by a large fish for three days and three nights. After his deliverance, Jonah executed his commission.

Jō'nas. 1. The prophet Jonah (Matt. xii. 39, 40, 41, xvi. 4). 2. Father of Peter (John xxi. 15-17).

he was of great strength and activity (2 Sam. i. 23). He was famous for archery and slinging (1 Chr. xii. 2). His life may be divided into: 1. The war with the Philistines (1 Sam. xiii. 21);

2. His friendship with David. Their last meeting was in the forest of Ziph (1 Sam. xxiii. 16–18). From this we hear no more till the battle of Gilboa (1 Sam. xxxi. 2, 8).

CORNER OF THE HOUSETOP.

Joppa, or JAPHO, now Jaffa, a town on the S. W. coast of Palestine (Josh. xix. 46). Having a harbor attached to it, it became the port of Jerusalem. Here Jonah took ship. Here St. Peter had his vision of tolerance (Acts xi. 5). The existing town contains 4000 inhabitants.

Jor'dan, the one river of Palestine, has a course of 200 miles, from the roots of Anti-Lebanon to the head of the Dead Sea. There were two customary places at which the Jordan was fordable; and at one of these baptism was administered by St. John and by the disciples. Our Lord was baptized probably at the upper ford.

Jŏs'aphăt=Jehoshaphat king of Judah (Matt. i. 8).

Jō'seph. 1. The elder of two sons of Jacob by Rachel. Jacob was at Hebron with the aged Isaac, while his sons kept his flocks. The dream of Joseph; his purchase by the Midianites; his promotion in Egypt, and his remarkable life, are all given at length in Genesis. He lived "a hundred and ten years." 2. One of the ancestors of Christ (Luke iii. 30), son of Jonan. 3. Another ancestor of Christ, son of Judah (Luke iii. 26). 4. Another, son of Mattathias (Luke iii. 24). 5. Son of Heli, and reputed father of Jesus Christ. He was a just man, and of the house and lineage of David. He lived at Nazareth in Galilee, and espoused Mary. That he died before our Lord's crucifixion, is tolerably certain. 6. JOSEPH OF ARIMATHAEA, a rich and pious Israelite (Mark xv. 43), a member of the Great Council, or Sanhedrim. Joseph and Nicodemus having enfolded the sacred body, consigned it to a tomb hewn in a garden belonging to Joseph. 7. He is mentioned first in Ex. xvii. 9. Moses, shortly before his death, was directed (Num. xxvii. 18) to invest Joshua solemnly and publicly with authority, with Eleazar the priest, over the people. Joshua assumed the command of the people at Shittim. He died at the age of 110 years, and was buried in his own city, Timnath-serah.

Jŏsh'ua, Book of, regarded by many as a part of the Pentateuch. The book may be regarded as consisting of three parts: (I.) The conquest of Canaan; (II.) The partition of Canaan; (III.) Joshua's farewell.

Ju'dah, fourth son of Jacob and Leah. His whole-brothers were Reuben, Simeon, and Levi, elder than himself—Issachar and Zebulun, younger (see Gen. xxxv. 23). In the sale of Joseph, he and Reuben stand out in favorable contrast to the rest of the brothers. His sons were five. They are all insignificant; two died early. The numbers of the tribe at the census at Sinai were 74,600 (Num. i. 26, 27).

Jū'das, the Greek form of the Hebrew name JUDAH, occurring in the LXX. and N. T. 1. The Patriarch JUDAH (Matt. i. 2, 3). 2. A man residing at Damascus (Acts ix. 11).

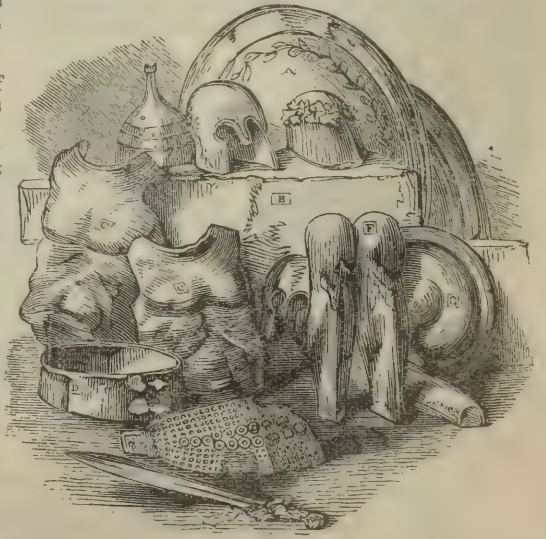
Ju'das, the Lord's brother (Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3). A "Judas" sometimes identified with the Apostle of the same name.

Jude, Epistle of. Its author was probably Jude, one of the brethren of Jesus, the subject of the preceding article. The object of the Epistle is announced, ver. 3; the reason is given ver 4.



Judges. Their power only extended over portions of the country. Though their first work was that of deliverers and leaders in war, they then administered justice to the people, and their authority supplied the want of a regular government.

Judges, Book of, of which the book of Ruth formed originally a part, contains the history from Joshua to Samson. As the history of the Judges occupies the greater part of the narrative, and is the history of the people, the title of the whole book is derived from that portion. The time commonly assigned to the period contained in this book is 299 years.

Judgment-hall. The word Praetorium is so translated five times in the N. T., and denotes: 1. In John xviii. 28, 33, xxix. 9, the residence Pilate occupied when he visited Jerusalem. Probably the tower of Antonia. 2. In Acts xxiii. 35, a part of a magnificent range of buildings erected by king Herod.

Ju'piter (the Greek Zeus). Antiochus Epiphanes dedicated the Temple at Jerusalem to Zeus Olympius (2 Macc. vi. 2), and the rival temple on Gerizim was devoted to Zeus Xenius. Jupiter or Zeus is mentioned in one passage of the N. T., on the occasion of Paul's visit to Lystra (Acts xiv. 12, 13).

Ka'desh, Kā'desh-băr'nea (holy: the same word as the Arabic for Jerusalem, El-Khuds). This scene of Miriam's death was the farthest point the Israelites reached in their road to Canaan; it was also that whence the spies were sent.

Kăd'monites, The (Gen. xv. 19). One of the nations who occupied the land promised to the descendants of Abram.

Ke'dar, the second of the sons of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 13; 1 Chr. i. 29), and name of a great tribe of Arabs, settled on the confines of Palestine. The "glory of Kedar" is recorded by the prophet Isaiah (xxi. 13–17.

BAKER (from Egyptian marble).

Ke'desh. KEDESH; also KEDESH IN GALILEE; and once, Judg. iv. 6, KEDESH-NAPHTALI (Josh. xix. 37); appointed as a city of refuge. It was the residence of Barak (Judg. iv. 6), and there he and Deborah assembled Zebulun and Naphtali before the conflict.

fer that they were a branch of MIDIAN. Jethro is in Judges i. 16, iv. 11, said to have been a Kenite. The Kenites seem to have accompanied the Hebrews during their wanderings (Num. xxiv. 21, 22; Judg. i. 16; comp. 2 Chr. xxviii. 15).

(1 Sam. ii. 14); also rendered "basket" in Jer. xxiv. 2, "caldron" in 2 Chr. xxxv, 13, and "pot" in Job. xli. 20.

Ketū'rah, the wife whom Abraham "added and took" (Gen. xxv. 1; 1 Chr. i. 32). Some think Abraham took Keturah after Sarah's death; but it is more probable he took her during Sarah's lifetime.

Kid'ron (or Ked'ron), The Brook, a torrent or valley—not a "brook," as in the A. V.—close to Jerusalem. It lay between the city and the Mount of Olives, and was crossed by David in his flight (2 Sam. xv. 23, comp. 30), and by our Lord on His way to Gethsemane (John xviii. 1; comp. Mark xiv. 26; Luke xxii. 39). The Kidron priests of Jehovah. He became "the Lord's anointed." He had a court of Oriental magnificence. Those who approached him did him obeisance (1 Sam. xxiv. 8; 2 Sam. xix. 24). His drinking vessels were of gold (1 K. x. 21). He had a large harem, the source of enormous expense.

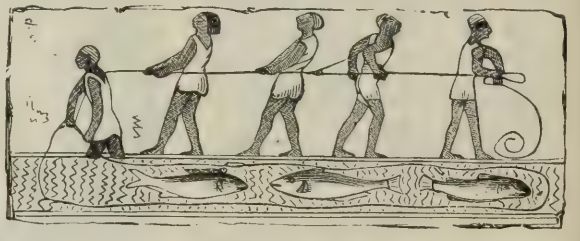
second). As regards the authorship, the Jewish tradition, which ascribes them to Jeremiah, is borne out by the strongest evidence.



Kir'jath-ar'ba, early name of the city which after the conquest is known as HEBRON (Josh. xiv. 15; Judg. i. 10).

Kir'jath-jē'arĭm, one of the four cities of the Gibeonites (Josh. ix. 17). In this high place the ark remained for twenty years (vii. 2).

Kish, the father of Saul; a Benjamite.

Ki'shon, The River. A torrent of central Palestine; scene of the defeat of Sisera (Judg. iv.), and the destruction of the prophets of Baal by Elijah (1 K. xviii. 40).

Kiss. Kissing the lips by way of affectionate salutation was customary (Gen. xxix. 11; Cant. viii. 1). In the Christian Church the kiss of charity was practiced as an act symbolical of love and Christian brotherhood (Rom. xvi. 16; 1 Cor. xvi. 20; 2 Cor. xiii. 12; 1 Thess. v. 26; 1 Pet. v. 14).

Kite (Lev. xi. 14; Deut. xiv. 13; Job xxviii. 7). In the two former translated "kite;" in the latter "vulture."

Knop. Some globular thing resembling a small gourd, or an egg, though as to the ornament we are in the dark.

Kō'hath, second of the three sons of Levi, was father of Amram, and he of Moses and Aaron. He lived to the age of 133 years (Ex. vi. 18).

FIRE-PANS.

Kō'rah, son of Izhar, the son Kohath, the son of Levi. He was leader of the famous rebellion against his cousins Moses and Aaron, for which he paid the penalty of perishing with his followers by an earthquake and flames of fire (Num. xvi., xxvi. 9–11).

Lā'adăn, an Ephraimite, ancestor of Joshua (1 Chr. vii. 26).

Lā'ban, Son of Bethuel, brother of Rebekah, and father of Leah and Rachel (Gen. xxiv. 10, 29–60, xxvii. 43, xxix. 4).

La'chish, a city of the Amorites. the king of which was routed by Joshua at Bethhoron, and fell a victim with the others (ver. 26).

Lahai-ro'i, The Well. In the A. V. of Gen. xxiv. 62, and xxv. 11, the name of the famous well of Hagar's relief.

La'ish, father of Phaltiel, to whom Saul had given Michal, David's wife (1 Sam. xxv. 44; 2 Sam. iii. 15).

La'mech. Properly Lemech. 1. The fifth lineal descendant from Cain (Gen. iv. 18–24). His two wives, Adah and Zillah, and his daughter Naamah, are, with Eve, the only antediluvian women mentioned by Moses. His three sons, JABAL, JUBAL, and TUBAL-CAIN, five chapters, each of which is a separate poem, complete in itself, and having a distinct subject, but brought under a plan which includes them all.

Lamp. 1. That part of the golden candlestick which bore the light. 2. A torch or flambeau (Judg. vii. 16, 20; comp. xv. 4; Matt. xxv. 1).

Lancet. This word is found in 1 K. xviii. 28 only. The Hebrew term elsewhere appears to mean a javelin, or light spear.

Laŏdicē'a, a town in the valley of the Maeander, on a small river called the Lycus, with COLOSSAE and HIERAPOLIS a few miles distant. From Col. iv. 16, St. Paul wrote a letter to this place when he wrote to Colossae.

Lăp'idŏth, the husband of Deborah the prophetess (Judg. iv. 4).

Lapwing. Commentators generally agree that the Hoopoe is the bird intended.

Lase'a (Acts xxvii. 8), a city of Crete, discovered in 1856, a few miles to the eastward of Fair Havens.

Latchet, the thong or fastening by which the sandal was attached to the foot.

Lattice. The rendering of three Hebrew words. 1. Eshnab, translated "casement." 2. Kharaccim (Cant. ii. 9), synonymous with the preceding. 3. Sebacah, is simply "a network" before a window or balcony.

Lā'ver. 1. In the Tabernacle, a vessel of brass containing water for the priests to wash their hands and feet before sacrifice. 2. In Solomon's Temple, besides the great molten sea, there were ten lavers of brass, used for washing the animals to be offered (2 Chr. iv. 6).

Lawyer. Equivalent to the title "scribe," "learned in the law."

Laz'arus, another form of the Hebrew Eleazar. 1. Lazarus of Bethany, the brother of Martha and Mary (John xi. 1). All we know of him is derived from the Gospel of St. John. 2. The name of a poor man in the well-known parable of Luke xvi. 19–31.

Lead. One of the most common of metals, early known to the ancients. The Hebrews were well acquainted with its uses. That it was common in Palestine is shown by the expression in Ecclus. xlvii. 18 (comp. 1 K. x. 27).

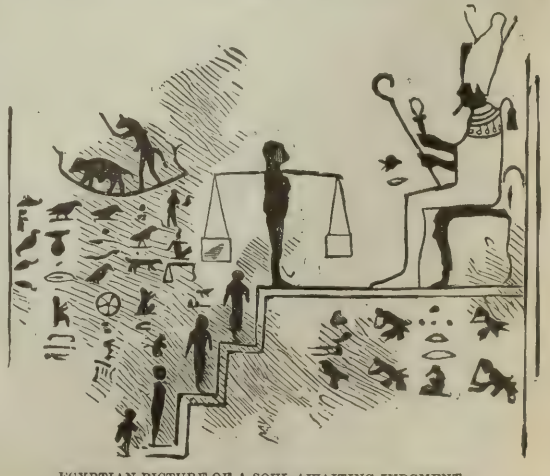
Lēah, the daughter of Laban (Gen. xxix. 16). The dullness or weakness of her eyes is mentioned as a contrast to the beautiful appearance of Rachel. Her father passed her off on unconscious Jacob. Jacob's preference of Rachel grew into hatred of Leah. Leah bore to him Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah, before Rachel had a child. She died in the south country, and was buried in Machpelah (ch. xlix. 31).

STREET IN JERUSALEM.

Leasing, "falsehood" (Ps. iv. 2, v. 6).

Leather. The word occurs but twice in the A. V., in reference to a girdle (2 K. i. 8; Matt. iii. 4).

Leaven. The ordinary leaven consisted of a lump of old dough in a high state of fermentation. The use of leaven was strictly forbidden in all offerings made to the Lord by fire.



Leb'anon, a mountain range in the north of Palestine. The name signifies "white," and was applied either on account of the snow or the white color of its limestone cliffs and peaks. Lebanon is represented as upon the northern border of the land of Israel (Deut. i. 7, xi. 24; Josn. i. 4).

Lebbae'us. This name occurs in Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; substituted in a few MSS. for Thaddaeus.

Leeks. In Num. xi. 5, the Heb. word occurs twenty times, which properly denotes grass, and may stand for any green food.

Lees. The Hebrew was applied to "lees" from the custom of allowing the wine to stand on the lees, that its color and body might be better preserved. Hence, "wine on the lees" meant a generous, full-bodied liquor (Is. xxv. 6).

Legion, the chief subdivision of the Roman army, about 6000 infantry, with cavalry. The term in the Bible appears adopted to express any large number.

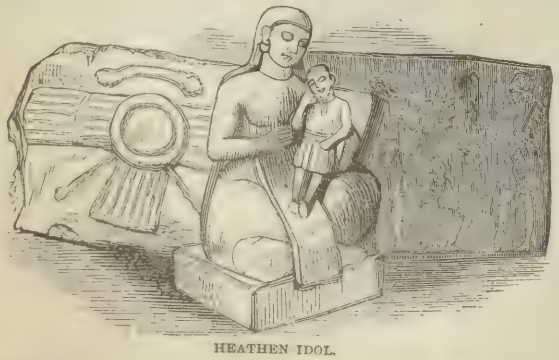
and Ez. iv. 9). There are three or four kinds, all still much esteemed in the South of Europe, Asia, and North Africa. Lentil bread is still eaten by the poor of Egypt.



Leopard. The hilly ranges of Lebanon were frequented by these animals.

Lēpēr, Leprosy. The predominant form of leprosy in Scripture is a white variety, which has obtained the name of lepra Mosaica. Such were the cases of Moses, Miriam, Naaman, and Gehazi (Ex. iv. 6; Num. xii. 10; 2 K. v. 1, 27; comp. Lev. xiii. 13). It is clear that the leprosy of Lev. xiii., xiv., means any severe disease spreading on the body, and so shocking or suspected of infection that public feeling called for separation.

Le'vi. 1. The third son of Jacob by Leah. Levi, with Simeon, avenged with a cruel slaughter the outrage of their sister Dinah. [DINAH.] When Jacob's death draws near, Levi and Simeon hear the old crime brought up to receive its sentence. 2. Son of Alphaeus (Mark ii. 14; Luke v. 27, 29).

Levi'athan. In Job the crocodile is most clearly the animal denoted by the Hebrew word. Ps. lxxiv. 14 also points to this same saurian. The context of Ps. civ. 26 seems to show some animal of the whale tribe; but it is uncertain what animal is denoted in Is. xxvii. 1.

Le'vites, the tribe that traced its descent from Levi. Most frequently the Levites are distinguished, as such, from the priests (1 K. viii. 4; Ezr. ii. 70; John i. 19, &c.), and this is the meaning which has perpetuated itself.

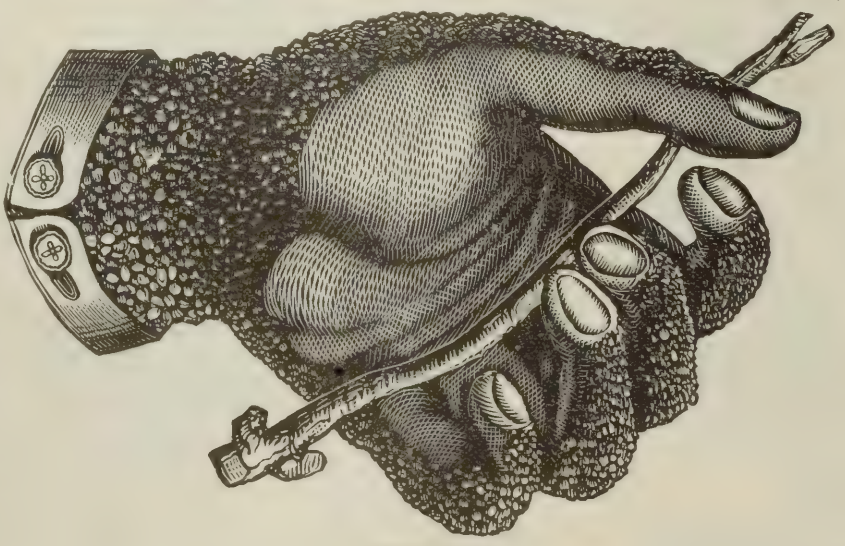
HEATHEN IDOL.

Levit'icus. The Book, which is so called because it relates principally to the Levites and Priests. It was a prophecy of things to come; a shadow whereof the substance was Christ and His kingdom.

Lib'anus. [LEBANON.]

Lib'ertines This word, which occurs in the N. T. (Acts vi. 9), is the Latin Libertini, that is, "freedmen;" probably Jews who, having been reduced to slavery, had afterwards been emancipated.

Lib'ya (Acts ii. 10), "the parts of Libya about Cyrene," which obviously means the Cyrenaica. The name Libya is applied to the African continent, generally excluding Egypt.



Lice (Ex. viii. 16–18; Ps. cv. 31), the third plague. Some commentators suppose that gnats are intended. The Jewish Rabbis, Josephus, and others, are in favor of the translation of the A. V.

Ligure, a precious stone (Ex. xxviii. 19, xxxix. 12), the first in the third row of the high priest's breastplate.

Lily. There appears to be no species of lily which so answers all requirements as the Lilium Chalcedonicum, which grows in profusion in the Levant.

Lime. This substance is noticed only three times in the Bible, viz. in Deut. xxvii. 2, 4 (A. V. "plaister"), and in Is. xxxiii. 12.

Linen. Egypt was the great centre of the linen manufacture of antiquity. Joseph was arrayed "in vestures of fine linen" (shesh, marg. "silk," Gen. xli. 42), and among the offerings the Israelites brought out of Egypt were "blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen" (Ex. xxv. 4, xxxv. 6).

A LEPROUS HAND.

Lintel. The beam which forms the upper part of the framework of a door.

Li'nus, a Christian at Rome (2 Tim. iv. 21), who was first bishop of Rome after the apostles.

Lion. At present lions do not exist in Palestine; but they must in ancient times have been numerous. They had their lairs in the forest, in brushwood and in caves. The lion of Palestine was in all probability the Asiatic variety.

Liz'ard (Lev. xi. 30). The lizard denoted by the Hebrew word is probably the Fan-Foot. It is reddish-brown, spotted with white.

Loan. The Law forbade any interest to be taken for a loan to any poor person.

Locust. In the Bible there are frequent allusions to locusts. The most destructive are the Oedipoda migratoria and the Acridium peregrinum, and both these occur in Syria and Arabia. Locusts occur in great numbers, and sometimes obscure the sun. Their voracity is alluded to in Ex. x. 12, 15; Joel i. 4, 7. They enter dwellings, and devour even the woodwork of houses (Ex. x. 6; Joel ii. 9, 10). Their dead bodies taint the air (Joel ii. 20). Locusts were used as food (Lev. xi. 21, 22; Matt. iii. 4; Mark i. 6). Sometimes they are ground and pounded, and then mixed with flour and water and made into cakes, or they are salted and then eaten; sometimes smoked, boiled, or roasted; stewed, or fried in butter.

Lod. [LYDDA.]

Log. [WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.]

Lo'is, grandmother of TIMOTHY, and doubtless the mother of his mother EUNICE (2 Tim. i. 5). It seems almost certain that from her, as well as from Eunice, Timothy obtained his knowledge of the Scriptures (2 Tim. iii. 15).

Lord. [GOD.]

Lord's Day, The (Rev. i. 10), the weekly festival of our Lord's resurrection, and identified with "the first day of the week," or "Sunday," of every age of the Church. Scripture says little concerning this day. But that little seems to indicate that the divinely inspired apostles, by their practice and precepts, marked the first day of the week as a day for meeting together to break bread, for communicating and receiving instruction, for laying up offerings for charitable purposes, for occupation in holy thought and prayer.

Lord's Supper. The words which describe the great central act of the worship of the Christian Church occur in 1 Cor. xi. 20. It was instituted that night when Jesus and his disciples met together to eat the Passover (Matt. xxvi. 19; Mark xiv. 16; Luke xxii. 13). The disciples had looked on the bread and the wine as memorials of the deliverance from Egypt. They were now told to partake of them "in remembrance" of their Master and Lord. No rule was given as to the time and frequency of the new feast, but the command, "Do this as oft as ye drink it" (1 Cor. xi. 25), suggested the more continual recurrence of that kindred to Charran, and subsequently with Abraham and Sarai to Canaan (xii. 4, 5). At Bethel they separated, Lot advancing as far as Sodom Gen. xiii. 10-14). The next occurrence in the life of Lot is his capture and rescue (Gen. xiv.). The last scene is well known. He is still living in Sodom (Gen. xix.). His deliverance from the condemned city points the allusion of St. Peter (2 Pet. ii. 6–9). The end of Lot's wife is treated as one of the difficulties of the Bible. But it need not be so. From the incestuous intercourse between Lot and his two daughters sprang the nations of Moab and Ammon.

Lot. The custom of deciding doubtful questions by lot is of high antiquity. The religious estimate of them may be gathered from Prov. xvi. 33.

Lots, Feast of. [PURIM.]

Love-feasts (Jude 12, and 2 Pet. ii. 13).

Lu'cifer (Is. xiv. 12) signifies a "bright star." In this passage it is a symbolical representation of the king of Babylon.

Lū'ciŭs. 1. A kinsman or fellow-tribesman of St. Paul (Rom. xvi. 21), said to have been bishop of Cenchreae. 2. LUCIUS OF CYRENE, is first mentioned in the N. T. with Barnabas, Simeon, called Niger, Manaen, and Saul, who are described as prophets and teachers of the church at Antioch (Acts xiii. 1). It is supposed that Lucius is the kinsman of St. Paul, mentioned in Rom. xvi. 21).

Lud, the fourth in the list of the children of Shem (Gen. x. 22; comp. 1 Chr. i. 17), supposed to have been the ancestor of the Lydians.

Luke, or Lu'cas, is an abbreviated form of Lucanus. It is not to be confounded with Lucius (Acts xiii. 1; Rom. xvi. 21). The name Luke occurs three times in the N. T. (Col. iv. 14; 2 Tim. iv. 11; Philem. 24), and probably in all three the evangelist is spoken of. He was born at Antioch in Syria, and was taught medicine. He was not born a Jew (comp. Col. iv. 11 with ver. 14). The date of his conversion is uncertain. He joined St. Paul at Troas. He remained at his side during his imprisonment. As to his age and death, there is the utmost uncertainty. He probably died a martyr between A. D. 75 and A. D. 100.

Luke, Gospel of. From Acts i. 1, it is clear that the Gospel was written before the Acts. Perhaps it was written at Caesarea during St. Paul's imprisonment there, A. D. 58–60. The Evangelist professes to write that Theophilus "might know the certainty of those things wherein he had been instructed" (i. 4).

Lunatics, used twice in the N. T. (Matt. iv. 24, xvii. 15). The word refers to some disease, affecting body and mind, which might or might not be a sign of possession.

Luz. It seems impossible to discover whether Luz and Bethel represent the same town. The most probable conclusion is, that the two places were distinct, Luz the city and Bethel the pillar and altar of Jacob.

Lycao'nia, a district of Asia Minor. From Acts xiv. 11, it is evident that the inhabitants spoke something different from ordinary Greek. St. Paul traversed Lycaonia from west to east (ver. 21; see 2 Tim. iii. 11).

Lyc'ia is the name of that southwestern region of Asia Minor immediately opposite the island of Rhodes. It was combined with Pamphylia when St. Paul visited the Lycian towns of PATARA (Acts xxi. 1), and Myra (Acts xxvii. 5).

Lyd'da. It is 9 miles from Joppa. The watercourse outside the town is said still to bear the name of Abi-Butrus (Peter), in memory of the Apostle.

Lyd'ia, the first European convert of St. Paul, and his hostess during his first stay at Philippi (Acts xvi. 14, 15, also 40). She was a Jewish proselyte. Her native place was THYATIRA (ver. 14; Rev. ii. 18), famous for its dyeing-works; and Lydia was connected with this trade. We infer she was a person of considerable wealth.

Lysa'nias, mentioned by St. Luke (iii. 1) as tetrarch of ABILENE in the 13th year of Tiberius.

Lys'ias, Clau'dius, tribune of the Roman cohort, who rescued St. Paul from the mob at Jerusalem, and sent him to Felix (Acts xxi. 31).

Lysĭm'achŭs, a brother of the high-priest Menelaus, who was left as his deputy during his absence at the court of Antiochus. He fell a victim to the fury of the people (2 Macc. iv. 29–42).

Lystra. 1. The place where divine honors were offered to St. Paul, and where he was presently stoned (Acts xiv.). 2. The home of his chosen companion and fellow-missionary TIMOTHEUS (Acts xvi. 1). Lystra was in the eastern part of the great plain of Lycaonia.

M

Mā'acah. 1. Mother of Absalom, also called MAACHAH (2 Sam. iii. 3). 2. MAACAH, and (in Chr.) MAACHAH. A small kingdom close to Palestine.

Mā'achah. 1. Daughter of Nahor (Gen. xxii. 24). 2. Father of Achish king of Gath (1 K. ii. 39). 3. The daughter, or granddaughter, of Absalom, named after his mother; the third and favorite wife of Rehoboam, and mother of Abijah (1 K. xv. 2; 2 Chr. xi. 20–22).

VALLEY OF KIDRON.

Maăch'athi, and Maăch'athites, The. The inhabitants of the small kingdom of MAACHAH (Deut. iii. 14; Josh. xii. 5, xiii. 11, 13).

Maccabees, The. This title, the surname of Judas, of Mattathias, was afterwards extended to his heroic family. Maccabi was probably from Makkabah, "a hammer." Although the name Maccabees has gained the widest currency, that of Asmonaeans, or Hasmonaeans, is the proper name of the family.

MOUNTAINS ABOUT JERICHO.

Măccabees, Books of. Four books of "Maccabees" are in some MSS. of the LXX. Two were in the early Latin versions, and thence passed into the Vulgate. They were received by the council of Trent, and retained among the apocrypha by the reformed churches. The two other books have only a secondary connection with the Maccabaean history.

Manasseh's Idol.

Măcedō'nia, the first part of Europe which received the Gospel directly from St. Paul, and an important scene of his labors and those of his companions. It was bounded by the Haemus, the Pindus, the Cambunian hills, and Thrace. The Macedonian Christians are set before us in a very favorable light. The candor of the Bereans is commended (Acts xvii. 11); the Thessalonians were objects of affection (1 Thess. ii. 8, 17–20, iii. 10); and the Philippians are noted for liberality and self-denial (Phil. iv. 10, 14–19; see 2 Cor. ix. 2, xi. 9).

Măd'ai (Gen. x. 2), the progenitor of the Medes.

Ma'dian (Acts vii. 29). [MIDIAN].

Madness. In Scripture "madness" is recognized as a derangement, either from weakness or ungovernable violence of passion.

Mag'dala (Matt. xv. 39 only). The Magdala, which conferred her name on "Mary the Magdalene," was probably the place of that name mentioned in the Jerusalem Talmud as near Tiberias.

Māgī (A. V. "wise men"). The Magi are conspicuous as a Persian religious caste. They appear as interpreters of dreams. In St. Matthew (ii. 1–12) the Magi appear as "wise men"—properly MAGIANS—who were guided by a star from "the East" to Jerusalem, where they suddenly appeared, inquiring for the new-born king of the Jews, whom they had come to worship. They evidently came from the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates, where astronomy was early cultivated by the Chaldaeans.

GLASS BLOWERS.

Măgic, Magī'cians. The magical arts spoken of in the Bible are those practiced by the Egyptians, the Canaanites, and their neighbors, the Hebrews, the Chaldaeans, and probably the Greeks. The Hebrews had no magic of their own. It was strictly forbidden by the Law, and could have no existence save in times of heresy or apostasy.

Ma'gog. In Gen. x. 2 Magog appears as the second son of Japheth. It also appears as a country or people of which Gog was the prince. The notices of Magog would lead us to fix a northern locality; it is stated by Ezekiel that he was to come up from "the sides of the north" (xxxix. 2). From the data we conclude that Magog represents the important race of the Scythians.

Ma'halath, one of the wives of Rehoboam, apparently his first (2 Chr. xi. 18 only). She was the daughter of king David's son Jerimoth.

Ma'halath, the title of Ps. liii., and Ma'halath-lean'noth, the title of Ps. lxxxviii. The conjecture is, that Mahalath is a guitar, and that Leannoth has reference to the character of the Psalm.

MANASSEH'S IDOLS.

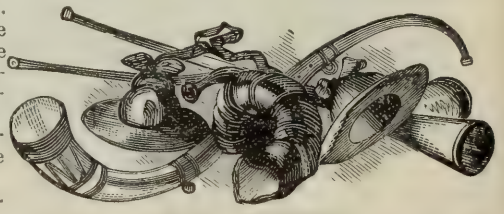
Mahana'im, a town on the east of the Jordan, signifying two hosts or two camps, a name given to it by Jacob, because he there met "the angels of God" (Gen. xxxii. 1, 2). It was on the south side of the torrent Jabbok.

Mal'achi (that is, the angel or messenger of Jehovah), the last, and "the seal" of the prophets. His prophecies constitute the closing book of the canon. Of his personal history nothing is known. He probably delivered his prophecies after the second return of Nehemiah from Persia (Neh. xiii. 6), and subsequently to the 32d year of Artaxerxes Longimanus (B. C. 420). The whole prophecy divides itself into three sections: in the first Jehovah is represented as the loving father (i. 2–ii. 9); in the second, as the supreme God (ii. 10–16); and in the third, as final Judge (ii. 17–end).

Mal'chus, the servant of the high-priest whose right ear Peter cut off (Matt. xxvi. 51; Mark xiv. 47; Luke xxii. 49–51; John xviii. 10). Luke only mentions the act of healing.

Mam'mon (Matt. vi. 24; Luke xvi. 9), a word which signifies "riches."

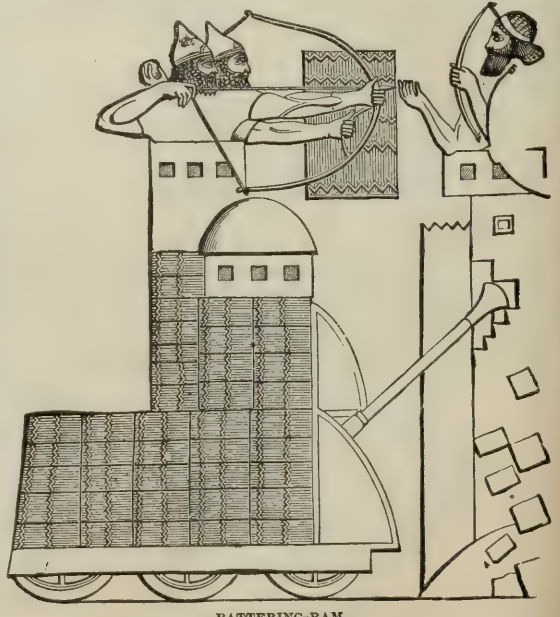
Mam're, an ancient Amorite, who, with his brothers, was in alliance with Abram (Gen. xiv. 13, 24, xiii. 18, xviii. 1). In the subsequent chapters Mamre is a mere local appellation (xxiii. 17, 19, xxv. 9, xlix. 30, l. 13).



MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Man'aen (Acts xiii. 1), one of the teachers and prophets in the church at Antioch at the appointment of Saul and Barnabas as missionaries. He is said to have been brought up with Herod Antipas.

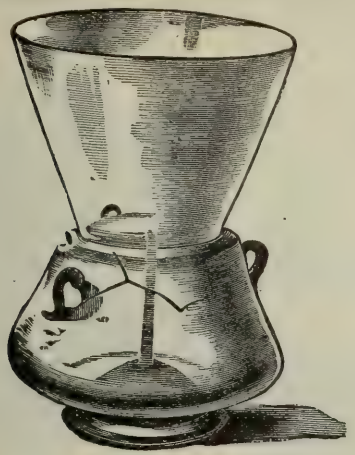
Manas'seh (forgetting), eldest son of Joseph, by his wife Asenath (Gen. xli. 51, xlvi. 20). Both he and Ephraim were born before the famine. In the division of the Promised Land half of the tribe of Manasseh settled east of the Jordan. The other half tribe settled to the west of the Jordan, north of Ephraim (Josh. xvii.). For further particulars see EPHRAIM.



Manas'seh, the thirteenth king of Judah, son of Hezekiah and Hephzibah (2 K. xxi. 1), ascended the throne at the age of 12. Idolatry was again established, and he consecrated idolatrous altars in the Sanctuary itself (2 Chr. xxxiii. 4). Every faith was tolerated but the old faith of Israel. The aged Isaiah, according to Jewish tradition, was put to death. Retribution came soon. Judaea was again overrun by the Assyrian armies. The king was made prisoner and carried off to Babylon in the 22d year of his reign. There his eyes were opened, and he repented, and the Lord delivered him (2 Chr. xxiii. 12, 13).

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Manasses, The Prayer of. "The Prayer of Manasseh," found in some MSS. of the LXX., is the work of one who has endeavored to express, not without true feeling, the thoughts of the repentant king.



Mandrakes (Gen. xxx. 14, 15, 16; Cant vii. 13), found in the fields of Mesopotamia, where the fruit was gathered "in the days of wheat-harvest," i. e. in May. The plant was strong-scented, and grew in Palestine. The translation in the A. V. is probably correct.

BATTERING-RAM.

Manger (Luke ii. 7, 12, 16). The Greek undoubtedly means a manger, crib, or feeding trough.

Manna. The manna came every morning except the Sabbath, in the form of a small round seed resembling the hoar frost; it had to be gathered early; it had to be gathered every day except the Sabbath; it was prepared for food by grinding and baking; its taste was like fresh oil, and like wafers made with honey, equally agreeable to all palates; the whole nation subsisted upon it for forty years, and it suddenly ceased when they first got the new corn of Canaan. It was always regarded as a miraculous gift directly from God, and not as a product of nature.

Mano'ah, the father of Samson; a Danite, native of the town of Zorah (Judg. xiii. 2).

Ma'rah, bitterness, a place three days distant (Ex. xv. 23, 24; Num. xxxiii. 8) from where the Israelites crossed the Red Sea, and where was a spring of bitter water, sweetened subsequently by the casting in of a tree which "the Lord showed" to Moses.

Märanath'a, used by St. Paul at the conclusion of his First Epistle to the Corinthians (xvi. 22). It is a Grecised form of the Aramaic maran atha, "our Lord cometh."

ORIENTAL ENGRAVING.

Mar'cus, the Evangelist Mark (Col. iv. 10; Philem. 24; 1 Pet. v. 13).

Mark. The Evangelist is probably the same as "John whose surname was Mark" (Acts xii. 12, 25). John Mark was the son of a certain Mary, who dwelt at Jerusalem (Acts xii. 12). He was the cousin of Barnabas (Col. iv. 10). The theory that he was one of the seventy is without warrant. Ancient writers with one consent make the Evangelist the Interpreter of the Apostle Peter.

Mark, Gospel of. There are peculiarities in the Gospel best explained by the supposition that Peter in some way superintended its composition. There is little doubt but that it was meant for use in the first instance amongst Gentiles. Probably it was written between A. D. 63 and 70.

Marriage. The institution of marriage dates from man's original creation. From the words in Ch. ii. 24, coupled with the circumstances attendant on the formation of the first woman, we deduce the following: (1) The unity of man and wife as "one flesh"; (2) the indissolubleness of the marriage bond, except on the strongest grounds (comp. Matt. xix. 9); (3) monogamy, as the original law; (4) the social equality of man and wife; (5) the subordination of the wife to the husband (1 Cor. xi. 8, 9; 1 Tim. ii. 13); and (6) the respective duties of man and wife.

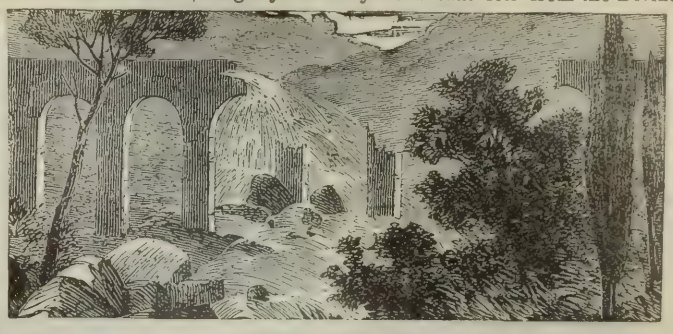
Mars' Hill, known by the name of Areopagus. The Areopagus was a rocky height in Athens, opposite the western end of the Acropolis. The spot existed as a criminal tribunal before the time of Solon. The Areopagus possesses peculiar interest to the Christian, as the spot from which St. Paul delivered his memorable address to the men of Athens (Acts xvii. 22–31).



Mar'tha, the sister of Lazarus and Mary. The facts recorded in Luke x. and John xi. indicate a devout character. She, too, no less than Lazarus and Mary, has the distinction of being one whom Jesus loved (John xi. 3). Her position is that of elder sister, the head and manager of the household.

Märy of Cléophäs, accurately "of Clopas." Probably the elder sister of the Lord's mother. She had married Clopas or Alphaeus. The names of her sons are James, Joses, Jude, Simon, two of whom became enrolled among the Twelve Apostles. Mary is brought before us at the Crucifixion and in Matt. xxvii. 61; Mark xv. 47; Matt. xxviii. 1; Mark xvi. 1; Luke xxiii. 56).

Märy Magdale'ne, of the town of Magdala. She appears for the first time in Luke viii. 2. There is not the slightest trace of the life of Mary having been one of flagrant impurity.

Märy, Mother of Mark, among the earliest disciples. We learn from Col. iv. 10 that she was sister to Barnabas.

Märy, Sister of Lazarus. She and her sister Martha appear in Luke x. 40. Mary sat listening eagerly for every word that fell from the Divine Teacher.

Märy the Virgin, the mother of our Lord. She was like Joseph, of the tribe of Judah, and of the lineage of David (Ps. cxxxii. 11; Luke i. 32; Rom. i. 3). She had a sister Mary (John xix. 25), and was connected by marriage (Luke i. 36) with Elizabeth, of the tribe of Levi and of the lineage of Aaron. This is all that we know of her antecedents.

Märy, a Roman Christian who is greeted by St. Paul in Rom. xvi. 6 as having toiled hard for him.

Mat'tan, the priest of Baal slain before his altars (2 K. xi. 18; 2 Chr. xxiii. 17).

Mattani'ah, the original name of Zedekiah king of Judah, changed when Nebuchadnezzar placed him on the throne (2 K. xxiv. 17).

Mättathi'as. 1. The father of the Maccabees. 2. The son of Simon Maccabaeus, treacherously murdered in the fortress of Docus (1 Macc. xvi. 14).

Mät'thew. Matthew the Apostle and Evangelist is the same as Levi (Luke v. 27–29) the son of a certain Alphaeus (Mark ii. 14). His call is related by all three Evangelists. The publicans were persons who farmed the Roman taxes. They employed inferior officers, natives of the province, called portitores, to which class Matthew no doubt belonged. Of the later life of St. Matthew nothing is really known.

Matthew, Gospel of. The most probable supposition is that it was written between 50 and 60, and in Palestine. The Gospel itself tells us by plain internal evidence that it was written for Jewish converts.

Matthi'as, the Apostle elected to fill the place of the traitor Judas (Acts i. 26). It is said he preached the Gospel and suffered martyrdom in Ethiopia.

Mattock (Is. vii. 25). The tool used in Arabia for loosening the ground answers our mattock or grubbing-axe.

Meals. The terms rendered "dine" and "dinner" in Gen. xliii. 16, and Prov. xv. 17), might more correctly be rendered "eat" and "portion of food." In the N. T. we have "dinner" and "supper (Luke xiv. 12; John xxi. 12), but which are more properly "breakfast" and "dinner." The Egyptians took their principal meal at noon (Gen. xliii. 16); the Jews made their principal meal after sunset, and a lighter meal at about 9 or 10 A. M. The posture at meals varied: the old Hebrews were in the habit of sitting (Gen. xxvii. 19; Judg. xix. 6; 1 Sam. xx. 5, 24; 1 K. xiii. 20); in the time of our Saviour, reclining was the universal custom.

JOSEPH INTERPRETING THE DREAMS.

Measures. [Weights and Measures.]

Meat. It does not appear that the word "meat" is used in the sense of animal food. The latter is denoted uniformly by "flesh."

PLAN OF LACHISH.

Meat-offering. The law or ceremonial described in Lev. ii. and vi. 14–23. It was composed of fine flour, seasoned with salt, and mixed with oil and frankincense, but without leaven.

Medes, Me'dia. Media lay northwest of Persia proper. The customs of the Medes nearly resembled those of the Armenians and the Persians. They were brave and warlike. We first hear of certain "cities of the Medes," in 2 K. xvii. 6, xviii. 11). Isaiah prophesies in regard to them in Is. xiii. 17, xxi. 2). Daniel gives an account of the reign of Darius the Mede. In Ezra we have a mention of Achmetha (Ecbatana), where the decree of Cyrus was found (vi. 2–5).

Me'dian. Darius, son of Ahasuerus (Dan ix. 1), or "the Mede" (xi. 1), is thus described in Dan. v. 31.

Medicine. The Egyptians claimed the invention of the healing art (xxvi. 1). Their "many medicines" are mentioned (Jer. xlvi. 11). Among the Jews there was no Scriptural bar to the practice of medicine by resident aliens. We read of "physicians," "healing," etc., in Ex. xxi. 19; 2 K. viii. 29; 2 Chr. xvi. 12; Jerem. viii. 22.

Megid'do, on the southern rim of the plain of Esdraelon. In Josh. xii. 21, Megiddo appears as the city of one of the kings whom Joshua defeated. It was also the scene of the great conflict between Sisera and Barak (Judg. iv. 13). The chief historical interest of Megiddo is concentrated in Josiah's death (2 K. xxiii. 29; 2 Chr. xxxv. 22–24).

Mehū'nims, The, a people against whom king Uzziah waged a successful war (2 Chr. xxvi. 7).

Melchiz'edĕk, king of Salem and priest of the Most High God, who met Abram in the valley of Shaveh, brought out bread and wine, blessed Abram, and received tithes (Gen. xiv. 18–20). Melchizedek is mentioned in Ps. cx. 4, and Heb. v., vi., vii.

Mĕl'ita, the modern Malta. The scene of that shipwreck of St. Paul which is described in such minute detail in the Acts of the Apostles (Acts xxvii.). The wreck probably happened at St. Paul's Bay.

Melons, mentioned only in Num. xi. 5. By the Hebrew word we are probably to understand both the Melon (Cucumis melo) and the water Melon (Cucurbita citrullus).

Mem'phis, a city of ancient Egypt, on the western bank of the Nile, mentioned under the name of Noph, and Moph. Herodotus dates its foundation from Menes, the first king of Egypt. Recent explorations have brought to light many of its antiquities.

Mĕn'ahĕm, son of Gadi, who slew Shallum, and seized the throne of Israel, B. C. 772. His reign lasted ten years (2 K. xv. 14–22).

Mĕ'ne (lit. "numbered"). The first word of the mysterious inscription written upon the wall of Belshazzar's palace (Dan. v. 25, 26).

Mĕnelā'us, a usurping high-priest who obtained the office from Antiochus Epiphanes, about B. C. 172 (2 Macc. iv. 23–25), and drove out Jason. He met with a violent death.

Mephĭb'oshĕth. 1. Saul's son by Rizpah his concubine (2 Sam. xxi. 8). He and his brother Armoni were surrendered by David to the Gibeonites. 2. The son of Jonathan, grandson of Saul, and nephew of the preceding.

JOB, THE PATRIARCH.

Mē'răb, the eldest daughter of king Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49). Saul betrothed Merab to David (xviii. 17). Before the marriage Merab's younger sister Michal had displayed her attachment for David, and Merab was then married to Adriel, to whom she bore five sons (2 Sam. xxi. 8).

Mĕr'arĭ, third son of Levi. He was born before the descent of Jacob into Egypt (Gen. xlvi. 8, 11).

Mercū'riŭs, properly Hermes, the Greek deity the Romans identified with their Mercury.

Mercy-seat (Ex. xxv. 17, xxxvii. 6; Heb. ix. 5), the lid of the Ark of the Covenant. It was that whereon the blood of the yearly atonement was sprinkled.

Mĕr'ibah (Ex. xvii. 7), the place where the people murmured, and the rock was smitten. [Rephidim.]

Merō'dach (Jer. i. 2), identical with the famous Babylonian Bel or Belus.

Merō'dach-băl'adăn, king of Babylon in the days of Hezekiah (2 Kings xx. 12; Isaiah xxxix. 1).

Mē'rom, The Waters of. Here a confederacy of the northern chiefs assembled under Jabin, king of Hazor (Josh. xi. 5), and were encountered by Joshua and routed (ver. 7).

Mē'rŏz (Judg. v. 23), denounced because its inhabitants refused to take part in the struggle with Sisera.

Mē'sha, king of Moab in the reigns of Ahab and his sons Ahaziah and Jehoram, kings of Israel (2 K. iii. 4).

EGYPTIANS HUNTING AND FISHING.

Mē'shach. The name given to Mishael, one of the companions of Daniel. His miraculous preservation from the fiery furnace is in the 3d chapter of Daniel.

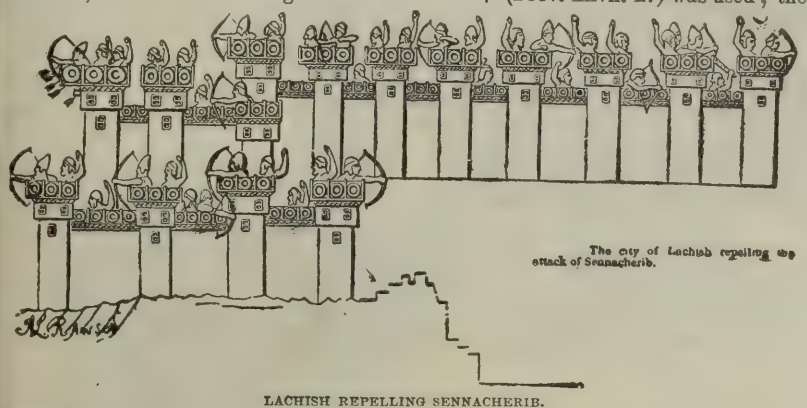
Mĕs'opotā'mia, the country between the great bend of the Euphrates and the upper Tigris. Here lived Bethuel and Laban, and hither Abraham sent to fetch Isaac a wife. Hither came Jacob on the same errand. The conquests of Cyrus brought it under the Persian yoke; and thus it continued to the time of Alexander.



METAL LAMP.

Messi'ah. This word, which answers to Christ in the N. T., means anointed. The kings of Israel were called anointed, from their consecration (1 Sam. ii. 10, 35, xii. 3, 5, &c.). It is twice used in the N. T. of Jesus (John i. 41, iv. 25, A. V. "Messias"); but the Greek equivalent, the Christ, is constantly applied, at first with the article the Anointed One, but later without the article Jesus Christ.

Metals. The first artist in metals was Tubal Cain, son of Lamech, the forger or sharpener of every instrument of copper (A. V. "brass") and iron (Gen. iv. 22). "Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold" (Gen. xiii. 2). Tin is first mentioned in Num. xxxi. 22, and lead is referred to in Ex. xv. 10. Iron, like copper, was found in the hills of Palestine.

Methū'selah, the son of Enoch, sixth in descent from Seth, and father of Lamech (Gen. v. 25-27).

Mi'cah, the sixth in order of the minor prophets. Micah exercised the prophetical office during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, 59 years (B. C. 756–697). The style of the Book of Micah has been compared with that of Hosea and Isaiah. His diction is vigorous and forcible, varied and rich in figures.

The city of Lachish repelling the attack of Sennacherib.

LACHISH REPELLING SENNACHERIB.

Micā'iah, the same name as Micah, both meaning the same thing.

Mi'chael, one of the archangels (Dan. x. 13; comp. Jude 9). In the N. T. (see Rev. xii. 7) he fights in heaven against the dragon.

Mi'chal, the younger of Saul's two daughters (1 Sam. xiv. 49). The king proposed to bestow on David his eldest, but before the marriage Michal fell violently in love with the young hero. Saul eagerly caught at the opportunity of exposing his rival to death. The price fixed on Michal's hand was the slaughter of a hundred Philistines. David doubled the tale of victims, and Michal became his wife. Shortly afterwards she saved David (1 Sam. xix. 11–17). When the rupture between Saul and David had become incurable, she was married to Phalti or Phaltiel (1 Sam. xxv. 44). After the death of her father, David compelled her new husband to surrender Michal to him (2 Sam. iii. 13-16).

Mĭch'mash, a town known by its connection with the Philistine war of Saul and Jonathan (1 Sam. xiii., xiv.), about 7 miles north of Jerusalem.

Mĭd'ian, a son of Abraham and Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2; 1 Chr. i. 32); progenitor of the Midianites, or Arabians dwelling principally in the desert north of the peninsula of Arabia.

Mĭg'dol, the name of one or two places on the eastern frontier of Egypt, cognate to Migdal, which appears to signify a military watch-tower, or a shepherd's lookout.

Mĭl'cah, Daughter of Haran and wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, to whom she bore eight children (Gen. xi. 29, xxii. 20, 23, xxiv. 15, 24, 47).

MT. EPHRAIM, JOSHUA'S BURIAL PLACE.

Mile, a Roman measure of length, equal to 1618 English yards. It is only once noticed in the Bible (Matt. v. 41), the usual method of reckoning in the N. T. being by the stadium.

Mīle'tus (Acts xx. 15, 17, less correctly MILETUM in 2 Tim. iv. 20). It was far more famous five hundred years before St. Paul's day than afterwards. In early times it was the most flourishing city of the Ionian Greeks.

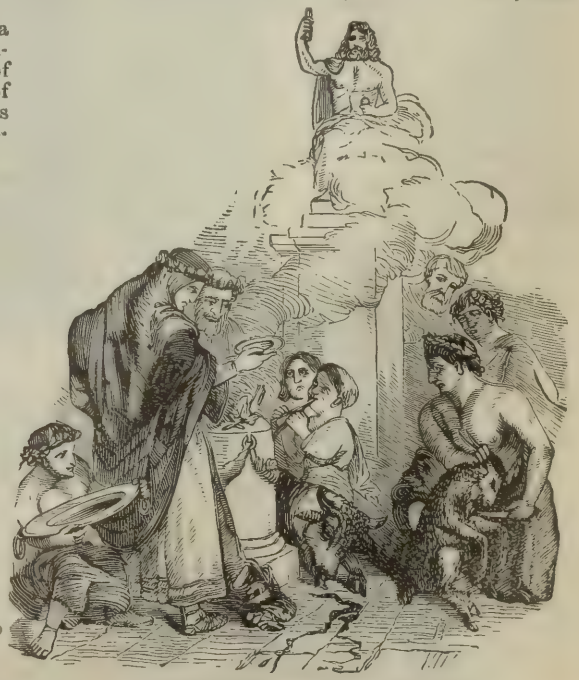
Milk. As an article of diet, milk holds a more important position in Eastern countries than with us. Not only the milk of cows, but of sheep (Deut. xxxii. 14), of camels (Gen. xxxii. 15), and of goats (Prov. xxvii. 27) was used; the latter appears to have been most highly prized. Milk was used sometimes in a sour, coagulated state, called chema, and later leben. The refreshing draught Jael offered to Sisera (Judg. v. 25) was leben.

Mill. The mills of the ancient Hebrews consisted of two circular stones, about 18 inches or two feet in diameter, the lower of which is fixed; the upper has a hole in it, through which the grain passes. It is worked by women (Is. xlvii. 1, 2), who have hold of the handle by which the upper is turned round on the "nether" millstone.

Millet (Ez. iv. 9). Dr. Royle maintains that the true plant is the Panicum miliaceum, which is universally cultivated in the East.

Mil'lo, The House of. 1. A family or clan. 2 The spot at which king Joash was murdered (2 K. xii. 20).

PRIEST'S LAVER.



Mines, Mining. Ancient furnaces are still to be seen. The gold-mines of Egypt in the Bisharee desert have been discovered within the last few years. The mines were worked by gangs of convicts and captives in fetters. The harder rock was split by the application of fire, but the softer was broken up with picks and chisels. The hills of Palestine are rich in iron, and the mines are still worked there, though in a very simple, rude manner.

Minstrel, in 2 K. iii. 15, properly signifies a player upon a stringed instrument like the harp or kinnor. The "minstrels" in Matt. ix. 23, were flute-players employed as professional mourners.

Mint (Matt. xxiii. 23; Luke xi. 42), one of those herbs, the tithe of which the Jews were most exact in paying.

Miracles. A miracle is a plain and manifest exercise by a man, or by God at the call of a man, of those powers which belong only to the Creator and Lord of nature.

Mĭr'iam, sister of Moses; the eldest of that sacred family. She first appears in Ex. ii. 4–7. In Mic. vi. 4, she is amongst the Three Deliverers. "Miriam the prophetess" is her title (Ex. xv. 20). She took the lead, with Aaron, in the complaint against Moses (Num. xii. 1, 2). A stern rebuke was administered. The hateful Egyptian leprosy broke out over the whole person of the proud prophetess. This stroke, and its removal, form the last public event of Miriam's life. She died at Kadesh, and was buried there (Num. xx. 1). According to Josephus, she was married to the famous HUR, and was grandmother of the architect BEZALEEL.

WORSHIP OF JUPITER OLYMPUS.

Mirror. The Hebrew women coming out of Egypt probably brought with them mirrors like those of the Egyptians, made of a mixed metal, chiefly copper, susceptible of a bright lustre.

Mish'ael, one of the sons of Uzziel, uncle of Aaron and Moses (Ex. vi. 22). When Nadab and Abihu were struck dead, Mishael and his brother removed their bodies and buried them (Lev. x. 4, 5).

Mite, a coin current in Palestine in the time of our Lord (Mark xii. 41–44; Luke xxi. 1–4). It seems in Palestine to have been the smallest piece of money, being the half of the farthing.

THE LEPTON, OR MITE,
Found near the Temple. On exhibition at the Philadelphia Mint.

Mĭt'ylē'ne, chief town of Lesbos, where St. Paul stopped for the night between Assos and Chios (Acts xx. 14, 15).

Mĭz'pah, and Mĭz'peh, "a watch-tower." From Mizpah the City or the Temple was visible.

Mĭz'raĭm, the usual name of Egypt in the O. T.

Mnā'son is honorably mentioned as one of the hosts of the Apostle Paul (Acts xxi. 16). He was a Cyprian by birth.

Mō'ab, Mō'abītes. Moab was the son of Lot's eldest daughter, the progenitor of the Moabites. The Moabites first inhabited the rich highlands on the eastern side of the chasm of the Dead Sea, as far north as Gilead, from which they expelled the Emims (Deut. ii. 11). After the conquest of Canaan the relations of Moab with Israel were of a mixed character. Isaiah (xv., xvi., xxv. 10–12) predicts the utter annihilation of Moab.

Mō'din the native city of the Maccabaean family (1 Macc. xiii. 25), and contained their ancestral sepulchre (ii. 70, ix. 19, xiii. 25–30).

Mole (Lev. xi. 30). It is probable that the animals denote different kinds of lizards; perhaps the chameleon.

Mō'lech. The fire-god Molech was the tutelary deity of the children of Ammon, and essentially identical with the Moabitish Chemosh. Fire-gods were common to all the Canaanite, Syrian, and Arab tribes, who worshipped the destructive element under an outward symbol, with the most inhuman rites.

Mō'lŏch, the same as Molech.

Money. We have no evidence of the use of coined money before the return from the Babylonian captivity; but silver was used for money, in quantities determined by weight, at least as early as the time of Abraham (Gen. xvii. 13). The 1000 pieces of silver paid by Abimelech to Abraham (Gen. xx. 16), and the 20 pieces of silver for which Joseph was sold to the Ishmaelites (Gen. xxxvii. 28) were probably rings. The shekel weight of silver was the unit of value down to the Babylonian captivity. After the Captivity we have the earliest mention of coined money, in allusion to the Persian coinage, the gold Daric (A. V. dram: Ezra ii. 69, viii. 27; Neh. vii. 70). In the money of the New Testament we see the native copper coinage side by side with the Graeco-Roman copper, silver, and gold. The silver coins mentioned by the Evangelists are: The stater, which was a tetradrachm; the didrachm, the equivalent of the Hebrew shekel; the denarius, or Roman penny, as well as the Greek drachm, then of about the same weight. Of copper coins the farthing and its half, the mite, are spoken of.

Money-changers (Matt. xii. 12; Mark xi. 15; John ii. 15). The money-changers Christ expelled were dealers in half-shekels, at such premium as they might be able to exact from Jews, who assembled at Jerusalem during the great festivals, and were required to pay tribute in the Hebrew coin.

MOSES.

ANCIENT LAMP-STAND.

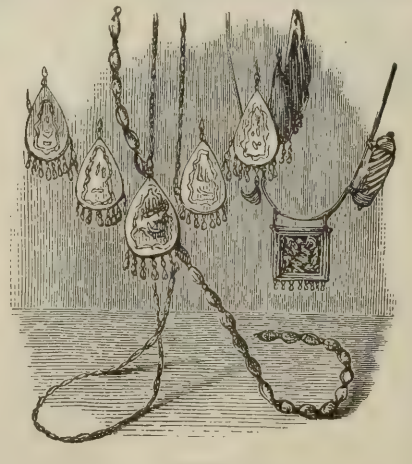
Month. The terms for "month" and "moon" have the same close connection in the Hebrew language as our own. The identification of the Jewish months with our own cannot be effected with precision on account of the variations that must inevitably exist between the lunar and the solar month. Nisan, or Abib, answers to April; Zif or Iyar to May; Sivan to June; Tammuz to July; Ab to August; Elul to September; Ethanim or Tisri to October; Bul or Marcheshvan to November; Chisleu to December; Tebeth to January; Sebat to February; and Adar to March.

Mŏr'decāi, the deliverer, under Divine Providence, of the Jews from the destruction plotted against them by Haman the chief minister of Xerxes. Mordecai lived in Shushan. He was the son of Jair, son of Shimei, son of Kish the Benjamite who was taken captive with Jehoiachin, and he brought up Esther. He occupied a seat in the king's gate.

READERS OF THE JEWISH LAW.

Mō'reh. The Oak of Moreh was the first halting-place of Abram after his entrance into Canaan (Gen. xii. 6). It was at the "place of Shechem" (xii. 6), close to the mountains Ebal and Gerizim (Deut. xi. 30).

Morī'ah. 1. The Land of Moriah. On "one of the mountains" in this district took place the sacrifice of Isaac (Gen. xxii. 2). 2. Mount Moriah. The name ascribed in 2 Chr. iii. 1 to the eminence on which Solomon built the Temple.



Mortar. The simplest method of preparing corn for food was by pounding it between two stones. When the manna fell the Israelites gathered it, and either ground it in the mill or pounded it in the mortar (Num. xi. 8).

Mō'ses (drawn), the legislator of the Jewish people. The story of his birth is thoroughly Egyptian in its scene. His concealment, his discovery by the banks of one of the canals of the Nile by the Egyptian princess, his adoption and education, his killing of the Egyptian, his flight into Midian, his marriage, and his subsequent wonderful career, are all lengthily given in the Pentateuch, and to it we are compelled to refer the reader.

Moth. By the Hebrew we are to understand some species of clothes-moth (Job iv. 19, xiii. 28; Ps. xxxix. 11, &c.).

Mourning. The Jewish customs consisted chiefly in (1) beating the breast, (2) weeping and screaming, (3) wearing sad-colored garments, (4) songs of lamentation, (5) funeral feasts, (6) employment of persons, especially women, to lament.

Mouse. The original word may comprehend any destructive rodent. It is probable that 1 Sam. vi. 5 may refer to the short-tailed field mice, which cause great destruction to the corn-lands of Syria.

JEWELS.

Mulberry-trees (Heb. becaim), 2 Sam. v. 23, 24, and 1 Chr. xiv. 14. As to the claim of the mulberry tree to represent the becaim of Scripture, it is difficult to see any foundation for such interpretation.

Mule. We do not read of mules till the time of David, just when the Israelites were becoming acquainted with horses. After this horses and mules are often mentioned together.

Murder. The Law of Moses, while it protected the accidental homicide, defined with strictness the crime of murder. It prohibited compensation or reprieve, or protection in the refuge city, or even at the altar (Ex. xxi. 12, 14; Lev. xxiv. 17, 21; 1 K. ii. 5, 6, 31). It was lawful to kill a burglar taken at night in the act, but unlawful to do so after sunrise (Ex. xxii. 2, 3).

Music. We learn from Gen. iv. that Jubal the son of Lamech was "the father of all such as handle the harp and organ." The first mention of music after the Deluge is in Gen. xxxi. 27. Two instruments employed to accompany song are alluded to in Job. xxi. 12. On the banks of the Red Sea Moses and Israel sang their song of deliverance. The silver trumpets were to direct the movements of the camp (Num. x. 1-10.). David gathered round him "singing men and singing women" (2 Sam. xix. 35). Solomon did the same (Eccl. ii. 8), and the Temple was a great school of music. The land of the Hebrews during their national prosperity was a land of music and melody. The instruments of music represented in our version are treated under their respective titles.

Mustard (Matt. xiii. 31, xvii. 20; Mark iv. 31; Luke xiii. 19, xvii. 6). The mustard-tree of Scripture is maintained to be the Salvadora persica. The Lord in his popular teaching adhered to the popular language; and the mustard-seed was used proverbially to denote anything very minute.

My'ra, an important town in LYCIA, the place where St. Paul, on his voyage to Rome (Acts xxvii. 5) entered the Alexandrian ship in which he was wrecked.

Myrrh (Ex. xxx. 23), one of the ingredients of the "oil of holy ointment" (Esth. ii. 12); one of the substances used in the purification of women (Ps. xlv. 8; Prov. vii. 17); and (in Cantiles) a perfume. The myrrh of commerce has a wood and bark which emit a strong odor; the gum is at first oily, but becomes hard by exposure. It belongs to the natural order Terebinthaceae.

Myrtle (Neh. viii. 15; Is. xli. 19, lv. 13; Zech. i. 8, 10, 11). The modern Jews still adorn with myrtle the booths and sheds at the Feast of Tabernacles. Formerly, myrtles grew about Jerusalem. The Myrtus communis is the kind denoted by the Hebrew.

My'sia (Acts xvi. 7, 8) was the region about the frontier of the provinces of Asia and Bithynia. The term is evidently used in an ethnological sense.

MOSES BEFORE PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER.

N

Na'amah (loveliness). 1. One of the four women in the records of the world before the Flood. She was daughter of Lamech by his wife Zillah, and sister of Tubal-cain (Gen. iv. 22 only). 2. Mother of king Rehoboam (1 K. xiv. 21, 31; 2 Chr. xii. 13). One of the foreign women Solomon took into his establishment (1 K. xi. 1).

Na'aman (pleasantness). "Naaman the Syrian" (Luke iv. 27). A Jewish tradition identifies him with the archer whose arrow struck Ahab with his mortal wound, and thus "gave deliverance to Syria." He was commander-in-chief of the army, and was nearest the king. He was afflicted with a leprosy (ver. 27), which had hitherto defied cure. The circumstances of his visit to Elisha are related in 2 Kings.

Naas'son. The Greek form of the name NAHSHON (Matt. i. 4; Luke iii. 32).

Na'bal (fool), a sheepmaster on the confines of Judaea and the desert His residence was on the southern Carmel, in the pasture lands of Maon. His wealth consisted chiefly of sheep and goats. Once a year there was a grand banquet, on Carmel (1 Sam. xxv. 2, 4, 36). It was on one of these occasions that Nabal broke out into fury against David's messengers. David made the fatal vow of extermination (xxv. 22). At this moment Abigail appeared. She returns with the news of David's recantation. Nabal's heart died within him. Ten days he lingered, "and the Lord smote Nabal, and he died" (xxv. 37, 38).

Na'both, victim of Ahab and Jezebel, the owner of a small vineyard at Jezreel, close to the palace of Ahab (1 K. xxi. 1, 2). It thus became an object of desire to the king, who offered an equivalent for it. Naboth refused. The proud spirit of Jezebel was roused. A solemn fast was proclaimed. Naboth was "set on high:" two men of worthless character accused him of having "cursed God and the king." He and his children (2 K. ix. 26) were dragged out and despatched. The place of execution was by the large tank which still remains on the slope of the hill of Samaria.

Na'chon's Threshing-floor, the place at which the ark arrived in its progress to Jerusalem, when Uzzah lost his life in his zeal for its safety (2 Sam. vi. 6).

Na'dab (liberal). Eldest son of Aaron and Elisheba (Ex. vi. 23; Num. iii. 2). He, his father and brother, and seventy old men of Israel were led out (Ex. xxiv. 1), and commanded to stay and worship God "afar off," below the summit of Sinai. Subsequently (Lev. x. 1) Nadab and his brother were struck dead by fire from the Lord. Their offence was, kindling the incense in their censers with "strange" fire. 2. King Jeroboam's son, who succeeded to the throne of Israel B. C. 954, and reigned two year (1 K. xv. 25-31).

Nag'ge, one of the ancestors of Christ (Luke iii. 25). It represents the Heb. Nogah (1 Chr. iii. 7).

Na'hash (serpent). 1. King of the Ammonites, who dictated to the inhabitants of Jebesh-Gilead the alternative of the loss of their right eyes or slavery, which roused the swift wrath of Saul (1 Sam. xi. 1, 2-11). 2. A person mentioned (2 Sam. xvii. 25) in the parentage of Amasa, commander-in-chief of Absalom's army.

Na'hor, the name of two persons in the family of Abraham. 1. His grandfather, and father of Terah (Gen. xi. 22-25). 2. Grandson of the preceding, son of Terah and brother of Abraham and Haran (Gen. xi. 26, 27). Nahor was the father of twelve sons (Gen. xxii. 21-24).

Nah'shon, or Naash'on, prince of the children of Judah (1 Chr. ii. 10). His sister, Elisheba, was wife to Aaron, and his son, Salmon, husband to Rahab after the taking of Jericho. He died in the wilderness, according to Num. xxvi. 64, 65.

Na'hum (consolation). Nahum the seventh in order of the minor prophets. His personal history is quite unknown. It is probable that Nahum flourished in the latter half of the reign of Hezekiah, and wrote either in Jerusalem or neighborhood. As a poet, Nahum occupies a high place in the first rank of Hebrew literature. His style is clear and uninvolved, though pregnant and forcible; his diction sonorous and rhythmical.

Nail. A nail (Is. xli. 7), a stake (Is. xxxiii. 20), also a tent-peg. Tent-pegs are usually of wood and large size, but sometimes of metal (Ex. xxvii. 19, xxxviii. 20). David prepared iron for the nails to be used in the Temple.

Na'in, a village of Galilee, the gate of which is made illustrious by the raising of the widow's son (Luke vii. 12).

Na'ioth, or "Naioth in Ramah," a place in which Samuel and David took refuge together (1 Sam. xix. 18, 19, 22, 23, xx. 1). Probably the huts or dwellings of a school or college of prophets over which Samuel presided.

Na'omi, the wife of Elimelech, and mother-in-law of Ruth (Ruth i. 2, &c., ii. 1, &c., iii. 1, iv. 3, &c.) The name is derived from a root signifying sweetness or pleasantness.

Năph'tali (wrestling). Fifth son of Jacob; second born to him by Bilhah, Rachel's slave. His birth and the bestowal of his name are recorded in Gen. xxx. 8. At the migration to Egypt four sons are attributed to Naphtali (Gen. xlvi. 24; Ex. i. 4; 1 Chr. vii. 13). When the census was taken at Mount Sinai the tribe numbered 53,400 fighting men (Num. i. 43, ii. 30).

EASTERN LION.

Narcis'sus, a dweller at Rome (Rom. xvi. 11), members of whose household were known as Christians to St. Paul.

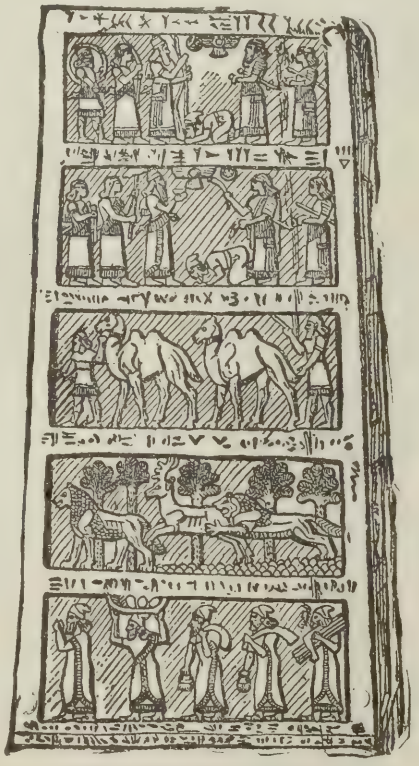
Na'than (a giver). 1 An eminent Hebrew prophet in the reigns of David and Solomon. He first appears in 2 Sam. vii. 2, 3, 17. He next reproves David for the sin with Bathsheba. In the last years of David, Nathan, by taking the side of Solomon, turned the scale in his favor. He assisted in the inauguration of Solomon (1 K. i. 8, 10, 11, 22, 23, 24, 32, 34, 38, 45). He left two works—a Life of David (1 Chr. xxix. 29), and a Life of Solomon (2 Chr. ix. 29). The last may have been incomplete. But the biography of David by Nathan is, of all losses, the most deplorable. His grave is shown at Halhul, near Hebron. 2. A son of David; one of the four born by Bathsheba (1 Chr. iii. 5; comp. xiv. 4, and 2 Sam. v. 14). He is interesting to us as one of the forefathers of Joseph in the genealogy of St. Luke (iii. 31).

Nathăn'ael, a disciple of Jesus Christ, concerning whom we learn little more than his birthplace, Cana of Galilee (John xxi. 2), and his simple truthful character (John i. 47). It is believed that Nathanael and Bartholomew are the same.



Nave. The Heb. conveys the notion of convexity. It is rendered boss of a shield, Job xv. 26; the eyebrow, Lev. xiv. 9; an eminent place, Ez. xvi. 31.

Năz'arēne. This appellative is applied to Jesus in many passages in the N. T. Once (Acts xxiv. 5) the term Nazarenes is applied to followers of Jesus by way of contempt.

Năz'arĕth, the ordinary residence of our Saviour, occurs first in Matt. ii. 23. The name of the present village is en-Nazirah, the same as of old. It is within the limits of the province of Galilee (Mark i. 9), near Cana. A precipice exists in the neighborhood (Luke iv. 29). The modern Nazareth has a population of 3000 or 4000. p.79

Năz'arite, more properly Naz'irite (one separated), one of either sex bound by a vow of a peculiar kind to be set apart from others for the service of God, either for life or for a defined time.

Neăp'olis is the place in northern Greece where Paul and his associates first landed in Europe (Acts xvi. 11).

NINEVAH COLUMN OF BLACK MARBLE.

Nebā'ioth, Nebā'joth, the "first-born of Ishmael" (Gen. xxv. 13; 1 Chr. i. 29), and father of a pastoral tribe named after him (xl. 7).

Nē'bo, Mount. 1. The mountain from which Moses took his first and last view of the Promised Land (Deut. xxxii. 49, xxxiv. 1). It is described as facing Jericho; the head or summit of a mountain called the Pisgah. 2. The name of a Chaldaean god, a well-known deity of the Babylonians and Assyrians. He presided over learning and letters.

Nĕb'uchadnĕz'zar, or Nebuchadrez'zār, the most powerful of the Babylonian kings. He was the son of Nabopolassar, the founder of the Babylonian Empire. In the lifetime of his father, Nebuchadnezzar, led an army against Pharaoh-Necho, king of Egypt, defeated him at Carchemish (B. C. 605) in a great battle (Jer. xlvi. 2-12), recovered Coele-syria, Phoenicia, and Palestine, and took Jerusalem (Dan. i. 1, 2). Nebuchadnezzar commenced the final siege of Jerusalem in the ninth year of Zedekiah,—his own seventeenth year (B. C. 588)—and took it two years later (B. C. 586). Zedekiah escaped the city, but was captured near Jericho (ib. xxxix. 5), and brought to Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, where his eyes were put out by the king's order, while his sons and chief nobles were slain. Nebuchadnezzar then returned to Babylon with MUSK-MELON.

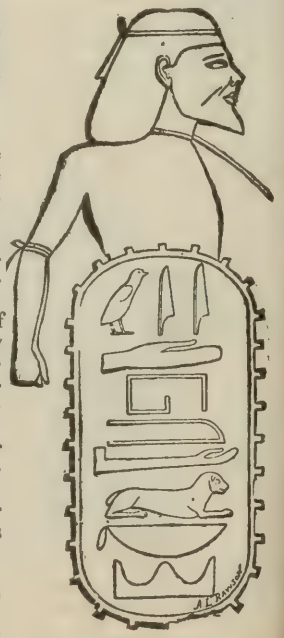
Zedekiah. The wealth, greatness, and general prosperity of Nebuchadnezzar are strikingly placed before us in the book of Daniel. Towards the close of his reign, as a punishment for his pride, madness was sent upon him which the Greeks called Lycanthropy (Dan. iv. 33). After an interval of four or seven years (Dan. iv. 16), Nebuchadnezzar's malady left him. He died in the year B. C. 561, at an advanced age (eighty-three or eighty-four), having reigned forty-three years. A son, EVIL-MERODACH, succeeded him.



ANCIENT LAMP.

Nĕbushăs'ban, one of the officers of Nebuchadnezzar. He was Rab-saris, i. e. chief of the eunuchs (Jer. xxxix. 13).

Neg'inath, properly Neginath, occurs in the title of Ps. lxi. The chief musician on Neginoth was the conductor of the Temple-choir who played upon the stringed instruments.

Nĕhemī'ah. Son of Hachaliah, and apparently of the tribe of Judah. All that we know of him is contained in the book which bears his name. We first find him at Shushan, the winter residence of the kings of Persia, as cupbearer of king Artaxerxes Longimanus. Having received appointment as governor of Judaea, he started upon his journey to Jerusalem. During his government Nehemiah rescued the poor Jews from spoliation and slavery. Beyond the 32d year of Artaxerxes, to which Nehemiah's own narrative leads us, we have no account of him whatever.

KING OF JUDAH.

Nehemī'ah, Book of, is clearly and certainly not all by the same hand. The principal portion is the work of Nehemiah; but other portions are either extracts or supplementary narratives.

Nē'hilŏth, the title of Ps. v. Most likely Nehiloth is the general term for perforated wind instruments.

Nehŭsh'ta, daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem, wife of Jehoiakim, and mother of Jehoiachin, kings of Judah (2 K. xxiv. 8).

Nehŭsh'tan, the name by which the brazen serpent, made by Moses in the wilderness (Num. xxi. 9), was worshipped in the time of Hezekiah (2 K. xviii. 4).

Ner, according to 1 Chr. viii. 33, father of Kish and Abner, and grandfather of king Saul. Abner was uncle to Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 50).

Nē'reŭs, a Christian at Rome, saluted by St. Paul

ORIENTAL MASTER AND SERVANT.

(Rom. xvi. 15). Tradition says he was beheaded.

Ner'gal, one of the chief Assyrian and Babylonian deities, seems to have corresponded closely to the classical Mars (2 K. xvii. 30).

Ner'gal-sharē'zer (Jer. xxxix. 3 and 13). Two of the name among the "princes of the king of Babylon" accompanied Nebuchadnezzar on his last expedition against Jerusalem. He was a personage of great importance, who not long afterwards mounted the Babylonian throne. His reign lasted from B. C. 559 to B. C. 556.

ORIENTAL MESSENGER.

Nĕth'inĭm. A distinct body of men connected with the services of the Temple.

Nettle. The Hebrew translated nettle in Is. xxxiv. 13; Hos. ix. 6; Prov. xxiv. 31, may be understood to denote some species of nettle (Urtica).

New Moon. The first day of the lunar month was observed as a holy day. As on the Sabbath, trade and handicraft work were stopped (Am. viii. 5), and the Temple was opened for public worship (Ez. xlvi. 3; Is. lxvi. 23). The trumpets were blown at the special sacrifices. The seventh new moon of the religious year, being that of Tisri, commenced the civil year, and was a day of holy convocation.

BLACK MUSTARD.

New Testament. The origin, history, and characteristics of the books of the N. T. are discussed in other articles.

New Year. [TRUMPETS, FEAST OF.]

Nĭb'hăz, a deity of the Avites, introduced into Samaria (2 K. xvii. 31.

Nĭcā'nor, one of the first seven deacons (Acts vi. 5).

Nĭcodē'mus, a Pharisee, a ruler of the Jews, and teacher of Israel (John iii. 1, 10), whose secret visit to our Lord was the occasion of the discourse recorded by St. John. After the resurrection he became a professed disciple of Christ, and received baptism at the hands of Peter and John.

Nicola'itans. Mingling themselves in the orgies of idolatrous feasts, they brought the impurities of those feasts into the meetings of the Christian Church.

Nic'olas (Acts vi. 5), a native of Antioch, and a proselyte to the Jewish faith.

Nicŏp'olĭs (Tit. iii. 12). We little doubt that the Pauline Nicopolis was the celebrated city of Epirus, on a peninsula to the west of the bay of Actium.

Ni'ger, the name given to the Simeon who was one of the teachers and prophets in the Church at Antioch (Acts xiii. 1).

Night. [DAY.]

Night-hawk. The Hebrew word so translated (Lev. xi. 16; Deut. xiv. 15) probably denotes some kind of owl.

WILDERNESS OF MOAB.

Nile, the great river of Egypt. It has been traced for about 2700 miles, and its extent is probably upwards of 1000 miles more, making it the longest of rivers. Into it the male children were cast; in it, or some canal, was the ark of Moses put. When the plagues were sent, its waters were turned into blood.

Nĭm'rim, The Waters of, a stream or brook within the country of Moab (Is. xv. 6; Jer. xlviii. 34).

Nĭm'rŏd, a son of Cush and grandson of Ham. The events of his life are recorded in Gen. x. 8, ff. He was a Cushite, established an empire in Shinar, and extended his empire northwards along the Tigris over Assyria, where he founded Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen.

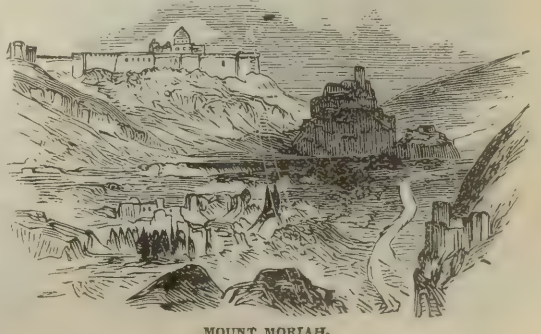
Nĭn'eveh, the capital of the ancient kingdom and empire of Assyria. It is first mentioned in the O. T. in connection with the primitive dispersement and migrations of the human race. The kingdom of Assyria is referred to as connected with the Jews in Num. xxiv. 22, 24, and Ps. lxxxiii. 8. The destruction of Nineveh occurred B. C. 606. It never rose again. This total disappearance of Nineveh is fully confirmed by the records of profane history. The political history of Nineveh is that of Assyria.

Ni'san. [MONTHS.]

Nĭs'rŏch, an idol of Nineveh, in whose temple Sennacherib was worshipping when assassinated by his sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer (2 K. xix.

SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

37; Is. xxxvii. 38). The word signifies "the great eagle."



Nitre (Prov. xxv. 20; Jer. ii. 22). The substance denoted is the nitrum of the Latins, and the natron or native carbonate of soda of modern chemistry.

Nō'ah, the tenth in descent from Adam, in the line of Seth, was the son of Lamech, and grandson of Methuselah. Of Noah himself we hear nothing till he is 500 years old, when it is said he begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japhet. In consequence of the hopeless wickedness of the world, God resolved to destroy it. Of Noah's life we are told but little. It is said he was a righteous man, and like Enoch walked with God. He built the Ark in accordance with Divine direction. He was 600 years old when the flood came (Gen. vi., vii.). Noah's first act after he left the Ark was to offer sacrifices. It is particularly noticed that he planted a vineyard. He drank of the juice of the grape till he became intoxicated and shamefully exposed himself in his own tent. One of his sons, Ham, mocked openly. The others, with reverence, endeavored to hide the disgrace. When he recovered, with the curse on his youngest son was joined a blessing on the other two.

MOLES.

Nō-ā'mon (Nah. iii. 8), No (Jer. xlvi. 25; Ez. xxx. 14, 15, 16), a city of Egypt, better known under the name of Thebes. No is a Shemitic name, and Amon is added in Nahum (l. c.) to distinguish Thebes from some other No, or on account of the connection of Amen with that city.

MOUNT MORIAH.

Nŏb (1 Sam. xxiii. 11; Neh. xi. 32), a sacerdotal city on some eminence near Jerusalem. It was one of the places where the ark of Jehovah was kept (2 Sam. vi. 1, &c.). Nob was most noted for a frightful massacre there in the reign of Saul (1 Sam. xxii. 17–19).

Nō'e, the patriarch Noah (Tob. iv. 12; Matt. xxiv. 37, 38; Luke iii. 36, xvii. 26, 27).

Noph. [MEMPHIS.]

Nose-jewel (Gen. xxiv. 22; Ex. xxxv. 22, "earring;" Is. iii. 21; Ez. xvi. 12, "jewel on the forehead"), a ring, sometimes of gold or silver, passed through the nostril, and worn as an ornament.

MOLOCH.

Number. It is probable the Hebrews in their written calculations made use of the letters of the alphabet. That they did so in post-Babylonian times we have conclusive evidence.

Numbers. The Fourth Book of the Law or Pentateuch. It takes its name in the LXX. and Vulg. from the double numbering or census of the people. The Book may be said to contain the history of the Israelites from the time of leaving Sinai till their arrival at the Promised Land in the fortieth year of their journeyings.

Nŭn, the father of Joshua (Ex. xxxiii. 11, &c.). His descent from Ephraim is recorded in 1 Chr. vii.

Nurse. The position of the nurse was one of much honor and importance. (Gen. xxiv. 59, xxxv. 8; 2 Sam. iv. 4; 2 K. xi. 2; 3 Macc. i. 20).

THE ROE BUCK.

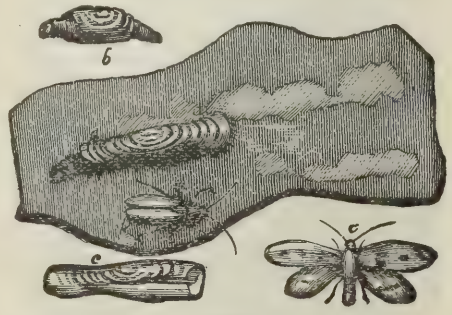
Nuts (Gen. xliii. 11). The Hebrew denotes the fruit of the Pistachio tree. Cant. vi. 11, in all probability, refers to the Walnut-tree. According to Josephus, the walnut-tree grew luxuriantly around Gennesareth.

Nym'phas, a wealthy and zealous Christian in Laodicia (Col. iv. 15).



O

Oak. Even the terebinth, in point of size, cannot compete with some of the oaks of Palestine.

LODGE, OR BOOTH, IN A GARDEN.

Oath. The principle on which an oath is held to be binding is incidentally laid down in Heb. vi. 16. The forms of abjuration mentioned are: 1. lifting up the hand. Witnesses laid their hands on the head of the accused (Gen. xiv. 22; Lev. xxiv. 14; Deut. xxxiii. 40; Is. iii. 7). 2. Putting the hand under the thigh of the person to whom the promise was made (Gen. xxiv. 2, xlvii. 29). 3. Oaths were sometimes taken before the altar, or looking towards the Temple (1 K. viii. 31; 2 Chr. vi. 22). 4. Dividing a victim and passing between (Gen. xv. 10, 17; Jer. xxxiv. 18).

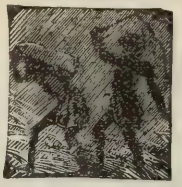
Ōbadi'ah (Servant of the Lord), the fourth of the twelve minor prophets. We know nothing of him except from the book which bears his name. He must have prophesied subsequently to the year B. C. 588. The Book of Obadiah is a sustained denunciation of the Edomites, melting into a vision of the future glories of Zion.

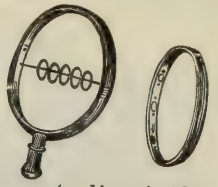
Ō'bed. Son of Boaz and Ruth the Moabitess

THE FIELD MOUSE.



(Ruth iv. 17). The circumstances of his birth are given in the book of Ruth. He is said to be the father of Jesse.

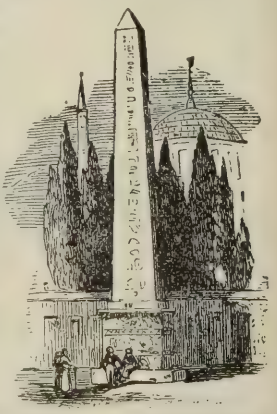
Ō'bed-ē'dom. After the death of Uzzah, the ark was carried aside into the house of Obed-edom, where it continued three months. It was brought thence by David (1 Chr. xv. 25; 2 Sam. vi. 12).



Ō'ded. 1. The father of Azariah the prophet in the reign of Asa (2 Chr. xv. 1). 2. A prophet of Jehovah in Samaria, at the time of Pekah's invasion of Judah (2 Chr. xxviii. 9).

Offerings. [SACRIFICE.]

Officer. The Hebrew rendered "officer," are either indefinite or synonymous terms for functionaries known as "scribe," "eunuch," &c.

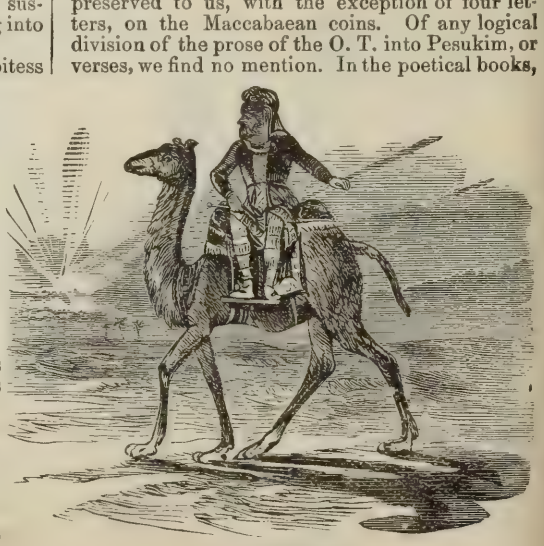


MASTER AND SERVANT.

MACHOL (used in ancient dances.)

Ŏg, an Amoritish king of Bashan (Josh. xiii. 12). He was one of the last of the giant race of Rephaim, and was, with his people, exterminated by the Israelites. The belief in Og's enormous stature is corroborated by an appeal to his iron bedstead (Deut. iii. 11).

Oil. Of the substances known to the ancients as yielding oil, the olive-berry is the most frequently mentioned. Oil was used by the Jews for anointing the body. The bodies of the dead were anointed with oil by Greeks and Romans. The oil for "the light" was expressly ordered to be olive-oil, beaten. Oil was mixed with the flour or meal used in offerings. Oil is indicative of gladness; its absence denoted sorrow (Is. lxi. 3; Joel ii. 19; Rev. vi. 6). Kings, priests, and prophets were anointed with oil.



Inscription on Ancient Monument.

Oil-tree (Neh. viii. 15; Is. xli. 19). It may perhaps be identified with the zackum-tree, a well-known and abundant shrub in the plain of Jordan. The zackum-oil is held in high repute by the Arabs.

Ointment. The practice of anointing the head and clothes on festive occasions had place among the Jews (Ruth iii. 3; Eccl. vii. 1; ix. 8; Prov. xxvii. 9, 16, &c.). Ointments as well as oil were used to anoint dead bodies (Matt. xxvi. 12; Mark xiv. 3, 8; Luke xxiii. 56; John xii. 3, 7, xix. 40). Ointment formed an important feature in ancient medical treatment (Is. i. 6). In the Christian Church the ancient usage of anointing the bodies of the dead was long retained.

Old Testament. There can be little doubt that the text was ordinarily written on skins, rolled up into volumes. The original character is that still preserved to us, with the exception of four letters, on the Maccabaean coins. Of any logical division of the prose of the O. T. into Pesukim, or verses, we find no mention. In the poetical books, the Pesukim mentioned in the Talmud correspond to the poetical lines, not to our modern verses. Of the documents which directly bear upon the history of the Hebrew text, the two earliest are the Samaritan copy of the Pentateuch, and the LXX.

Olive. No tree is more closely associated with history and civilization. Its foliage is mentioned when the flood began to retire (Gen. viii. 11). The olive-tree was abundant in Palestine (see Deut. vi. 11, viii. 8, xxviii. 40). Almost every village has its olive-grove. The berries which produce the oil were gathered by shaking the tree or beating it. Then followed the treading of the fruit (Deut. xxxiii. 24; Mic. vi. 15).

Olives, Mount of, is on the east of Jerusalem. It is a ridge of more than a mile in length, running north and south, covering the eastern side of the city. On the east the mount is close to the walls, parted only by the ravine of the Kidron. This portion is the real Mount of Olives of history. In general height it is not very much above the city. Of sacred spots three remain: 1. Gethsemane, at the foot of the mount. 2. The spot from which our Saviour ascended on the summit. 3. The place of the Lamentation of Christ over Jerusalem, half way up.

Olym'pas, a Christian at Rome (Rom. xvi. 15).

Ōme'ga, the last letter in the Greek alphabet, as Alpha is the first.

O'mer. [WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.]

Ōm'ri, originally "captain of the host" to ELAH, was afterwards himself king of Israel. When Elah was murdered by Zimri at Tirzah, the army proclaimed Omri king. Thereupon he attacked Tirzah, where Zimri was holding his court as king. The city was taken, and Zimri perished, after a reign of seven days. The probable date of Omri's accession was B. C. 935; of Tibni's defeat and the beginning of Omri's sole reign B. C. 931, and of his death B. C. 919.

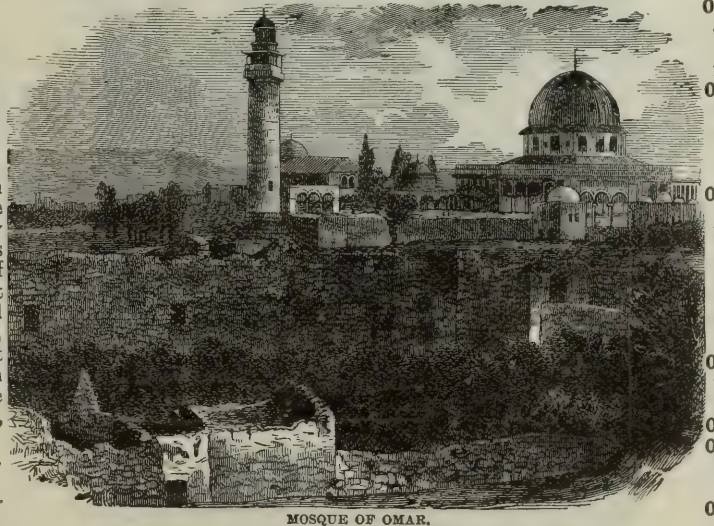
Ŏn, a tower of Lower Egypt, better known as Heliopolis. It was about twenty miles northeast of Memphis. The chief object of worship at Heliopolis was the sun. The first mention of this place is in the history of Joseph, to whom we read Pharaoh gave "to wife Asenath the daughter of Potipherah, priest of On" (Gen. xli. 45, comp. ver. 50, and xlvi. 20).



Ō'nam. 1. One of the sons of Shobal the son of Seir (Gen. xxxvi. 23; 1 Chr. i. 40). 2. The son of Jerahmeel by his wife Atarah (1 Chr. ii. 26, 28).

Ō'nan, the second son of Judah. "What he did was evil in the eyes of Jehovah, and He slew him also," as He had slain his elder brother (Gen. xxxviii. 9).

Onĕs'imŭs, the slave in whose behalf Paul wrote the Epistle to Philemon. He was of Colossae, since Paul in writing to the Church there speaks of him (Col. iv. 9) as "one of you."

Ŏnesĭph'orŭs (2 Tim. i. 16–18, iv. 19). In the former Paul mentions him in terms of grateful love, and in the latter he singles out "the household of Onesiphorus" as worthy of a special greeting.

Oni'as, the name of five high-priests in the period between the Old and New Testaments.

Onions (Num. xi. 5). Onions have been from time immemorial a favorite article of food amongst the Egyptians. The onions of Egypt are milder and less pungent than those of this country.

Onycha (Ex. xxx. 34), one of the ingredients of the sacred perfume.

Onyx, the translation of the Heb. sheham (Gen. ii. 12; Ex. xxviii. 9, 20; 1 Chr. xxix. 2; Ez. xxviii. 13). Some believe the "beryl" is intended; but authority is in favor of the onyx.

Ō'phir. 1. The eleventh of the sons of Joktan. 2. A seaport or region from which the Hebrews in the time of Solomon obtained gold. In addition to gold, the vessels brought almug-wood and precious stones. The geographical situation of Ophir has long been a subject of doubt.

Ŏph'rah. The native place of Gideon (Judg. vi. 11); the scene of his exploits against Baal (ver. 24); his residence after his accession to power (ix. 5), and the place of his burial in the family sepulchre (viii. 32). It was probably not far distant from Shechem.

Orator. The title applied to Tertullus, who appeared as the advocate or patronus of the Jewish accusers of St. Paul before Felix (Acts xxiv. 1).

Ō'reb, one of the chieftains of the Midianite host which invaded Israel, and was defeated by Gideon.

COVERED GALLERIES OF AN ORIENTAL TOWN.

Organ (Gen. iv. 21; Job xxi. 12, xxx. 31; Ps. cl. 4). The Hebrew thus rendered probably denotes a pipe or perforated wind-instrument.

Ori'on. The constellation known to the Hebrews by the name cesil is the same as that the Greeks called Orion, and the Arabs "the giant" Job ix. 9, xxxviii. 31; Am. v. 8).

Ornaments, Personal. The monuments of Egypt exhibit the hands of ladies loaded with rings, earrings, anklets, armlets, bracelets, richly ornamented necklaces, and chains. There is sufficient evidence in the Bible that the inhabitants of Palestine were equally devoted to finery.

Or'pah, a Moabite woman, wife of Chilion, son of Naomi, and thereby sister-in-law to RUTH (Ruth i. 4, 14).

Oshēa. [JOSHUA.]

Ospray (Lev. xi. 13; Deut. xiv. 12), some unclean bird. Probably either the ospray or the white-tailed eagle.

Ossifrage, an unclean bird, in Lev. xi. 13, and Deut. xiv. 12. The Lammergeyer, or bearded vulture, as it is sometimes called, is one of the largest of the birds of prey.

Ostrich. No doubt the Hebrew denotes this bird of the desert.

Ŏth'niel, son of Kenaz, and younger brother of Caleb (Josh. xv. 17; Judg. i. 13, iii. 9; 1 Chr. iv.

THE EASTERN MISER.

13). The first mention of Othniel is on the taking of Debir. To stimulate valor, Caleb promised his daughter Achsah to whosoever should take the city. Othniel won the prize. The next mention of him is in Judg. iii. 9, where he appears as the first judge of Israel after the death of Joshua.

Oven. The Eastern oven is of two kinds—fixed and portable. The former in towns, where regular bakers are employed (Hos. vii. 4); the latter in the nomad state. It consists of a large jar made of clay, with a hole for the ashes. It was heated with dry twigs and grass (Matt. vi. 30), and the loaves placed inside and outside.

Owl, the representative in the A. V. of four Hebrew words. The A. V. translated "owl," or "great owl;" the LXX. and Vulg. read ibis, i. e. the Ibis religiosa, the sacred bird of Egypt.

NOSE-RINGS.

Ox. Oxen were used for ploughing (Deut. xxii. 10; 1 Sam. xiv. 14, &c.); for treading out corn (Deut. xxv. 4; Hos. x. 11, &c.); for draught purposes (Num. vii. 3; 1 Sam. vi. 7, &c); as beasts of burden (1 Chr. xii. 40); their flesh was eaten (Deut. xiv. 4; 1 K. i. 9, &c.); they were used in the sacrifices. The ox that threshed the corn was by no means to be muzzled; he was to enjoy rest on the Sabbath (Ex. xxiii. 12; Deut. v. 14).

Ō'zem, the sixth son of Jesse, the next eldest above David (1 Chr. ii. 15).

Esd. ii. 2). 2. Uzziah, king of Judah (Matt. i. 8, 9).

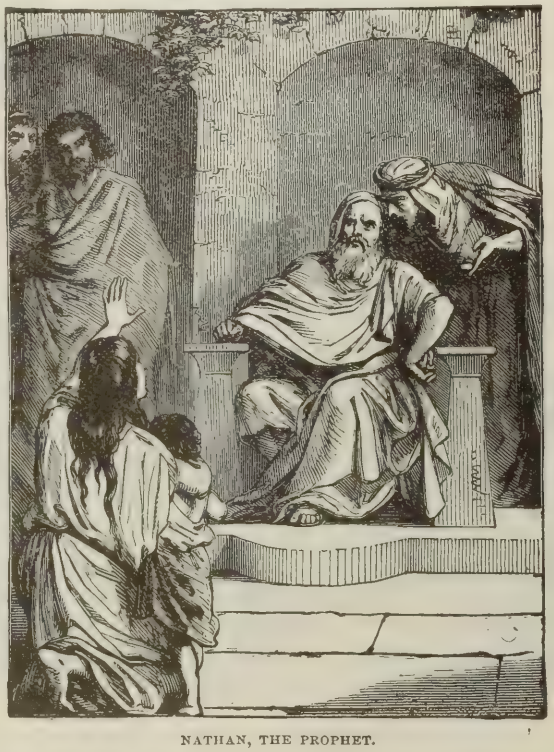
Pā'dan. Padan-Aram (Gen. xlviii. 7).



Pā'dan-ā'ram. "The table-land of Aram." More especially applied to that portion which bordered on the Euphrates, to distinguish it from the mountainous districts in the N. and N. E. of Mesopotamia.

Paint (as a cosmetic). The use of cosmetic dyes has prevailed in all ages in Eastern countries. We have abundant evidence of the practice of painting the eyes in Egypt and in Assyria. The notices of it among the Hebrews are few; and it seems to have been used as a meretricious art, unworthy of a woman of high character.

Nose jewel of Arabian woman.

Pălesti'na and Păl'estine. These two forms occur in the A. V.; the first in Ex. xv. 14, and Is. xiv. 29, 31; the second, Joel iii. 4. Palestine in the A. V. really means nothing but Philistia. The name most frequently used throughout the middle ages, and down to our own time, is the Holy Land. It is but a strip of country about the size of Wales, less than 140 miles in length, and barely 40 in average breadth.

Palmer-worm (Heb. gazam), Joel i. 4, ii. 25. It is maintained that gazam denotes some species of locust, but it is more probably a caterpillar.

Palm-tree (Heb. tamar). Under this generic term many species are included; but we have here only to do with the Date-palm. This tree was peculiarly characteristic of Palestine and the neighboring regions. Perhaps no point is more worthy of mention than the elasticity of the fibre of the palm, and its determined growth upwards, even when loaded with weights. But palm-branches were used by Jews in token of victory and peace (1 Macc. xiii. 51; 2 Macc. x. 7, xiv. 4). The ancient Orientals made use of wine and honey obtained from the palm tree. This tree, once so abundant in Judaea, is now comparatively rare.

Palsy. The palsy meets us in the N. T. only. The words "grievously tormented" (Matt. viii. 6) may refer to paralysis agitans. The woman who was "bowed together" may have been a paralytic (Luke xiii. 11).

Pamphyl'ia, one of the coast regions in the south of Asia Minor. In Pamphylia St. Paul first entered Asia Minor. He and Barnabas finally left Pamphylia by its chief seaport, Attalia.

Pan. Of six words so rendered, two imply a shallow pan or plate for cakes of meal; the others a deeper vessel or caldron for boiling meat.

Păn'năg, an article of commerce exported from Palestine to Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 17). It perhaps represents some of the spices grown in Palestine.

Paper. [Writing.]

Pā'phos, a town at the west end of Cyprus. Paul and Barnabas traveled "through the isle" (Acts xiii. 6). The characteristic of Paphos was the worship of Venus.

Parable. By the Jewish Rabbis the parable was made the instrument for teaching the young disciple to discern the treasures of wisdom. The worth of parables, as instruments of teaching, lies in their being at once a test of character.

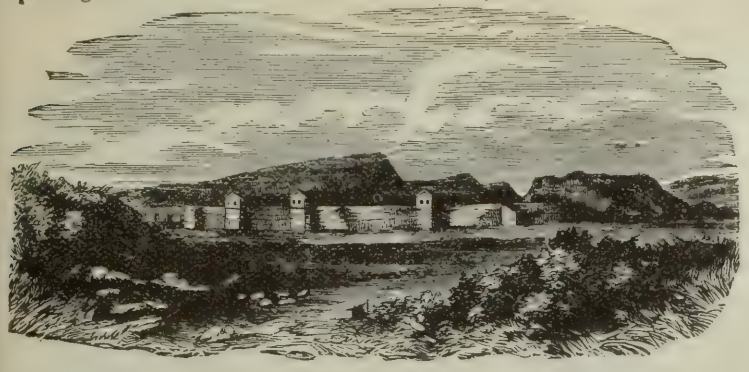
Păr'adise is a word of Persian origin, and is used in the Septuagint as the translation of Eden. [Eden.]

Pā'ran, El-pa'ran. 1. The position between Midian and Egypt. 2. "Mount" Paran (Deut. xxxiii. 2; Hab. iii. 3). Probably the northwestern member of the Sinaitic mountain-group.

Parchment. [Writing.]

Pär'menās, one of the seven deacons (Acts vi. 5). There is a tradition that he suffered martyrdom at Philippi.

Pär'thians occurs only in Acts ii. 9, where it designates Jews settled in Parthia. Parthia Proper lay south of Hyrcania, east of Media, and north of Sagartia. Parthia was a power almost rivalling Rome. The Parthian dominion lasted for nearly five centuries.



Partridge (1 Sam. xxvi. 20; Jer. xvii. 11).

PAPYRUS.

The references agree with the habits of two species of partridge, viz. Caccabis saxatilis (the Greek partridge) and Ammoperdix Heyii. The expression in Ecclus. xi. 30 clearly refers to "a decoy partridge."

PERGA, ASIA MINOR.

Parvā'im, an unknown place or country whence gold was procured for Solomon's Temple (2 Chr. iii. 6). Perhaps a general term for the East.

Pas-dam'mim. [EPHES-DAMMIM.]

Păsh'ur. 1. One of the families of priests. 2. (Jer. xx. 1.) In the reign of Jehoiakim Pashur showed himself as hostile to Jeremiah, and put him in the stocks by the gate of Benjamin. For this indignity he was told by Jeremiah that he and all his house should be carried captives to Babylon and there die (Jer. xx. 1-6).

Passover, the first of three great annual Festivals of the Israelites, celebrated in the month Nisan, from the 14th to the 21st. The following passages relate to the Passover: Ex. xii. 1–51, xiii. 3-10, xxiii. 14–19, xxxiv. 18–26; Lev. xxiii. 4–14; Num. ix. 1–14, xxviii. 16-25; Deut. xvi. 1–6.

Păt'ara, a Lycian city on the south-western shore of Lycia. Pataria was practically the seaport of the city of Zanthus, ten miles distant, mentioned in Acts xxi. 1, 2.

Păt'mos (Rev. i. 9), a rugged and bare island, in that part of the Aegean called the Icarian Sea.

RUINS OF PETRA.

Patmos is divided into two nearly equal parts, a northern and a southern. On the hill to the south is the celebrated monastery, which bears the name of "John the Divine." Half way up the ascent is the cave or grotto where tradition says that St. John received the Revelation.

Pā'triarchs. The name Patriarch is applied in the N. T. to Abraham (Heb. vii. 4), to the sons of Jacob (Acts vii. 8, 9), and to David (Acts ii. 29); and is apparently intended to be equivalent to the phrase, the "head" or "prince of a tribe, so often found in the O. T.

Păt'robăs, a Christian at Rome to whom St. Paul sends his salutation (Rom. xvi. 14).

Paul. His father was of the tribe of Benjamin (Phil. iii. 5), and a Pharisee (Acts xxiii. 6), and had acquired the Roman franchise (Acts xxii. 28), and was settled in Tarsus. His original name was Saul. He was sent to Jerusalem early for his education, and became prominent as a Pharisee. His conversion (Acts ix.) occurred after the crucifixion. His remarkable life is given in the Acts. He was finally beheaded by Nero, at Rome, A. D. 66. He was thoroughly learned in the Heb. law, and in the Greek and Hebrew languages.

THE NUTMEG.

Pavillion. An enclosed place (Ps. xxvii. 5).

Peacocks (1 K. x. 22; 2 Chr. ix. 21). The Hebrew word may be traced to the Tamul or Malabaric togei, "peacock."

Pearl. Job xxviii. 18 probably means "crystals." Pearls, however, are frequently mentioned in the N T. (Matt. xiii. 45; 1 Tim. ii. 9; Rev. xvii. 4, xxi. 21).

Pē'kah, a captain of Pekahiah king of Israel, murdered his master, seized the throne, and became the 18th sovereign of the northern kingdom (B. C. 757–740). Hoshea, the son of Elah conspired against him, and put him to death.

OLIVE OF PALESTINE.

Pĕk'ahi'ah, son of Menahem, was the 17th king of the separate kingdom of Israel (B. C. 759–757). Pekah murdered him and seized the throne.

Pē'leg, son of Eber and brother of Joktan (Gen. x. 25, xi. 16).

Pē'lethites. [CHERETHITES.]

Pelican (Heb. kaath). Amongst the unclean birds (Lev. xi. 18; Deut. xiv. 17). The best authorities are in favor of the pelican being the bird denoted by kaath.

Pen. [WRITING.]

Peni'el, the name Jacob gave to the place in which he had wrestled with God. It lay somewhere between the torrent Jabbok and Succoth.

Penny, Pennyworth. In the A. V. of the N. T. "penny" occurs as the rendering of the Roman denarius (Matt. xx. 2, xxii. 19; Mark vi. 37, xii. 15; Luke xx. 24; John vi. 7; Rev. vi. 6). The denarius was the chief Roman silver coin, and was worth about 9*d*.

Pĕn'tateŭch, The, is the Greek name given to the "Five Books of Moses." The division of the whole work into five parts was probably made by the Greek translators; for the titles of the several books are of Greek origin. The work, beginning with the record of creation, and the history of the primitive world, passes on to deal more especially with the early history of the Jewish family.

Pĕn'tecŏst, that is, the fiftieth day, or HARVEST

PHILADELPHIA, ASIA MINOR.

FEAST, or FEAST OF WEEKS. It lasted only for one day. The people, having at the Passover presented before God the first sheaf of the harvest, departed to their homes to gather it in, and then returned to keep the harvest-feast before Jehovah. The pentecost was the Jewish harvest-home.

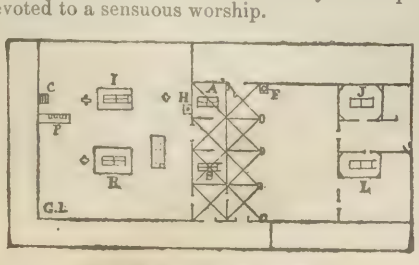
COMMON OWL OF PALESTINE.

Pē'or, a mountain in Moab, from whence the prophet Balaam was conducted by Balak (Num. xxiii. 28 only).

Pē'rez-ŭz'zah (2 Sam. vi. 8). The title David conferred on the threshing-floor of Nachon, in commemoration of the sudden death of Uzzah.

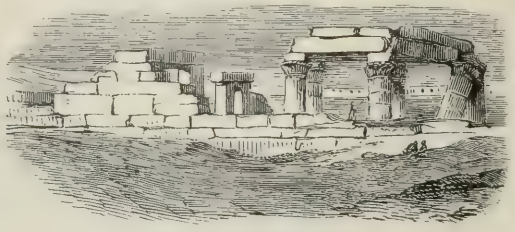


Perfumes. The free use of perfumes was peculiarly grateful to the Orientals (Prov. xxvii. 9). Perfumes entered largely into the Temple service, in the two forms of incense and ointment (Ex. xxx. 22–38).

PERSIAN KING AND ATTENDANTS.

Per'ga, a city of Pamphylia (Acts xiii. 13), on the river Cestius, 60 stadia from its mouth, and celebrated for the worship of Artemis (Diana).

Per'gamŏs, a city of Mysia, about five miles to the N. of the river Caicus. The sumptuousness of the Attalic princes raised Pergamos to be first city in Asia as regards splendor. It became a city of temples, devoted to a sensuous worship.



PLAN OF EGYPTIAN PALACE.

Pĕr'izzite, The, and Per'izzites, one of the nations inhabiting the Land of Promise before and at the time of its conquest by Israel.

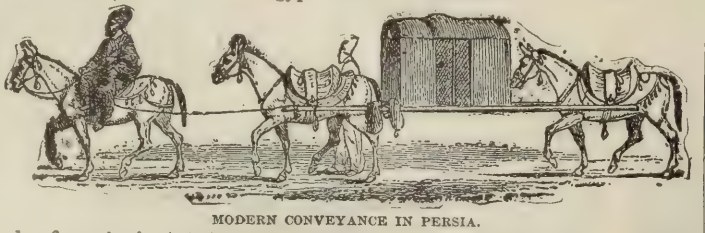
Persĕp'olĭs (2 Macc. ix. 2), the capital of Persia Proper, and the occasional residence of the Persian court.

Per'sia, Persians. Persia Proper was a tract of no very large dimensions on the Persian Gulf. This tract was bounded on the west by Susiana or Elam, on the north by Media, on the south by the Persian Gulf, and on the east by Carmania. The history of Persia begins with their revolt from the Medes and accession of Cyrus the Great, B. C. 558.

Pē'ter. His original name was Simon, i. e. "hearer." He was the son of Jonas (Matt. xvi. 17; John i. 43, xxi. 16), and was brought up a fisherman. He and his brother Andrew were partners of John and James, the sons of Zebedee. The Apostle did not live in a hut by the seaside, but first at Bethsaida, and afterwards in a house at Capernaum, belonging to himself or his mother-in-law. He was probably between thirty and forty years of age at the date of his call. According to the early writers, he suffered at or about the same time with Paul, and in the Neronian persecution. All agree that he was crucified.—The Apostle is said to have employed interpreters.

RUINS OF CHEMITIS, NUBIA.

Peter, First Epistle of. The external evidence of authenticity is of the strongest kind; and the internal is equally strong. It was addressed to the Churches of Asia Minor, for the most part founded by Paul and his companions.

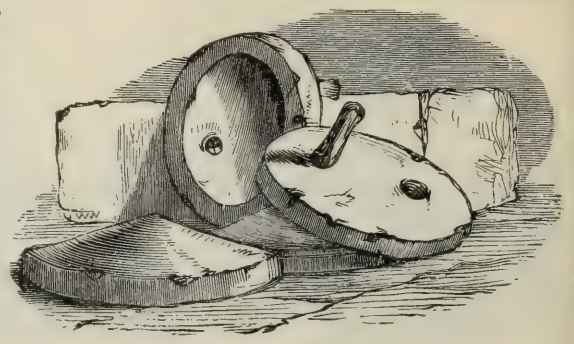


Peter, Second Epistle of. The doubts as to the genuineness of this Epistle appear to have originated with the critics of Alexandria, where, however, the Epistle itself was formally recognized at a very early period.

Pē'thor, a town of Mesopotamia, where Balaam resided (Num. xxii. 5; Deut. xxiii. 4). Its position is unknown.

Phăl'ti, son of Laish of Gallim, to whom Saul gave Michal after he had driven David forth (1 Sam. xxv. 44).

Phanū'el. The father of Anna, the prophetess of the tribe of Aser (Luke ii. 36).



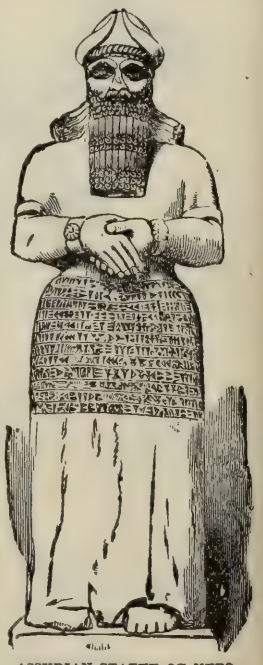
Phā'raōh, the common title of the native kings of Egypt. We find mentioned: 1. He who took away the wife of Abraham (Gen. xii.); 2. Who elevated Joseph (Gen. xli. 39); 3. Who oppressed Israel (Ex. i. 8); 4. Who released Israel (Ex. v. 14); 5. Who gave his wife's sister to Hadad (1 K. ix.); 6. Serechus, cotemporary with Ahaz (2 K. xvii. 4); 7. Tirhakah, in days of Hezekiah (2 K. xix, 9); 8. Necho, in the 14th year of whose reign David interpreted the dream of the king of Babylon; 9. Hophru, called Apries, who made a league with Hezekiah (Jer. xliii. 8–12; xliv. 1). This king died 570 B. C. He destroyed Jerusalem, and erected the golden image on the plain of Dura.

MODERN CONVEYANCE IN PERSIA.

Pharaoh's Daughter. Three are mentioned. 1. The preserver of Moses (Ex. ii. 5–10). 2. Bithiah, wife of Mered (1 Chr. iv. 18). 3. A wife of Solomon, probably daughter of a king of the xxist dynasty (1 K. iii. 1, vii. 8, ix. 24).

Phā'rez (PEREZ, 1 Chr. xxvii. 3; PHARES, Matt. i. 3; Luke iii. 33; 1 Esd. v. 5), twin son, with Zarah or Zerah, of Judah and Tamar his daughter in-law. The circumstances of his birth are detailed in Gen. xxxviii.

EASTERN MILLSTONES.



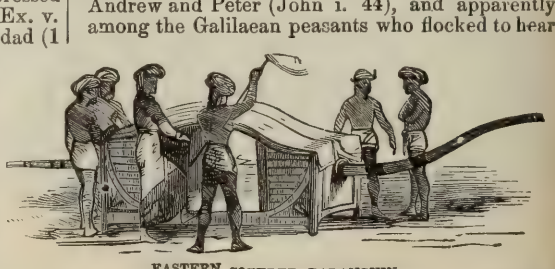
Phărisees, a religious party amongst the Jews at the time of Christ, so called from Perishin, "separated." A cursory perusal of the Gospels is sufficient to show that Christ's teaching was in some respects thoroughly antagonistic to theirs. He denounced them in the bitterest language. (See Matt. xv. 7, 8, xxiii. 5, 13, 14, 15, 23; Mark vii. 6; Luke xi. 42-44, and compare Matt. vii. 1–5. xi. 29, xii. 19, 20; Luke vi. 28, 37-42.)

Phar'par (2 K. v. 12). The two principal streams in the district of Damascus are the Barada and the Awaj; the former the Abana, and the latter the Pharpar.

Phenī'ce (Acts xxvii. 12), more properly PHOENIX, the name of a haven in Crete on the south coast.

Philadĕl'phia, a town on the confines of Lydia, built by Attalus II., king of Pergamus. There was, as appears from Rev. iii. 9, a synagogue of Hellenizing Jews there, as well as a Christian Church.

Philē'mon, the name of the Christian to whom Paul addressed his Epistle in behalf of Onesimus. He was a native, probably, of Colossae. It is related that Philemon became bishop of Colossae, and died as a martyr under Nero.



ASSYRIAN STATUE OF NEBO.

Philemon, The Epistle of Paul to, is one of the letters the Apostle wrote during his first captivity at Rome. Nothing is wanted to confirm the genuineness of the epistle.

Phile'tus, possibly a disciple of Hymenaeus, with whom he is associated in 2 Tim. ii. 17.

Philip the Apostle was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter (John i. 44), and apparently among the Galilaean peasants who flocked to hear the Baptist. When the Twelve were specially set apart for their office, he was numbered among them. He is at Jerusalem after the Ascension (Acts i. 13), and on day of Pentecost. After this all is uncertain.

EASTERN COVERED PALANQUIN.

Philip the Evangelist (Acts vi.). One of the Seven appointed to superintend the daily distribution of food and alms. It is noticeable that the city of Samaria is the first scene of his activity (Acts viii).

Philip'pi, a city of Macedonia, about nine miles from the sea, to the N. W. of the island of Thasos. In Acts xvi. 11, 12, the Philippi which St. Paul visited was a Roman city.

Philip'pians, Epistle to the, was written by St. Paul from Rome in A. D. 62 or 63. St. Paul's connection with Philippi was of a peculiar character. St. Paul entered its walls, A. D. 52 (Acts xvi. 12. There he founded a Christian Church. Philippi was endeared to St. Paul by the hospitality of Lydia, the deep sympathy of the converts, and the remarkable miracle which set a seal on his preaching.

MODERN PERSIAN BRIDE.

Philis'tia. The word thus translated is identical with that elsewhere rendered PALESTINE.

Philis'tines. The origin of the Philistines is nowhere expressly stated; but as the prophets describe them as "the Philistines from Caphtor," it is prima facie probable that they were the "Caphtorims which came out of Caphtor" who expelled the Avim from their territory and occupied it (Deut. ii. 23); and the descendants of Mizraim (Gen. x. 14).

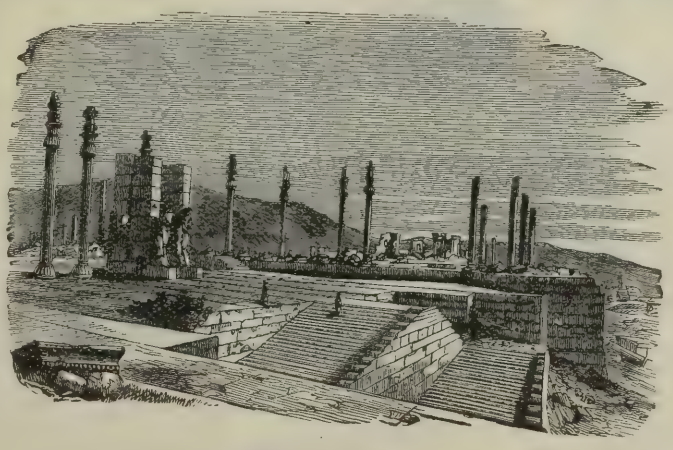
Philol'ogus, a Christian at Rome to whom St. Paul sends his salutation (Rom. xvi. 15).



Phin'ehas. 1. Son of Eleazar and grandson of Aaron (Ex. vi. 25). He is memorable for having while a youth, by his zeal and energy, appeased the divine wrath (Num. xxv. 7). For this he was rewarded by Jehovah (10–13). After Eleazar's death he became high-priest—the third of the series. The tomb of Phinehas is shown at Awertah, four miles S. E. of Nablus. 2. Second son of Eli (1 Sam. i. 3, ii. 34, iv. 4, 11 17, 19, xiv. 3). Phinehas was killed with his brother by the Philistines when the ark was captured. [ELI.]

Phlē'gon. A Christian at Rome whom St. Paul salutes (Rom. xvi. 14).

Phoē'be. What is said of her (Rom. xvi. 1, 2) bears on the question of the deaconesses of the Apostolic Church.

Phoeni'ce, Phoenic'ia, a tract of country, of which Tyre and Sidon were the principal cities, to the north of Palestine, along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The length of coast to which the name of Phoenicia was applied varied at different times.

Phryg'ia. By Phrygia we must understand an extensive district in Asia Minor, which contributed portions to several Roman provinces, and varying portions at different times.

Phu'rah. Gideon's servant (1 Sam. xiv. 1) who accompanied him in his midnight visit to the camp of the Midianites (Judg. vii. 10, 11).

Phut, Put, the third name in the list of the sons of Ham (Gen. x. 6; 1 Chr. i. 8), elsewhere applied to an African country or people.

Phygel'lus. [HERMOGENES.]

Phylactery. Armlets worn on the left arm and forehead. [FRONTLETS.]

Picture. In two of the three passages in which "picture" is used in the A. V. it denotes idolatrous representations.

Piece of Gold (2 K. v. 5). The rendering "piece of gold" is doubtful; and "shekels of gold" is preferable.

Piece of Silver. In the N. T. two words are thus rendered. 1. Drachma (Luke xv. 8, 9), a Greek silver coin, equivalent, at the time of St. Luke, to the Roman denarius. 2. Silver only occurs in the account of the betrayal of our Lord (Matt. xxvi. 15, xxvii. 3, 5, 6, 9). It is more probable that the thirty pieces of silver were tetradrachms than denarii.

Pigeon. [TURTLE-DOVE.]

Pi'late, Pon'tius. The sixth Roman procurator of Judaea, and under him our Lord worked, suffered, and died. He was appointed A. D. 25–6, in the 12th year of Tiberius. His arbitrary administration nearly drove the Jews to insurrection on two or three occasions. Tradition says he was finally banished to Gaul and committed suicide.

Pillar. Perhaps the earliest application of the pillar was the votive or monumental. This consisted of nothing but a single stone, or pile of stones.

Pillar, Plain of the, or rather "oak of the pillar." A tree near Shechem, at which the men of Shechem and the house of Millo assembled to crown Abimelech son of Gideon (Judg. ix. 6).

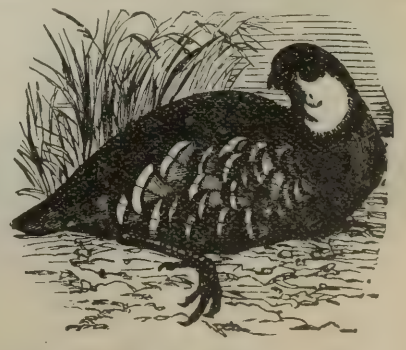
Pilled (Gen. xxx. 37, 38). PEELED (Is. xviii. 2; Ez. xxix. 18). The verb "to pill" appears in old Eng. as identical in meaning with "to peel."

Pine-tree. 1. Heb. Tidhar (Is. xli. 19, lx. 13). The rendering "pine" seems least probable. 2. Shemen (Neh. viii. 15) is probably the wild olive.

Pinnacle of the Temple (Matt. iv. 5; Luke iv. 9). Perhaps the word means the battlement ordered by law to be added to every roof.

Pipe (Heb. chalil). The Hebrew is derived from a root signifying "to bore, perforate," and is represented by the English "pipe" or "flute." It is one of the simplest and oldest of musical instruments. It is associated with the tabret.

MODERN PERSIAN BRIDE.



Pis'gah (Num. xxi. 20, xxiii. 14; Deut. iii. 27, xxxiv. 1), a mountain range or district, called also Abarim. It lay on the east of Jordan, and opposite Jericho. Its highest point was Mount Nebo.

Iconium (Acts xiii. 13, 14, 51). and in returning (xiv. 21; 2 Tim. iii. 11).

Pi'son. [Eden.]

Pitch. The Hebrew represents mineral pitch or asphalt, in its different aspects. Asphalt is an opaque, inflammable substance, which bubbles up from subterranean fountains in a liquid state, and hardens by exposure, but readily melts under heat. In the latter state it is very tenacious, and was used in lieu of mortar in Babylonia (Gen. xi. 3).

Pitcher, to denote the water-jars or pitchers with one or two handles, used chiefly by women for carrying water (Gen. xxiv. 15–20; but see Mark xiv. 13; Luke xxii. 10). The Bedouin women commonly use skin bottles.

PHARAOH I.

Such was the "bottle" carried by Hagar (Gen. xxi. 14).

Pi'thom, one of the store-cities built by the Israelites for Pharaoh "which knew not Joseph" (Ex. i. 11).

Plagues, The Ten. The occasion on which the plagues were sent is described in Ex. iii.–xii. 1. The Plague of Blood. This plague was humiliating, as the Nile was held sacred. 2. The Plague of Frogs. Frogs were included among the sacred animals. 3. The Plague of Lice. The Egyptians by this incurred religious defilement. 4. The Plague of Flies. These were an object of worship. 5. The Plague of the Murrain of Beasts.

CONQUERORS PLOUGHING A CAPTURED CITY.

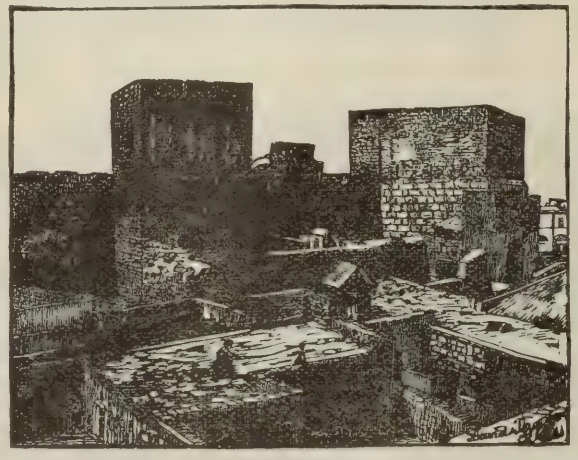
The cattle were their deities. 6. The Plague of Boils. The black leprosy, a kind of elephaniasis. 7. The Plague of Hail. The ruin caused by the hail was greater than that of the earlier plagues. 8. The Plague of Locusts. The severity of this is well understood by those who have been in Egypt. 9. The Plague of Darkness, illustrated by the Samoom and the hot wind of the Khamaseen. 10. The Death of the Firstborn. The severity, its falling upon man and beast, puts this plague wholly beyond comparison with the severest.

Ple'iades (Job ix. 9, xxxviii. 31, and Am. v. 8). In the last passage our A. V. has "the seven stars;" the Geneva version has "Pleiades."

Plough. [Agriculture.]

Poetry, Hebrew. The literature of the Hebrews abounds with illustrations of all forms of lyrical poetry. One characteristic of Hebrew poetry is its intensely national and local coloring.

Pol'lux. [Castor and Pollux.]



Polygamy. [Marriage.]

Pomegrăn'ate. The pomegranate was early cultivated in Egypt (Num. xx. 5). The pomegranate-tree derives its name from the Latin pomum granatum, "grained apple."

Pommels, only in 2 Chr. iv. 12, 13. In 1 K. vii. 41, "bowels." The word signifies convex projections belonging to the capitals of pillars.

Pond. The ponds of Egypt (Ex. vii. 19, viii. 5) were doubtless water left by the inundation of the Nile.

Pontus, a large district in the north of Asia Minor.

PHILISTINE CITY.

It is three times mentioned in the N. T. (Acts ii. 9, 10, xviii. 2; 1 Pet. i. 1).

Pool. Pools are in parts of Palestine and Syria the only resource for water during the dry season (Is. xlii. 15). The most celebrated are the pools of Solomon near Bethlehem. (Eccl. ii. 6; Ecclus. xxiv. 30, 31).

Poor. The general kindly spirit of the law towards the poor is sufficiently shown by such passages as Deut. xv. 7. Principles similar are inculcated in the New Testament, as Luke iii. 11, xiv. 13; Acts vi. 1; Gal. ii. 10; James ii. 15.

Poplar (Gen. xxx. 37; Hos. iv. 13). Several authorities are in favor of the "white poplar;" others understand the "storax tree."

Porch (1 Chr. xxviii. 11; Judg. iii. 23), strictly a vestibule; was probably a sort of veranda chamber in the works of Solomon. The porch (Matt. xxvi. 71) may have been the passage from the street into the first court of the house.

Porter. This word denotes in every case a gatekeeper, from the Latin portarius.

Possession. [Demoniacs.]

Post. Probably the door-case of a door, including the lintel and side-posts.

Pot. The term "pot" is applicable to many sorts of vessels. 1. (2 K. iv. 2). An earthen jar, deep and narrow, without handles. 2. An earthen vessel for stewing or seething (Ez. iv. 9; Lev. vi. 28). 3. A vessel for culinary purposes (1 Sam. ii. 14).

Pot'iphar. Potiphar is described as "an officer of Pharaoh, chief of the executioners, an Egyptian" (Gen. xxxix. 1; comp. xxxvii. 36).

Potiph'erah. Priest or prince of On, whose daughter Asenath was given Joseph to wife by Pharaoh (Gen. xli. 45, 50, xlvi. 20).

Potsherd, also in A. V. "sherd," a broken piece of earthenware (Prov. xxvi. 23).

Potter's Field, The. A piece of ground (St.

PERSIAN MONARCH ADMINISTERING JUDGMENT.

Matthew xxvii. 7) purchased by the priests with the thirty pieces of silver rejected by Judas, and converted into a burial-place for Jews not belonging to the city.

Pottery. It is evident that the Hebrews used earthenware vessels in the wilderness, and that the potter's trade was afterwards carried on in Palestine. The clay was trodden by men's feet to a paste (Is. xli. 25; Wisd. xv. 7); then placed on the wheel and shaped by hands. The vessel was then coated with a glaze, and burnt in a furnace.

Pound. 1. A weight. 2. A money mentioned in Luke xix. 12–27. The reference appears to be to a Greek pound, of which sixty went to the talent.

Praeto'rium. The headquarters of the Roman military governor, wherever he happened to be.

Prayer. It was the custom at Jerusalem to go to the Temple at regular hours for private prayer (see Luke xviii. 10; Acts iii. 1). The hours of prayer were "the evening," the "morning," and "noonday." Grace before meat seems a common practice (see Matt. xv. 36; Acts xxvii. 35). The posture seems most often standing, unless the prayer were offered with special solemnity and humiliation, which was by kneeling or prostration.

Presents. [GIFTS.]

Priest. The English word is derived from the Greek Presbyter, signifying an "elder." No trace of an hereditary of caste-priesthood meets us in the patriarchal age. The Priesthood was first established in the family of Aaron, and all the sons of Aaron were priests. The ceremony of consecration is described in Ex. xxix., Lev. viii. The N. T. writers recognize in Christ the representative of the true primeval priesthood after the order of Melchizedek (Heb. vii., viii.). The old classification of the high-priest, priests, and Levites, was reproduced in the bishops, priests and deacons of the Christian Church.

Pris'ca (2 Tim. iv. 19) or Priscil'la. [AQUILA.]

Prison. We read on two occasions of confinement "in ward" (Lev. xxiv. 12; Num. xv. 34). In the time of the kings, the prison appears as an appendage to the palace (1 K. xxii. 27).

Prŏch'orŭs, one of the seven deacons, third on the list, and named next after Stephen and Philip (Acts vi. 5).

PAUL.

Procŏn'sul. The Greek for this is rendered "deputy" in Acts xiii. 7, 8, 12, xix. 38; an officer who exercised purely civil functions.

Prŏcūrā'tor, "governor," applied in the N. T. to the officer who presided over the imperial province of Judaea. It is used of Pontius Pilate Matt. xxvii.), of Felix (Acts xxiii., xxiv.), and of Festus (Acts xxvi. 30). The headquarters of the procurator were at Caesarea (Acts xxiii. 23), where he had a judgment-seat (Acts xxv. 6) in the audience chamber (Acts xxv. 23), and was assisted by a council (Acts xxv. 12).

POMEGRANATES.

Prophet. The word means one who announces or pours forth the declarations of God. Of the sixteen Prophets, four are the Great Prophets, namely, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel; and twelve the Minor Prophets, namely, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi. The prophets of the N. T. were supernaturally-illuminated expounders and preachers.

Prŏs'elytes. The Hebrew word thus translated is in the A. V. commonly rendered "stranger" (Gen. xv. 13; Ex. ii. 22; Is. v. 17, &c.). In the N. T. the A. V. has taken the word in a more restricted meaning, and translated it accordingly (Matt. xxiii. 15; Acts ii. 10, vi. 5).

Proverbs, Book of. The superscriptions affixed to portions of the Book, in i. 1, x. 1, xxv. 1, attribute the authorship of those portions to Solomon. With the exception of the last two chapters, it is probable the statement is in the main correct. The Proverbs are frequently quoted or alluded to in the New Testament, and the canonicity of the book thereby confirmed.

Psalms, Book of. The present Hebrew name is Tehillim, "Praises." But in the actual superscriptions of the psalms the word Tehillah is applied only to one, Ps. cxlv., which is indeed emphatically a praise-hymn. The LXX. entitled them "Psalms." The Christian Church obviously received the Psalter from the Jews as the liturgical hymn-book which the Jewish Church had used in the Temple. The book contains 150 Psalms.

Psaltery, a stringed instrument to accompany the voice. The psaltery or sautry, the viol, and the lute, are frequently associated in the old English poets, and were clearly instruments resembling each other, though still different. The Greek Psalterium denotes an instrument played with the fingers.

Ptŏlemaē'us. A race of Egyptian kings beginning with Ptolemaeus I., Soter, B. C. 323, and ending, as far as information goes, with Ptolemaeus VI., Philometer, B. C. 181-145.

Ptolema'is. [ACCHO.]

Pu'ah. 1. Judge of Israel after Abimelech (Judg. x. 1). 2. One of two midwives to whom Pharaoh gave instructions to kill the Hebrew male children (Ex. i. 15).

Publican. The class designated by this word in the N. T. were employed as collectors of the Roman revenue. The Roman senate farmed the vectigalia (direct taxes) and the portoria (customs) to capitalists (publicani). They appointed managers, under whom were the portitores, the actual custom-house officers. The name publicani was used popularly, and in the N. T. exclusively, of the portitores. The portitores were encouraged in the most vexatious or fraudulent exactions.

Pŭb'lĭŭs, the chief man—probably the governor—of Melita, who received and lodged St. Paul and his companions (Acts xxviii. 7).

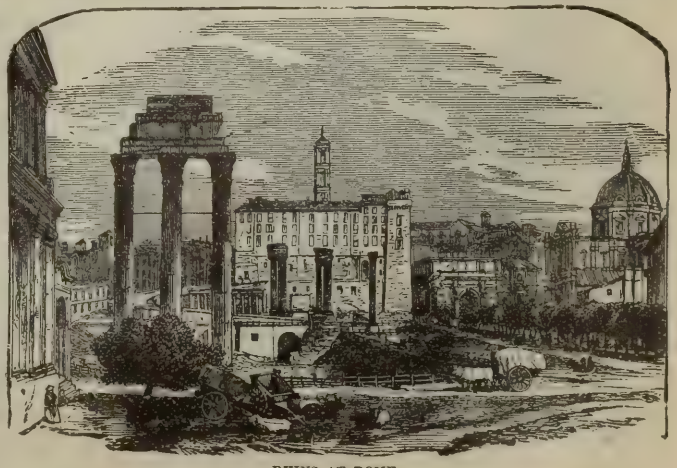
Pu'dens, a Christian friend of Timothy at Rome (2 Tim. iv. 21). According to legend he was the host of St. Peter and friend of St. Paul, and was martyred under Nero.

Pul, a country or nation mentioned in Is. lxvi. 19. It is supposed by some to represent the island Philae in Egypt.



Pul, an Assyrian king, and the first of those monarchs mentioned in Scripture.

Pulse (Dan. i. 12, 16). Literally "seeds" of any kind. Probably the term denotes uncooked grain of any kind, whether barley, wheat, millet, vetches, &c.

ANCIENT LAVER.

Punishments. The earliest theory of punishment is doubtless the one of simple retaliation, "blood for blood." The Jews punished by retaliation, fines, scourging, imprisonment, and death. The most cruel punishments were at times resorted to by tyrants.

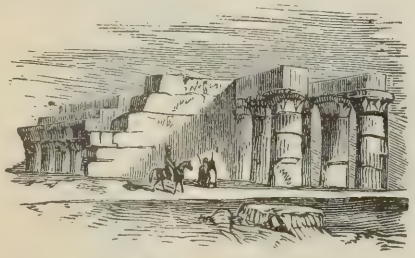
Purification. The essence of purification consisted in the use of water, whether by ablution or aspersion; but in the majora delicta of legal uncleanness, sacrifices of various kinds were added.

RUINS AT ROME.

Pūrim (Lots), the annual festival to commemorate the preservation of the Jews in Persia from the massacre threatened through Haman (Esth. ix.).

The festival lasted two days, and was regularly observed on the 14th and 15th of Adar.

Purse. The Hebrews on a journey had a bag for their money (Gen. xlii. 35; Prov. i. 14; vii. 20;



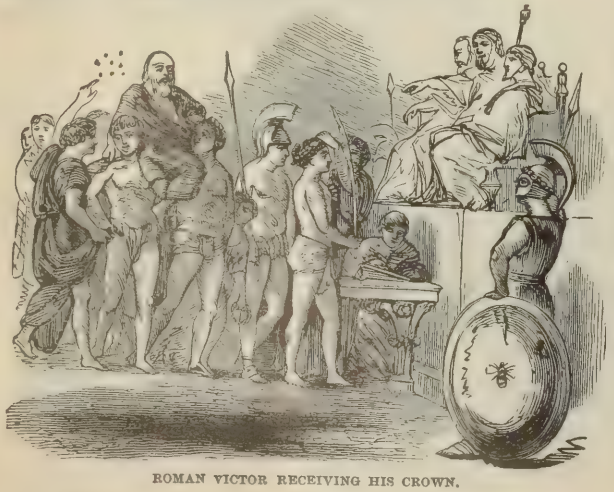
COUNTRY NEAR SAMARIA.

Is. xlvi. 6), and, if merchants, also weights (Deut. xxv. 13; Mic. vi. 11). The girdle also served as a purse (Matt. x. 9; Mark vi. 8). Ladies wore ornamental purses (Is. iii. 23).

Put (1 Chr. i. 8; Nah. iii. 9). [PHUT.]

Pute'oli, the great landing-place of travelers to Italy from the Lavant, and the harbor to which the Alexandrian corn-ships brought their cargoes Acts xxvii. 13).

Pu'tiel. One of the daughters of Putiel was wife of Eleazar the son of Aaron, and mother of Phinehas (Ex. vi. 25).



EGYPTIAN RUINS.

Pygarg (Deut. xiv. 5), the name, apparently, of some species of antelope.

Q

Quails. There can be no doubt that the Hebrew (Ex. xvi. 13; Num. xi. 31, 32; 105th Ps.) denotes the common quail. These birds are known to arrive at places sometimes so completely exhausted by their flight as to be readily taken by the hand. They "spread the quails round about the camp" for the purpose of drying them. The Egyptians similarly prepared these birds. The expression "quails from the sea" (Num. xi. 31) must be taken to show the direction from which they were coming. The quails were, at the time of the event narrated, on their spring journey northwards. "It was at even" that they began to arrive. Many observers have recorded that the quail migrates by night.

Quar'tus, a Christian of Corinth (Rom. xvi. 23), said to have been one of the Seventy disciples, and afterwards bishop of Berytus.

Quaternion, a military term, signifying a guard of four soldiers, two of whom were attached to the person of a prisoner, while the other two kept watch outside the door of his cell (Acts xii. 4).

Queen. This title is properly applied to the queen-mother, since in an Oriental household, it is not the wife but the mother of the master who exercises the highest authority. Such arrangement is one of the inevitable results of polygamy. The extent of the influence of the queen-mother is well illustrated by the narrative of the interview of Solomon and Bathsheba.

Queen of Heaven (Jer. vii. 18, xliv. 17, 18, 19, 25) is the moon, worshipped as Ashtaroth or Astarte, to whom the Hebrew women offered cakes in the streets of Jerusalem.

Quicksands, The, more properly THE SYRTIS (Acts xxvii. 17), the broad and deep bight on the North African coast between Carthage and Cyrene. This region was an object of peculiar dread to the ancient navigators of the Mediterranean.

Quiver. Two Hebrew terms, (1) Theli (Gen. xxvii. 3). It may signify a quiver or a suspended weapon. (2) Ashpah. It is connected with arrows only in Lam. iii. 13. Its other occurrences are Job. xxxix. 23, Is. xxii. 6, and Jer. v. 16. In each of these the LXX. translate it by "quiver," with two exceptions, Job xxxix. 23, and Ps. cxxvii. 5.

R

Rā'amah, son of Cush, and father of Sheba and Dedan (Gen. x. 7). The tribe of Raamah became renowned as traders (Ez. xxvii. 22). They settled on the Persian Gulf.

Rab'bath of the Children of Ammon, and R. of the Ammonites. This is the full appellation of the place commonly given as RABBAH. It occurs only in Deut. iii. 11, and Ez. xxi. 20.

Răb'bi, a title of respect, signifying Master, Teacher, given by the Jews to their doctors and teachers, and often addressed to our Lord. Another form of the title was Rabboni (Mark x. 51; John xx. 16).

Rabbō'ni, John xx. 16. [RABBI.]

Rab-mag (Jer. xxxix. 3, 10), a title borne by Nergal-sharezer, probably identical with Nergissar. The signification is somewhat doubtful.

Rab'saris. 1. An officer of the king of Assyria (2 K. xviii. 17). 2. One of the princes of Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. xxxix. 3, 13). Rabsaris is probably the name of an office, the word signifying chief eunuch.

ROMANS AT TABLE IN TIME OF CHRIST.

Rab'shakēh (2 K. xviii., xix.; Is. xxxvi., xxxvii.), one of the officers of the king of Assyria sent against Jerusalem in the reign of Hezekiah.

Rāca, a term of reproach used by the Jews of our Saviour's age (Matt. v. 22), derived from the Chaldee reka, "worthless."

AN EGYPTIAN AT PRAYERS.

Ra'chab. RAHAB the harlot (Matt. i. 5).

Rā'chel, the younger of the daughters of Laban, the wife of Jacob, and mother of Joseph and Benjamin. The incidents of her life may be found in Gen. xxix.-xxxiii., xxxv. "Rachel died and was buried in the way to Bethlehem." The site of Rachel's tomb has never been questioned. It is about two miles S. of Jerusalem, and one mile N. of Bethlehem.

Ragūel, or Reu'el. 1. Probably the same as Jethro. 2. A pious Jew of "Ecbatane, a city of Media," father of Sara, the wife of Tobias (Tob. iii. 7, 17, &c.).

Rā'hăb, or Ra'chab, a celebrated woman of Jericho, who received the spies sent by Joshua, hid them in her house, was saved with all her family, and became the wife of Salmon and the ancestress of the Messiah (Josh. ii. 1; Matt. i. 5). She was a "harlot," and probably combined the trade of lodging-keeper for wayfaring men.

PTOLOMY.

Ra'hab, a poetical name of Egypt (Ps. lxxxix. 10; Is. li. 9), signifying "fierceness, insolence, pride."

Rā'hel, the more accurate form of RACHEL (Jer. xxxi. 15).

FOOT-RACE.

Rain. In the Bible EARLY RAIN signifies the rains of the autumn (Deut. xi. 14; Jer. v. 24); and LATTER RAIN, the rain of spring (Prov. xvi. 15; Job xxix. 23; Jer. iii. 3).

Rainbow (Gen ix. 13). God took the rainbow, hitherto but a beautiful object in the heavens when the sun's rays fell on falling rain, and consecrated it as the sign of His love and the witness of His promise (Ecclus. xliii. 11).

RAMAH.

Raisins. [VINE.]

Ram, Battering (Ez. iv. 2, xxi. 22). The battering-rams in use among the Assyrians and Babylonians "were of several kinds. Some were joined to movable towers which held warriors and armed men. Others were without wheels."

Rā'ma, Matt. ii. 18, referring to Jer. xxxi. 15. The original passage alludes to a massacre. This the Evangelist turned into a touching reference to the slaughter of the Innocents at Bethlehem, near to the sepulchre of Rachel.

Rā'mah, "a hill." The home of Elkanah, Samuel's father (1 Sam. i. 19, ii. 11), the birthplace of Samuel himself, his home and official residence, the site of his altar (vii. 17, viii. 4, xv. 34, xvi. 13, xix. 18), and finally his burial-place (xxv. 1, xxviii. 3). It was in Mount Ephraim (1 Sam. i. 1), and in the neighborhood of Shechem.

Ra'math-lē'hi, the name bestowed by Samson on the scene of his slaughter of the thousand Philistines with the jaw-bone (Judg. xv. 17).

Ra'math-miz'peh [RAMOTH-GILEAD.]

Ramē'sēs, or Raam'ses, a city and district of Lower Egypt, first mentioned in Gen. xlvii. 11. This land of Rameses either corresponds to the land of Goshen, or was a district of it. In the narrative of the Exodus it is the starting-point of the journey (Ex. xii. 37; see also Num. xxxiii. 3, 5).

Rā'moth-gil'ead, the "heights of Gilead," one of the great fastnesses on the east of Jordan. It seems identical with Ramath-Mizpeh (Josh. xiii. 26). It was the city of refuge for the tribe of Gad (Deut. iv. 43; Josh. xx. 8, xxi. 38). Was 15 miles from Philadelphia.

Rā'phael (Tob. xii. 15). According to another Jewish tradition, Raphael was one of the four angels which stood round the throne of God (Michael, Uriel, Gabriel, Raphael).

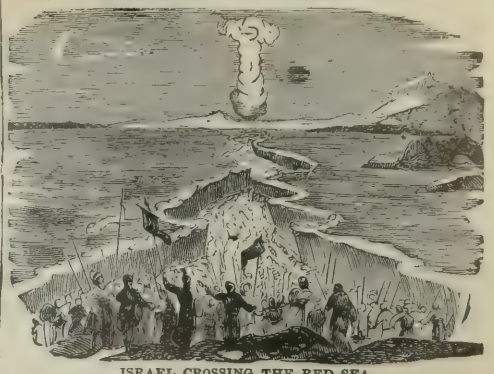
HEBREW PRIESTS.

Raven, "to be black." This bird was not allowed as food (Lev. xi. 15). Ravens were the means of supporting the prophet Elijah (1 K. xvii. 4, 6). They are mentioned as instances of God's protecting love and goodness (Job. xxxviii. 41, Luke xii. 24, Ps. cxlvii. 9).

Razor. The practice of shaving the head after a vow must have created a necessity for a barber (Num. vi. 9, 18, viii. 7; Judg. xiii. 5; Acts xviii. 18). The instruments were probably the razor, the basin, the mirror, and scissors (see 2 Sam. xiv. 26). Like the Levites, the Egyptian priests were accustomed to shave their whole bodies.

OLD WELL AT JABNEEL.

Re'ba, one of the five kings of the Midianites slain by the children of Israel (Num. xxxi. 8; Josh. xiii. 21).



Rebĕc'ca. The Greek form of the name REBEKAH (Rom. ix. 10 only).

PRIESTS SOUNDING TRUMPETS

Rebĕk'ah, daughter of Bethuel (Gen. xxii. 23) and sister of Laban, married to Isaac, her father's cousin. She is first presented in Gen. xxiv. For nineteen years she was childless; then Esau and Jacob were born. When Isaac was driven by a famine into the country of the Philistines, Rebekah's beauty became a source of danger to her husband. It has been conjectured that she died during Jacob's sojourn in Padan-aram.

Re'chab (rider). 1. One of the two "captains of bands," whom Ishbosheth took into his service, and who conspired to murder him (2 Sam. iv. 2). 2. The father or ancestor of Jehonadab (2 K. x. 15, 23; 1 Chr. ii. 55; Jer. xxxv. 6–19). From this Rechab the tribe derived their name.

ISRAEL CROSSING THE RED SEA.

Recorder, an officer of high rank in the Jewish state. In David's court the recorder appears among high officers (2 Sam. viii. 16, xx. 24; 1 Chr. xviii. 15). In Solomon's, he is coupled with the three secretaries, and probably is their president (1 K. iv. 3; comp. 2 K. xviii. 18, 37; 2 Chr. xxxiv. 8).

Red Sea. By the Israelites called "the sea." In extreme length the Red Sea stretches from the straits of Bab el-Mendeb to the modern head of the Gulf of Suez. Its greatest width may be stated roughly at about 200 geographical miles. The passage of the Red Sea was the crisis of the Exodus. The importance of this event is shown by the manner in which spoken of in the O. T. written in later times. It is the chief fact of Jewish history.

Reed. Under this name may be noticed: 1. Agmon occurs Job xl. 26. An Egyptian plant; some aquatic reed-like plant. 2. Gome, "rush" and "bulrush," denotes the celebrated paper-reed of the ancients. The papyrus plant has an angular stem from 3 to 6 feet high, though occasionally it grows to the height of 14 feet; it has no leaves. 3. 'Aroth, "paper-reed" in Is. xix. 7; but there is not the slightest authority for this. 4. Kaneh, the generic name of a reed of any kind; perhaps the measuring-reed was this plant.

Refiner. The refiner's art was essential to the working of the precious metals. The instruments required by the refiner were a crucible or furnace, and a bellows or blow-pipe. The workman sat at his work (Mal. iii. 3).

JEWISH HIGH-PRIEST.

Rēhobō'am, son of Solomon, by the Ammonite princess Naamah (1 K. xiv. 21, 31), and his successor (1 K. xi. 43). Rejecting the advice of the elders to conciliate the people at the beginning of his reign, he caused the formidable song of insurrection to be heard among the Ten tribes. He died B. C. 958, after a reign of 17 years, having ascended the throne B. C. 975, at the age of 41 (1 K. xiv. 21; 2 Chr. xii. 13).

Rehō'both. 1. The third of the series of wells dug by Isaac (Gen. xxvi. 22). 2. One of the four cities built by Asshur. 3. The city of one of the early kings of the Edomites (Gen. xxxvi. 37; 1 Chr. i. 48).

CITY OF REFUGE.

Reins, i. e. kidneys, from the Latin renes. In the ancient system of physiology the kidneys were believed to be the seat of longing.

Rem'phan (Acts vii. 43) and Chiun (Am. v. 26), supposed to be names of an idol worshipped by the Israelites in the wilderness. The opinion seems to be that Chiun was a Hebrew or Semitic name, and Remphan an Egyptian equivalent substituted by the LXX.

Rĕph'aïm, The Valley of, "the valley of the giants." The scene of some of David's most remarkable adventures. He twice encountered the Philistines there. It was near Bethlehem.

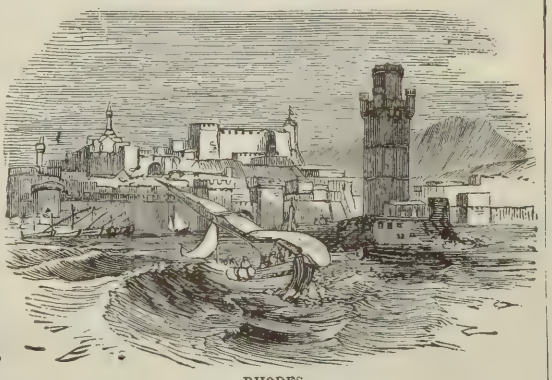
Rĕph'idĭm (Ex. xvii. 1, 8; xix. 2). "Rests" or "stays;" the place lies in the march of the Israelites from Egypt to Sinai.

Reu'ben (Behold a son). Jacob's first-born child (Gen. xxix. 32), the son of Leah. To him alone the preservation of Joseph's life appears due.

ROMAN CITIZENS.

Of the repulsive crime which mars his history, and which turned the blessing of his dying father into a curse, we know from the Scriptures only the fact (Gen. xxxv. 22). At the time of the migration into Egypt, Reuben's sons were four (Gen. xlvi. 9; 1 Chr. v. 3). The census at Mount Sinai (Num. i. 20, 21, ii. 11) shows the numbers of the tribe were 46,500 men fit for warlike service.

Reu'el. 1. One of the sons of Esau, by his wife Bashemath, sister of Ishmael (Gen. xxxvi. 4, 10, 13, 17; 1 Chr. i. 35, 37). 2. One of the names of Moses' father-in-law (Ex. ii. 13).



Reu'mah, the concubine of Nahor, Abraham's brother (Gen. xxii. 24).

Revelation of St. John, the last book of the N. T. It is often called the Apocalypse, which is its title in Greek, signifying "Revelation." The evidence adduced in support of his being the author consists of (1) the assertions of the author, and (2) historical tradition. The date of the Revelation is given by the great majority of critics as A. D. 95–97. Eusebius records that, in the persecution under Domitian, John the Apostle and Evangelist was banished to the island Patmos. Modern interpreters are generally placed in three great divisions. a. The Historical or Continuous expositors, in whose opinion the Revelation is a progressive history. b. The Praeterist expositors, who are of opinion that the Revelation has been almost, or altogether, fulfilled. c. The Futurist expositors, who believe that the whole book, excepting perhaps the first three chapters, refers to events yet to come.

Re'zin, king of Damascus. He attacked Jotham (2 K. xv. 37); but his chief war was with Ahaz, whose territories he invaded with Pekah (about B. C. 741). He was attacked, defeated, and slain by Tiglath-Pileser II., king of Assyria.

Re'zon, son of Eliada, a Syrian, who at the head of a band of freebooters set up a petty kingdom at Damascus (1 K. xi. 23).

Rhe'gĭum, an Italian town on the Bruttian coast, occurs in the account of St. Paul's voyage to Puteoli, after the shipwreck (Acts xxviii. 13). The figures on its coins are the very "twin brothers" which gave the name to St. Paul's ship.

RHODES

Rho'da, the maid who announced Peter's arrival at the door of Mary's house after his miraculous release (Acts xii. 13).

Rhodes. St. Paul touched at this island on his return from the third missionary journey (Acts xxi. 1). Rhodes is at the S. W. extremity of Asia Minor. Its position has had much to do with its history.

Rib'lah. Riblah in the land of Hamath, a place between Palestine and Babylonia. Here Nebuchadnezzar waited (Jer. xxxix. 5, 6, lii. 9, 10, 26, 27; 2 K. xxv. 6, 20, 21). Pharaoh-Necho returned to Riblah and summoned Jehoahaz from Jerusalem before him (2 K. xxiii. 33). This Riblah still retains its ancient name.

Riddle. "To bend off," "to twist" (Judg. xiv. 12–19), artifice (Dan. viii. 23), a proverb (Prov. i. 6), a song (Ps. xlix. 4, lxxviii. 2), an oracle (Num. xii. 8), a parable (Ez. xvii. 2), and any wise or intricate sentence (Ps. xciv. 4; Hab. ii. 6, &c.). The riddles the queen of Sheba came to ask of Solomon (1 K. x. 1; 2 Chr. ix. 1) were "hard questions." Solomon is said to have been fond of riddles.

ROMAN EXECUTIONERS.

Rim'mon (pomegranate) the name of several towns, probably so called from producing pomegranates.

Rim'mon, a deity worshipped by the Syrians of Damascus, where there was a temple or house of Rimmon (2 K. v. 18). Perhaps the abbreviated form of Hadad-Rimmon, Hadad being the sun-god of the Syrians.

Ring. The ring was an indispensable article of a Hebrew's attire, inasmuch as it contained his signet. It was the symbol of authority (Gen. xli. 42; Esth. iii. 10). The signet-ring was worn on the right hand (Jer. xxii. 24). We conclude from Ex. xxviii. 11 that the rings contained a stone engraven with a device, or owner's name. The custom appears among the Jews of the Apostolic age (James ii. 2).

River. With the exception of the Jordan and the Litany, the streams of the Holy Land are either dried up in summer, or else reduced to very small streamlets.

ROMAN CENTURION.

ROMAN GALLEY.

River of Egypt. 1. The Nile (Gen. xv. 18). [NILE.] 2. A desert stream on the border of Egypt.

Riz'pah, concubine to king Saul, and mother of his two sons, Armoni and Mephibosheth. After the death of Saul Rizpah accompanied the royal family to Mahanaim (2 Sam. iii. 7). We hear nothing more of Rizpah till the tragic story in 2 Sam. xxi. 8–11.

EGYPTIAN LADY'S EMBROIDERED ROBE.

Roe, Roebuck. The Hebrew words denote some species of antelope. The gazelle was allowed as food (Deut. xii. 15, 22, &c.); was very fleet of foot (2 Sam. ii. 18; 1 Chr. xii. 8); was hunted (Is. xiii. 14; Prov. vi. 5); was celebrated for its loveliness (Cant. ii. 9, 17, viii. 14).

Roge'lim, the residence of Barzillai the Gileadite (2 Sam. xvii. 27, xix. 31), east of the Jordan.

Roll. A book in ancient times consisted of a single long strip of paper or parchment, which was kept rolled up on a stick, and unrolled to read. It was usually written on one side. Tho term in Is. viii. 1, more correctly means tablet.

Roman Empire. The first historic mention of Rome in the Bible is in 1 Macc. i. 10. The population of the Empire in the time of Augustus has been calculated at 85,000,000. Augustus divided the provinces into two classes: (1.) Imperial; (2.) Senatorial. The N. T. writers designate the governors of Senatorial provinces proconsuls (Acts xiii. 7, xviii. 12, xix. 38). For the governor of an Imperial province, the word Governor is used. The chief prophetic notices of the Roman Empire are in Daniel. According to some, the Romans are intended in Deut. xxviii. 49-57.

Romans, Epistle to the. The Epistle was written from Corinth during St. Paul's third missionary journey. It is probable St. Paul addressed a mixed Church of Jews and Gentiles. It is the summary of what St. Paul had written before, the result of his dealing with the two antagonistic forms of error, the gathering together of the fragmentary teaching in the Corinthian and Galatian letters.

Rome, the famous capital of the ancient world, is on the Tiber at a distance of about 15 miles from .ts mouth. Rome is mentioned in the books of Maccabees and in the N. T., viz., the Acts, the Epistle to the Romans, and the 2d Epistle to Timothy. It is chiefly with St. Paul's history that Rome comes before us. Five of his Epistles were in all probability written from Rome. It is universally believed that he suffered martyrdom there. Christianity may have been introduced into the city not long after the Pentecost by the "strangers of Rome," who were then at Jerusalem (Acts ii. 10). There were many Christians at Rome before St. Paul visited the city (Rom. i. 8, 13, 15, xv. 20).

Roof. [HOUSE.]

Room. This word, in Matt. xxiii. 6; Mark xii. 39; Luke xiv. 7, 8, xx. 46, signifies the highest place round the table—the "uppermost seat," as in Luke xi. 43.

Rose (Cant. ii. 1; Is. xxv. 1). Most probably the narcissus is intended. The rose is referred to in Ecclus. xxiv. 14 (comp. also ch. l. 8; xxxix. 13; Wisd. ii. 8). Roses are greatly prized in the East.

Rŏsh (Ez. xxxviii. 2, 3, xxxix. 1). "Magog the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal," o ght to run, "Magog the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal." The meaning is, that Magog is the head of the three great Scythian tribes, of which "Rosh" is thus the first. By Rosh it apparently meant the tribe on the north of the Taurus, and in this we have the first trace of the RUSS or RUSSIAN nation.

Rosin. Properly "naphtha," as in the LXX. and Vulg.

Rubies. Some suppose "coral" to be intended. Others contend for pearls, and explain the "ruddiness" alluded to by supposing that the original signifies merely a reddish tinge.

Rue (Luke xi. 42). Doubtless the common Ruta graveolens a shrubby plant about 2 feet high, of strong medicinal virtues.

Ru'fus, mentioned in Mark xv. 21 with Alexander, as a son of Simon the Cyrenian (Luke xxiii. 26). Again, in Rom. xvi. 13, Paul salutes a Rufus as "elect in the Lord."

Rush. [REED.]

Ruth. A Moabitish woman, the wife, first of Mahlon, secondly, of Boaz; the ancestress of David and of Christ, and one of the four women named by St. Matthew in the genealogy of Christ. Their son, Obed, was the father of Jessee, the father of David.

ROMAN LICTORS WITH RODS AND SCOURGES.

Ruth, Book of. The main object is to give an account of David's ancestors. Its date and author are quite uncertain. It is probable that the books of Judges, Ruth, Samuel, and Kings, originally formed but one work.

Rye, Ex. ix. 32; Is. xxviii. 25; in the latter the margin reads "spelt." In Ez. iv. 9, the text has "fitches," and the margin "rie." It is probable that "spelt" is intended. It differs but slightly from our common wheat.

S

Săbaŏth, The Lord of (Rom. ix. 29; James v. 4). Sabaoth is the Greek form of the Hebrew word tsebaoth, "armies," and is translated in the O. T. by "Lord of Hosts," "Lord God of Hosts."

Sabbath (shabbath, "a day of rest"). The name is applied to divers great festivals, but principally to the seventh day of the week. The consecration of the Sabbath was coeval with the Creation. The Sabbath was the key-note to a scale of Sabbatical observance—consisting of itself, the seventh month, the seventh year, and the year of Jubilee. One great aim of the Sabbath-day and the Sabbatical year was to debar the Hebrew from the thought of absolute ownership of anything. That the perversion of the Sabbath had become very general in our Saviour's time is apparent from Matt. xii. 1-15; Mark iii. 2; Luke vi. 1-5, xiii. 10-17; John v. 2-18, vii. 23, ix. 1-34. Among the Christians the "Lord's Day"—the first day of the week—gradually took the place of the Jewish Sabbath.

ROMAN GUARDS.

Sabbath-day's Journey (Acts i. 12). Moses enjoined every man to "abide in his place" (Ex.

xvi. 29). But as some departure was unavoidable, it was necessary to determine the allowable amount, which was fixed at about six furlongs, from the wall of the city.

ROMAN TRIUMPHAL PROCESSION

Sabbatical Year. As each seventh day and seventh month were holy, so was each seventh year, by the Mosaic code. We first encounter this law in Ex. xxiii. 10, 11. We next meet with the enactment in Lev. xxv. 2–7, and finally in Deut. xv. At the completion of a week of Sabbatical years, the Sabbatical scale received its completion in the year of Jubilee.

Sackbut (Dan. iii. 5, 7, 10, 15), the rendering of the Chaldee sabbeca. The sackbut was a wind-instrument.

Sackcloth, a coarse texture, of a dark color, made of goat's-hair (Is. l. 3; Rev. vi. 12), and resembling the cilicium of the Romans. It was used for sacks, and for rough garments used by mourners.

Sacrifice. The peculiar features of each kind of sacrifice are under their respective heads. The Law of Leviticus now unfolds distinctly the various forms of sacrifice: (a.) The burnt-offering. SELF-DEDICATORY. (b.) The meat-offering (unbloody); the peace-offering (bloody). EUCHARISTIC. (c.) The sin-offering; the trespass-offering. EXPIATORY.—To these may be added, (d.) The incense offered after sacrifice in the Holy Place.

SACRIFICE.

ANCIENT RUINS.

Sad'ducees (Matt. iii. 7, xvi. 1, 6, 11, 12, xxii. 23, 34; Mark xii. 18; Luke xx. 27; Acts iv. 1, v. 17, xxiii. 6, 7, 8), a religious party among the Jews at the time of Christ, who deemed the written law alone obligatory. The distinguishing doctrine of the Sadducees was the denial of man's resurrection after death.

Saffron (Cant. iv. 14). Saffron has from the earliest times been in high esteem as a perfume. The word is derived from the Arabic Zafran, "yellow."

Sa'la. SALAH, or SHELAH, the father of Eber (Luke iii. 35).

Sal'amis, a city at the east end of the island of Cyprus, and visited by Paul and Barnabas.

Salā'thiel (I have asked of God), son of Neri, and father of Zorobabel, according to Luke iii. 27. From his insertion, in 1 Chr. and St. Matthew's Gospel, after the childless Jechonias, we infer that, on the failure of Solomon's line, he was the next heir to the throne.

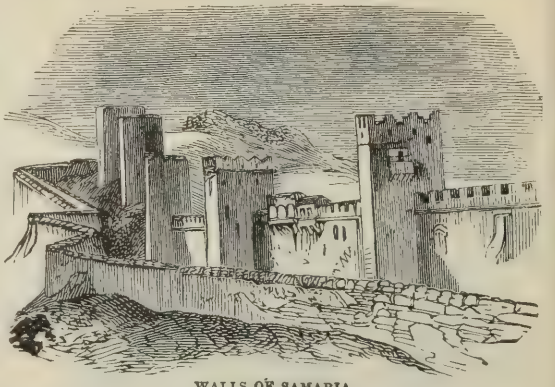
Sa'lem (peace). The place of which Melchizedek was king (Gen. xiv. 18; Heb. vii. 1, 2). It is agreed on all hands that Salem is employed for Jerusalem.

Sa'lim, a place named (John iii. 23) to denote the situation of Aenon, the scene of St. John's last baptisms. The name has been discovered six English miles south of Beisan (Scythopolis), and two miles west of the Jordan.

Sal'ma, or Sal'mon (Ruth iv. 20, 21; 1 Chr. ii. 11, 51, 54; Matt. i. 4, 5; Luke iii. 32). Son of Nahshon, and father of Boaz, the husband of Ruth. On the entrance into Canaan, Salmon took Rahab of Jericho to be his wife, and from this union sprang the Christ.

Sal'mon, a hill near Shechem, on which Abimelech and his followers cut down the boughs with which they set the tower of Shechem on fire (Judg. ix. 48).



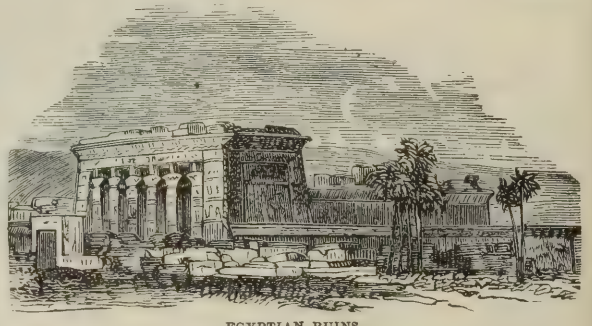
ANCIENT ASSYRIAN SANDALS.

Salmo'ne, the east point of the island of CRETE (Acts xxvii. 7).

Salo'me. 1. The wife of Zebedee, as appears from comparing Matt. xxvii. 56 with Mark xv. 40. It is the opinion of modern critics that she was the sister of Mary, the mother of Jesus (John xix. 25. The only events recorded of Salome are, Matt. xx. 20, Mark xv. 40, and Mark xvi. 1. 2. The daughter of Herodias by her first husband, Herod Philip (Matt. xiv. 6).

Salt. Salt to the Hebrews was an appetizing condiment, a valuable antidote to the effects of the heat of climate on animal food, and entering largely into their religious services (Lev. ii. 13). It symbolized hospitality; as an antiseptic, durability, fidelity, and purity.

Salt, City of, the fifth of the six cities of Judah in the "wilderness" (Josh xv. 62).



WALLS OF SAMARIA.

Salt Sea, or Dead Sea. [SEA, THE SALT.]

Salt, Valley of, a valley in which occurred two memorable victories. 1. That of David over the Edomites (2 Sam. viii. 13; 1 Chr. xviii. 12). 2. That of Amaziah (2 K. xiv. 7; 2 Chr. xxv. 11). Perhaps the open plain at the lower end of the Dead Sea.

Salutation. Salutation at meeting consisted of various expressions of blessing (Ruth ii. 4). The salutation at parting consisted originally of a simple blessing, but in later times in the form "Go in peace," or rather "Farewell" (1 Sam. i. 17, xx. 42; 2 Sam. xv. 9).

Samā'ria, a city of Palestine. From B. C. 925, Samaria retained its dignity as the capital of the ten tribes, and the name is given to the northern kingdom as well as the city. It must have been a place of great strength. St. Jerome asserts that Sebaste, which he identifies with Samaria, was the place in which St. John the Baptist suffered death. He also makes it the burial-place of the prophets Elisha and Obadiah.

Samar'itans. The word Samaritan must have denoted every one subject to the king of the northern capital. But it became contracted. The traditional hatred in which the Jew held the Samaritan is expressed in Ecclus. l. 25, 26. The Samaritans of our Lord's day were a people distinct from the Jews, though lying in their midst; a people preserving their identity, though seven centuries had rolled away since brought from Assyria by Esarhaddon.

Samăritan Pentateuch, a Recension of the Hebrew Text of the Mosaic Law, in use with the Samaritans, and written in the ancient Hebrew, or so-called Samaritan character.

VULTURE.

Sa'mos, a Greek island off that part of Asia Minor where IONIA touches CARIA. Samos comes before our notice in Acts xx. 15.

Sămothrā'cia, an island in the account of St. Paul's first voyage to Europe (Acts xvi. 11).

Sam'son, "little sun," or "sun-like." The circumstances of his birth are in Judg. xiii.; and the three following chapters are devoted to his life and exploits. Samson takes his place (1.) as a judge—an office which he filled for twenty years (Judg. xv. 20, xvi. 31); (2.) as a Nazarite (Judg. xiii. 5, xvi. 17); and (3.) as one endowed with supernatural power by the Spirit of the Lord (Judg. xiii. 25, xiv. 6, 19, xv. 14).

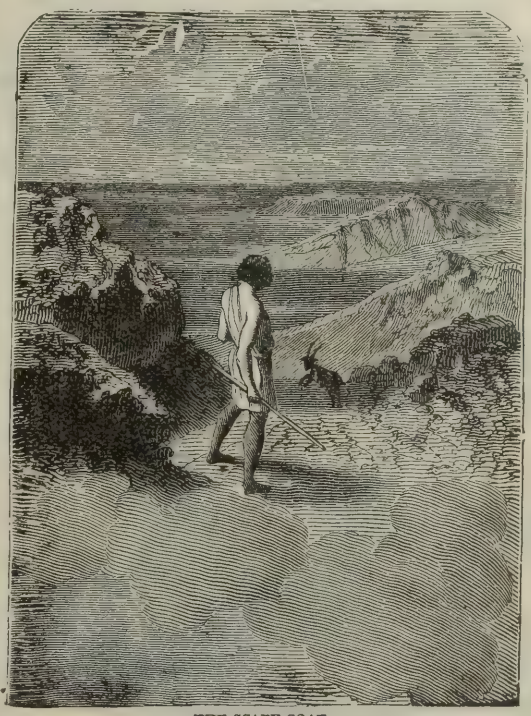
Sam'uel was the son of Elkanah and Hannah or Anna, and was born at Ramathaim-Zophim. The mother of Samuel is described as a prophetess in her gifts (1 Sam. ii. 1). She sought from God the gift of the child, and her prayer was heard. As soon as he was weaned, she brought him to the Tabernacle at Shiloh, and there solemnly consecrated him. From this time the child "ministered unto the Lord before Eli." He seems to have slept within the Holiest Place, and his special duty was to put out the sacred candlestick, and to open the doors at sunrise. His first prophetic call is in Sam. iii. 1–18. His presence at Mizpah, his elevation, his marriage, and his life are all given in the first book of Samuel.

Samuel, Books of. In the Hebrew MSS. these form one book. They commence with the history of Eli and Samuel, and contain the establishment of the Hebrew monarchy and the reigns of Saul and David. Although the authorship cannot be ascertained, it appears that it must have been composed subsequent to the secession of the Ten Tribes (B. C. 975).

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

Sanbal'lat, a Moabite of Horonaim (Neh. ii. 10, 19, xiii. 28). He held some command in Samaria (Neh. iv. 2).

Sandal, a sole attached to the foot by thongs. Sandals were worn by all classes in Palestine. They were dispensed with in-doors. During mealtimes the feet were uncovered. To carry or unloose a person's sandal was a menial office. The use of the shoe in the transfer of property is noticed in Ruth iv. 7, 8.



San'hedrim, the supreme council of the Jewish people in the time of Christ and earlier. We gather that it consisted of chief priests, elders, scribes, and lawyers (Matt. xxvi. 57, 59; Mark xv. 1; Luke xxii. 66; Acts v. 21). The number of members is usually given as 71. The president was styled Nasi.

Sapphi'ra. [ANANIAS.]

Săp'phire, a precious stone of a bright blue color, the second in the second row of the high priest's breastplate (Ex. xxviii. 18). The sapphire of the ancients was not our gem of that name, but our Lapis lazuli.

Sa'ra. [SARAH.]

Sa'rah. The wife of Abraham and mother of Isaac. Her name is first introduced in Gen. xi. 29. In Gen. xx. 12, Abraham speaks of her as "his sister." The change of her name from "Sarai" to "Sarah" was made at the time Abram's name was changed to Abraham. "Sarah" signifies "princess." She died at Hebron at the age of 127 years, 28 years before her husband, and was buried in the cave of Machpelah.

THE SCAPE-GOAT.

Sā'rāi, the original name of Sarah, the wife of Abraham.

Sar'amel, the place at which the high-priesthood was conferred upon Simon Maccabaeus (1 Macc. xiv. 28). Probably some part of Jerusalem Sărdĭne, Sardius, the first stone in the first row of the high-priest's breastplate. The sard is a superior variety of agate.

Sar'dis, a city just below the range of Tmolus. It was the ancient residence of the kings of Lydia.

Sardonyx (Rev. xxi. 20), "a white opaque layer, superimposed upon a red transparent stratum of the true red sard."

SAMSON CARRYING AWAY THE GATES OF GAZA.

Sarep'ta. [ZAREPHATH.]

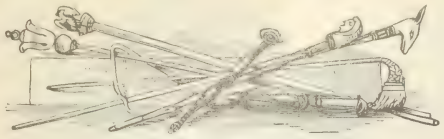
Sar'gon, one of the greatest of the Assyrian kings (Is. xx. 1). He was Sennacherib's father, and his immediate predecessor, and reigned from B. C. 721 to 702, and seems to have been a usurper. He was a great and successful warrior.

Sa'ron, the district in which Lydda stood (Acts ix. 35); the SHARON of the O. T. [SHARON.]

Sa'ruch. SERUG the son of Reu (Luke iii. 35).

EGYPTIAN SANDALS.

Sa'tan. The word itself, the Hebrew satan, is simply an "adversary." The personal existence of a Spirit of Evil is clearly revealed in Scripture. His direct influence over the soul is that of a powerful and evil nature on those in whom lurks the germ of the same evil. Besides this, we learn that Satan is the leader of a host of evil spirits or angels who share his evil work, and for whom the "everlasting fire is prepared" (Matt. xxv. 41). On the subject of Possession, see DEMONIACS.



Satyrs (Is. xiii. 21, xxxiv. 14). The Hebrew word signifies "hairy" or "rough." In the passages cited it probably refers to demons of woods and deserts, places, half men and half goats (comp. Lev. xvii. 7; 2 Chr. xi. 15).

ANCIENT EASTERN SCRIBES.

Saul, more accurately SHAUL. 1. Saul of Rehoboth, one of the early kings of Edom (Gen.

xxxvi. 37, 38; 1 Chr. i. 48). 2. The first king of Israel, the son of Kish of the tribe of Benjamin. He was remarkable for his strength and activity (2 Sam. i. 23) and was of gigantic stature. His father, Kish, was a powerful and wealthy chief. On the mountains Saul met with Samuel for the first time. A Divine intimation indicated the approach of the youthful Benjamite. At daybreak of the following day, Samuel poured over Saul's head the consecrated oil, and announced to him his future office (ix. 25). The subsequent choice, with the life and death of Saul, are given in 1 Sam. 3. The Jewish name of ST. PAUL.

SANDALS REMOVED AT THE DOOR.

Saw. Egyptian saws were single handed. We read of sawn stones used in the Temple (1 K. vii. 9). The saws "under" or "in" which David is said to have placed his captives were of iron.

Sceptre originally meant a rod or staff. The allusions to it are of a metaphorical character. The sceptre of the Persian monarch is described as "golden," i. e. probably of massive gold (Esth. iv. 11).

Sce'va, a Jew at Ephesus at the time of St. Paul's second visit (Acts xix. 14–16). He is described as a "high-priest."

ANCIENT JEWISH SCRIBES.

Scorpion (Deut. viii. 15; Ez. ii. 6; Luke x. 19. xi. 12; Rev. ix. 3, 10). The wild recesses of Sinai is especially alluded to as inhabited by scorpions at the time of the Exodus. Scorpions are generally found in dry and in dark places, chiefly in warm climates. They are carnivorous, and move in a threatening attitude, with tail elevated. In hot climates the sting often occasions suffering, and sometimes alarming symptoms.

Scourging. The punishment of scourging was prescribed by the Law (Lev. xix. 20). The instrument in ancient Egypt was the stick, applied to the soles of the feet. Under the Roman method the culprit was stripped, stretched with cords on a frame, and beaten with rods.

Screech-owl. [OWL.]

Scribes. Three meanings are given: 1. To write; 2. To set in order; 3. To count. The word has been referred to each of these. The special training for a Scribe began about the age of thirteen, in the school of some famous Rabbi. Master and scholars met, the former sitting on a high chair, the elder pupils on a lower bench, the younger on the ground, both literally "at his feet." The education was chiefly catechetical (Luke ii). For the Scribes there were the best places at feasts, the chief seats in synagogues (Matt. xxiii. 6; Luke xiv. 7).

Scrip. The Hebrew appears in 1 Sam. xvii. 40, as a synonyme for the bag in which the shepherds of Palestine carried food for necessaries.

Scripture. In the earlier books we read of the Law, the Book of the Law. The thought of the Scripture as a whole first appears in 2 Chr. xxx. 5, 18 ("as it was written," A. V.).

Scyth'ian occurs in Col. iii. 11 as a term for rude, ignorant, degraded. Scythians dwelt mostly north of the Black Sea and Caspian, and were regarded extremely low in intelligence and civilization.

SAUL, THE KING.

Sea, used in Scripture to denote any great collection of waters, as the river Nile and Euphrates.

Sea, Molten. Solomon caused a laver to be cast which from its size was called a sea. It was made partly or wholly of brass, or copper. It is said to have been capable of containing 2000, or, according to 2 Chr. iv. 5, 3000 baths.

Sea, The Salt. The most ancient name for the Dead Sea. Another name is, the SEA OF THE ARABAH (A. V. "sea of the plain") in Deut. iv. 49; 2 K. xiv. 25. In the prophets (Joel ii. 20; Ezek. xlvii. 18) the EAST SEA. In Ez. xlvii. 8, it is styled THE SEA. In the Talmudical books it is called both the "Sea of Salt," and "Sea of Sodom." The name "Dead Sea" appears first used in Greek. The Arabic name is the "Sea of Lot." The so-called DEAD SEA is the final receptacle of the river Jordan. Its water surface is 46 English miles long; its greatest width about 10½ miles. Its depth, at about one-third of its length from the north end, is 1308 feet. The statements that no living creature could exist on the shores, or bird fly across its surface, are disproved.

Seal. The use of some method of sealing is of remote antiquity. In Egypt at a very early period were engraved stones. In many cases the seal consisted of a lump of clay, impressed with the seal and attached to the document. Engraved signets were in use among the Hebrews in early times (Ex. xxviii. 11, 36, xxxix. 6).

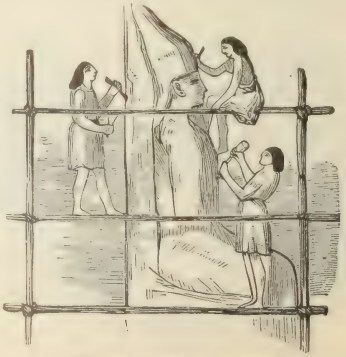
Se'bat. [MONTH.]

Secün'dus, a Thessalonian who went with the Apostle Paul from Corinth as far as Asia (Acts xx. 4).

Seer. [PROPHET.]



SERPENT CHARMING.

Se'ir (hairy, shaggy). We have both "land of Seir" (Gen. xxxii. 3, xxxvi. 30), and "Mount Seir" (Gen. xiv. 6). It is the original name of the mountain ridge along the east side of the valley of Arabah, from the Dead Sea to the Elanitic Gulf.

Se'irăth, the place to which Ehud fled after his murder of Eglon (Judg. iii. 26, 27). It was in "Mount Ephraim" (27).

Se'la and Se'lah, 2 K. xiv. 7; Is. xvi. 1; rendered "the rock" in the A. V. in Judg. i. 36, 2 Chr. xxv. 12, Obad. 3. Probably the city later known as Petra. It was in the midst of Mount Seir.

EASTERN SCULPTORS AT WORK.

Se'lah. This word occurs seventy-one times in the Psalms, and three times in Habakkuk. It is probably a term which had a meaning in the musical nomenclature of the Hebrews.

ASSYRIAN SCULPTURE.

Seleu'cia, near the mouth of the Orontes, the seaport of Antioch. The distance between the two towns was about 16 miles. We are told that St. Paul, with Barnabas, sailed from Seleucia (Acts xiii. 4).

Sem. Shem the patriarch (Luke iii. 36).

Semitic Languages. [Shemitic Languages; Hebrew.]

Se'nir. This name occurs in 1 Chr. v. 23; 'Ez. xxvii. 5. It is the Amorite name for a portion of the mountain which the Hebrews called Hermon, and the Phoenicians Sirion.

Sennache'rib was the son and successor of Sargon. Sennacherib mounted the throne B. C. 702. In his third year (B. C. 700) he made war on Egypt, and finally marched against Hezekiah, king of Judah. He sent messengers to Hezekiah (2 K. xviii. 17), and wrote him a threatening letter (2 K. xix. 14). In one night the Assyrians lost 185,000 men! Sennacherib reigned 22 years, and was succeeded by Esarhaddon, B. C. 680. His sons smote him with the sword (2 K. xix. 37; Is. xxxvii. 38).

Sĕpharvā'im (2 K. xix. 13; Is. xxxvii. 13, comp. 2 K. xviii. 34), the famous town of Sippara, on the Euphrates above Babylon.

Sephe'la, the Greek form of has-Shefelch, the native name for the southern division of the district between the central highlands of the Holy Land and the Mediterranean. The Shefelah was one of the most productive regions of the Holy Land. It was in ancient times the cornfield of Syria.

Sĕp'tuagint. The Septuagint or Greek version of the Old Testament, owed its origin to the same cause as the Targums. The Jews of Alexandria had less knowledge of Hebrew than their brethren in Palestine; their familiar language was Alexandrian Greek, hence would arise in time an entire Greek version. The Version was made at Alexandria. It was begun about 280 B. C. The Law (Pentateuch) was translated at first. The Septuagint version was highly esteemed by the Hellenistic Jews before the coming of Christ.

ASSYRIAN SCULPTURE.

Sepulchre. [Burial.]

Serai'ah. 1. King's scribe or secretary in the reign of David (2 Sam. viii. 17). 2. The high-priest in the reign of Zedekiah (2 K. xxv. 18).

Ser'aphim, an order of celestial beings, whom Isaiah beheld in vision standing above Jehovah as He sat upon His throne (Is. vi. 2).

Ser'gius Pau'lus was proconsul of Cyprus when Paul visited that island with Barnabas (Acts xiii. 7, sq.). He yielded to the evidence of truth.

Serpent. The Heb. Nachash is the generic name of any serpent. The art of taming and charming serpents is alluded to in Ps. lviii. 5, Eccl. x. 11, Jer. viii. 17, and intimated by St. James (iii. 7). Serpents used for this purpose, in Africa and India, are the hooded snakes and horned Cerastes. The snake that fastened on St. Paul's hand when he was at Melita (Acts xxviii. 3) was probably the common viper.

Se'rug, great-grandfather of Abraham. His age is given as 230 years (Gen. xi. 20–23).

Servant. [Slave.]

Seth (Gen. iv. 25, v. 3; 1 Chr. i. 1), the third son of Adam, and father of Enos. The signification of his name is "appointed" or "put" in the place of the murdered Abel.

Seven. The frequent recurrence of certain numbers in sacred literature is obvious. This is true of the numbers three, four, seven, twelve, and forty; but seven so far surpasses the rest that it may fairly be termed the representative symbolic number. The Sabbath, being the seventh day, suggested the adoption of seven as the coefficient, so to say, for the appointment of all sacred periods.

SCULPTURE FROM NINEVAH.

Shad'dai, an ancient name of God, rendered "Almighty." By El-Shaddai, God was known to the patriarchs (Gen. xvii. 1, xxviii. 3). The idea attaching to the name is that of strength and power.

Shal'lum. 1. Fifteenth king of Israel, who conspired against Zechariah, son of Jeroboam II., killed him, and brought the dynasty of Jehu to a close, B. C. 770. After reigning for a month he was dethroned and killed by Menahem (2 K. xv. 10–14). 2. The husband of Huldah the prophetess (2 K. xxii. 14). 3. Third son of Josiah king of Judah, known as Jehoahaz (1 Chr. iii. 15; Jer. xxii. 11).

EGYPTIAN SCULPTURE.

Shal'man. Shalmaneser, king of Assyria (Hos. x. 14).

Shalmane'ser, the Assyrian king who reigned before Sargon, and after Tiglath-pileser. Soon after his accession he led his forces into Palestine, where Hoshea had revolted (2 K. xvii. 3). In B. C. 723 Shalmaneser invaded Palestine the second time, and laid siege to Samaria.

Sham'gar, son of Anath, judge of Israel. Israel was in a depressed condition, and Shamgar was raised up to be a deliverer. With no arms but an ox-goad (Judg. iii. 31; 1 Sam. xiii. 21), he made a desperate assault upon the Philistines, and slew 600 of them.

Sham'mah. The third son of Jesse, and brother of David (1 Sam. xvi. 9, xvii. 13). Called also Shimea, Shimeah, and Shimma.

Sha'ron, a district of the Holy land (1 Chr. v. 16; Acts ix. 35, A. V. Saron). That broad, rich tract between the mountains of central Holy Land and the Mediterranean.

Sha'ronite, The. Shitrai, who had charge of the royal herds pastured in Sharon (1 Chr. xxvii. 29).

Sha'ul, the son of Simeon by a Canaanitish woman (Gen. xlvi. 10; 1 Chr. iv. 24).

Sha'veh, the Valley of, "the "Valley of the King" (Gen. xiv. 17), the site of a pillar set up by Absalom.

NINEVITISH SCULPTURE.

Shawm, a musical instrument resembling the clarionet.

Shearing-house, The, a place between Jezreel and Samaria, at which Jehu encountered forty-two members of the royal family of Judah, whom he slaughtered (2 K. x. 12, 14).

NINEVITISH SCULPTURE.

She'ar-ja'shub (lit. "a remnant shall return") the son of Isaiah (Is. vii. 3). The name had a mystical significance (Is. x. 20-22).

She'ba, the son of Bichri (2 Sam. xx. 1-22), the last chief of the Absalom insurrection. He is described as a "man of Belial." She-ba traversed Palestine, Joab following in pursuit. His head was finally secured by Joab (2 Sam. xx. 18).

She'bah, the well which gave its name to the city of Beersheba (Gen. xxvi. 33). [BEERSHEBA.]

Sheb'na, a person of high position in Hezekiah's court (Is. xxii. 15; 2 K. xix. 2).

She'chem (back or shoulder), an important city in Central Palestine. It lies in a valley, protected by Gerizim on the south, and Ebal on the north. The defilement of Dinah, Jacob's daughter, and the massacre by Simeon and Levi, are given in Gen. xxxiv. 1, sq. The oak under which Abraham worshipped survived to Jacob's time (Gen. xxxv. 1-4). It was here Joshua delivered his last counsels (Josh. xxiv. 1, 25). Here the ten tribes renounced the house of David (1 K. xii. 16). From the origin of the Samaritans, Shechem blends itself with this people. Shechem is the SYCHAR of John iv. 5, near which the Saviour conversed with the Samaritan woman at Jacob's Well. The Well of Jacob and the Tomb of Joseph are still shown in the neighborhood of the town. 2. A man of Manasseh, of the clan of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 31).

NINEVITISH SCULPTURE.

She'chemites, The. The family of Shechem, son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 31; comp. Josh. xvii. 2).

Shechi'nah. This term was used by the latter Jews, and borrowed by Christians to express the visible majesty of the Divine Presence. The term is first found in the Targums.

Sheep. The first mention of sheep occurs in Gen. iv. 2. They were used in the sacrificial offerings (Ex. xx. 24; 1 K. viii. 63; 2 Chr. xxix. 33). Sheep and lambs formed an important article of food (1 Sam. xxv. 18; 1 K. i. 19, &c.). The wool was used as clothing (Lev. xiii. 47; Job xxxi. 20, &c.). It is very striking to notice the immense numbers of sheep reared in Palestine in Biblical times. The common sheep of Syria and Palestine are the broad-tailed.

SEETHING A SHOULDER WITH FIRE OF COALS.

Sheep-gate, The, one of the gates of Jerusalem as rebuilt by Nehemiah (Neh. iii. 1, 32, xii. 39).

Sheep-market, The (John v. 2). We ought to supply "gate" (not "market"), meaning the gate in the preceding article.

Shĕkel. A shekel seen by Ramban A. D. 1210, gives the inscriptions as above, "the Shekel of Shekels," and "Jerusalem the Holy;" also gives the weight of about half an ounce. In early times shekels were known to the Jewish Rabbis with Samaritan inscriptions.

Shem, the eldest son of Noah (Gen. v. 32). He was 98 years old, married, and childless, at the time of the Flood. After it, he, with his father, brothers, sisters in-law, and wife, received the blessing of God (ix. 1). Two years afterwards he became the father of Arphaxyd (xi. 10). In the prophecy of Noah (ix. 25-27), the first blessing falls on Shem. He died at the age of 600 years. Modern scholars have given the name Shemitic or Semitic to the languages spoken by his descendants.

ANCIENT SCULPTURE.

Shĕmaī'ah, a prophet in the reign of Rehoboam. When the king had assembled 180,000 men to reconquer the northern kingdom, Shemaiah was commissioned to charge them not to war against their brethren (1 K. xii. 22; 2 Chr. xi. 2). He wrote a chronicle containing the events of Rehoboam's reign (2 Chr. xii. 15).

Shĕme'ber, king of Zeboim, and ally of the king of Sodom when attacked by Chedorlaomer (Gen. xiv. 2).

She'mer, owner of the hill on which Samaria was built (1 K. xvi. 24).

Shĕmī'da, a son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 32; Josh. xvii. 2).

Shemida'ites, The, the descendants of Shemida the son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 32).

Shem'inith. The title of Psalm vi. Either a certain air known as the eighth, or a certain key in which the Psalm was to be sung.

NINEVITISH SCULPTURE.

Shemitic Languages. 1. The expressions, "Shemitic family," and "Shemitic languages," are based, as is well known, on a reference to Gen. x. 21, seqq. A comparison of the Shemitic languages presents them as unevenly developed. The Arabic is the richest: but it would have been rivalled by the Hebrew had a career been vouchsafed equally long and favorable.

SEETHING VESSELS.

Shĕmu'el. SAMUEL the prophet (1 Chr. vi. 33).

She'pham, mentioned in Num. xxxiv. 10, 11. The ancient interpreters render the name by Apamea.

Shepherd. In a nomadic state of society every man is more or less a shepherd. The occupation of tending flocks was undertaken by the sons of wealthy chiefs (Gen. xxx. 29, ff., xxxvii. 12, ff.), and by their daughters (Gen. xxix. 6, ff.; Ex. ii. 19). The office of the Eastern shepherd was attended with much hardship, and even danger. The shepherd's equipment consisted of: a mantle, a scrip or wallet, a sling, and a staff. If at a distance from his home, he was provided with a light tent. The hatred of the Egyptians towards shepherds (Gen. xlvi. 34) may have been due to their contempt for the sheep, which appears to have been valued neither for food nor sacrifice.

NAZARETH, THE HOME OF CHRIST'S CHILDHOOD.

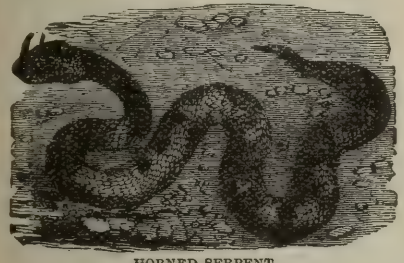
Shĕre'zer Properly "Sharezer;" one of the messengers in Zech. vii. 2.



She'shach (Jeremiah xxv. 36, li. 41), a synonyme either for Babylon or Babylonia.

Shesh'băz'zar, the Chaldean or Persian name given Zerubbabel, in Ezr. i.; 1 Esdr. ii.

Sheth. The patriarch SETH (1 Chr. i. 1).

She'va. The scribe or royal secretary of David (2 Sam. xx. 25).

Shew-bread (Ex. xxv. 30, xxxv. 13, xxxix. 36, &c.), literally "bread of the face" or "faces." Within the Ark it was directed that there should be a table of shittim wood, i. e. acacia, overlaid with pure gold, and "having a golden crown to the border." The further description will be found in Ex. xxv. 23–30.

Shib'bŏleth (Judg. xii. 6), the Hebrew word the Gileadites under Jephthah made use of at the passage of the Jordan. The Ephraimites in their dialect substituted for sh the simple sound s; and the Gileadites, regarding every one who failed to pronounce sh as an enemy, put him to death accordingly. The word has two meanings: 1st, an ear of corn; 2dly, a stream or flood.

Shield. The ordinary shield consisted of a framework of wood covered with leather. It was frequently cased with metal, either brass or copper. The surface of the shield was kept bright by the application of oil (Is. xxi. 5). The shield was worn on the left arm, attached by a strap.

Shigga'ion (Ps. vii. 1), a particular kind of Psalm, the specific character of which is now not known.

Shi'hor of Egypt. [SIHOR.]

Shil'lem. Son of Naphtali, ancestor of the Shillemites (Gen. xlvi. 24; Num. xxvi. 49).

Shilo'ah, The Waters of, a soft-flowing stream mentioned by Isaiah (viii. 6), better known as SILOAM—the only perennial spring of Jerusalem.

Shi'loh. Shiloh is used as the name of a person, in Gen. xlix. 10. Supposing the translation correct, the meaning of the word is Peaceable or Pacific, and the allusion is to the expected Messiah, who in Is. ix. 6 is called the Prince of Peace.

Shi'loh, a city of Ephraim. The ark of the covenant was kept at Shiloh from the last days of Joshua to the time of Samuel (Josh. xviii. 10, Judg. xviii. 31; 1 Sam. iv. 3). The ungodly conduct of the sons of Eli occasioned the loss of the ark, and Shiloh from that time sank into insignificance.

Shim'ea. 1. Son of David by Bathsheba (1 Chr. iii. 5). 2. The brother of David (1 Chr. xx. 7).

Shim'eath. An Ammonitess, one of the murderers of king Joash (2 K. xii. 21 [22]; 2 Chr. xxiv. 26).

Ship. The ship in which St. Paul was wrecked had 276 persons on board (Acts xxvii. 37), besides a cargo of wheat (ib. 10, 38); and all these seem taken on to Puteoli in another ship (xxviii. 11), which had its own crew and cargo. Ancient ships were steered by means of two paddle rudders. Two allusions to anchoring are found in the N. T. (Heb. vi. 19; Acts xxvii. 29). The rig of an ancient ship was simple and clumsy. Its great feature was one large mast, with one large square sail. To prevent starting of the planks, and foundering, cables or chains were provided to be put around the frame of the ship. These were called undergirders. With a fair wind an ancient ship would sail fully seven knots an hour.

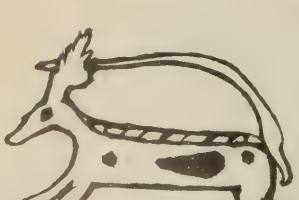
Shu'hite, frequent in Job as the epithet of Bildad. The indications point to a region bordering on Arabia.

Shu'lamite, The, Solomon's Song vi. 13. If Shulamite and Shunammite are equivalent, we may conjecture that the object of Solomon's passion was Abishag.

Shu'nammite, The, applied to two persons: Abishag, the nurse of king David (1 K. i. 3, 15, ii.



ANCIENT SEALS.

17, 21, 22), and the nameless hostess of Elisha (2 K. iv. 12, 25, 36).

Si'las, an eminent member of the early Christian Church, described under that name in the Acts, but as Silvanus in St. Paul's Epistles. He first appears in Acts xv. 22; as an inspired teacher, xv. 32. He appears to have been a Roman citizen (Acts. xvi. 37). His presence at Corinth is noticed in 2 Cor. i. 19;

JEWISH SYNAGOGUE.

1 Thess. i. 1; 2 Thess. i. 1). Whether he was the Silvanus of 1 Peter v. 12 is doubtful. A tradition represents Silas to have become bishop of Corinth.

Sil'la. The scene of the murder of king Joash (2 K. xii. 20). What or where Silla was is conjecture.

Silō'ah, The Pool of, properly "the Pool of Shelach" (Neh. iii. 15). [SILOAM.]

Silō'am (Shiloach, Is. viii. 6; Shelach, Neh. iii. 15; Siloam, John ix. 7, 11). Siloam is one of the few undisputed localities in the topography of Jerusalem. This pool is oblong; about 18 feet broad, and 19 feet deep; but it is never filled. The present pool is a ruin; its sides falling in; its pillars broken; its stair a fragment; its walls giving way; the edge of every stone worn round or sharp by time. This pool, the second, seems to have poured its waters into a third, before watering the royal gardens. This third is perhaps "Solomon's pool," or the "King's pool." Siloam is a sacred spot, even to the Mos'em; much more to the Jew.

ANCIENT SHIP.

Silō'am, Tower in (Luke xiii. 4). Of this we know nothing beyond these words of the Lord.

JEWISH SHEKEL.

Si'nai. Nearly in the centre of the peninsula which stretches between the horns of the Red Sea, lies a wedge of rocks rising to between 8000 and 9000 feet above the sea. These mountains may be divided into two masses—that of Jebel Serbal (6759 feet high) and the central group, denoted by Sinai. This group rises abruptly, first to the cliffs of the Ras Sufsafeh, behind which towers Jebel Musa (the Mount of Moses) and farther back the summit of Jebel Katerin (Mount St. Catherine, 8705 feet), all overtopped by Um Shaumer (9300 feet), the highest point of the whole peninsula.

Si'nim (Is. xlix. 12). They may be identified with the classical Sinae, the inhabitants of the southern part of China.

Slave. Slavery was recognized, though not established, by the Mosaic Law. 1. The circumstances under which a Hebrew might be reduced to servitude were—(1) poverty; (2) the commission of theft; and (3) the exercise of paternal authority. 2. The servitude of a Hebrew might be terminated in three ways: (1) by the satisfaction of all claims; (2) by the year of Jubilee (Lev. xxv. 40); and (3) the expiration of six years of servitude (Ex. xxi. 2; Deut. xv. 12). The occupations of slaves were of a menial character, as implied in Lev. xxv. 39, consisting in work and personal attendance.

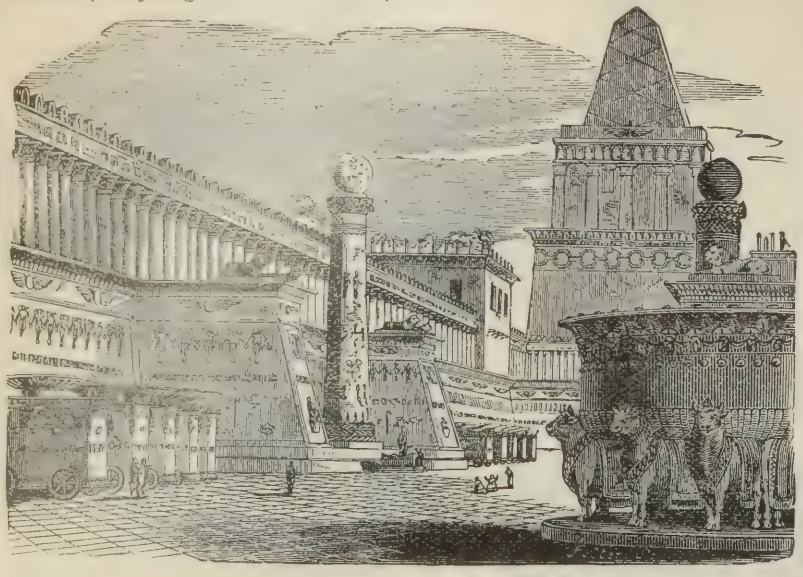
EGYPTIANS SPINNING.

So, mentioned in 2 K. xvii. 4, identified with the first and second kings of the Ethiopian xxvth dynasty.

Soap. The Hebrew term borith refers to vegetable alkali, or some kind of potash, which forms one of the usual ingredients in our soap.

Sod'om, one of the most ancient cities of Syria. It is mentioned with Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Bela or Zoar. Sodom was the chief. The catastrophe by which they were destroyed is described in Gen. xix. The miserable fate of Sodom and Gomorrah is held up as a warning in the Old and New Testaments (2 Pet. ii. 6; Jude 4–7; Mark vi. 11).



COLOSSAL STATUES IN THE DESERT.

Sod'oma (Rom. ix. 29), the Greek and Vulgate form of SODOM.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

5). The death of Absalom occurred when Solomon was about ten years old, and David pledged his word in secret to Bathsheba that he, and no other, should be the heir (1 K. i. 13). Adonijah, next in order of birth to Absalom, "was a goodly man" (1 K. i. 6), in full maturity of years. Following Absalom, he assumed kingly state. A solemn feast at EN-ROGEL was to inaugurate the new reign. Bathsheba and Nathan took counsel together. The king was reminded of his oath. Solomon went down to GIHON, and was proclaimed and anointed king. Adonijah's plot had failed. A few months more, and Solomon found himself, by his father's death, the sole occupant of the throne. The earliest facts in the new reign are told in 1 K. ii. All the data for a continuous history that we have of Solomon's reign are—(a.) The duration of the reign, 40 years (1 K. xi. 42) B. C. 1015–975. (b.) The commencement of the Temple in the 4th, its completion in the 11th year of his reign (1 K. vi. 1, 37, 38). (c.) The commencement of his own palace in the 7th, its completion in the 20th year (1 K. vii. 1;

HOLY PLACE WITHIN THE TABERNACLE.

2 Chr. viii. 1). (d.) The conquest of Hamath-Zobah (Chr. viii. 1–6). The king soon fell from the loftiest height to the lowest depth. He gave himself to "strange women," and the worship of strange gods. Disasters followed. Something may be learned from the books that bear his name; also from the fact that so little remains out of so much, of which the historian speaks (1 K. iv. 32, 33).

Solomon's Servants (CHILDREN OF. Ezr. ii. 56, 58; Neh. vii. 57, 60). The persons thus named were the descendants of the Canaanites, reduced by Solomon and compelled to labor in the stone-quarries (1 K. v. 13, 14, ix. 20).

Spain (1 Macc. viii. 3; Rom. xv. 24, 28). The early introduction of Christianity into Spain is attested by Irenaeus and Tertullian.

Sparrow, in all passages excepting two rendered "bird" or "fowl." In Ps. lxxxiv. 3, and Ps. cii. 7, it is rendered "sparrow." It occurs twice in the N. T., Matt. x. 29, Luke xii. 6, 7. The English tree sparrow (Passer Montanus, L.) may be seen in numbers on Mount Olivet. The rock sparrow (Petronia stulta, Strickl.) is a common bird in the barer portions of Palestine, eschewing woods.

Spearmen (Acts xxiii. 23). Probably troops so lightly armed as to be able to keep pace on the march with mounted soldiers.

Spice, Spices. A general term to denote aromatic substances. The spices mentioned as used by Nicodemus for the preparation of the Lord's body (John xix. 39, 40) are "myrrh and aloes," by which latter word must be understood the highly-scented wood of the Aquilaria agallochum.

Spider. The Hebrew in Job viii. 14, Is. lix. 5, is correctly rendered "spider." But in Prov. xxx. 28 it refers probably to some kind of lizard.

Spikenard (Cant. i. 12; iv. 13, 14. The ointment with which our Lord was anointed as He sat at meat in Simon's house at Bethany, the costliness of which may be inferred from Mark xiv. 3–5; John xii. 3, 5.

Steph'anās, a Christian convert of Corinth whose household Paul baptized as the "first fruits of Achaia" (1 Cor. i. 16, xvi. 15).

Ste'phen, the first Christian martyr. His name indicates his Hellenistic origin. His importance is stamped on the narrative. He was brought before the Sanhedrin. His speech and his execution by stoning, are related in the Acts (vii.).

Stocks, applied to two different articles, one of which answers to our pillory; the other to our "stocks." The stocks, properly so called, are noticed in Job xiii. 27, xxxiii. 11, and Acts xvi. 24.

Stoics. The Stoic school was founded by Zeno of Citium (cir. B. C. 290), and derived its name from the "portico" in which he taught. The morality of stoicism is based on pride.

Stomacher. Some article of female attire (Is. iii. 24), the character of which is conjecture.

SHOES AND SANDALS.

Stones, Precious. Precious stones were highly valued in the earliest times. They are used in Scripture, in a figurative sense, to signify value, beauty, durability, &c.

Stoning. [PUNISHMENTS.]

Stork. The White Stork is one of the largest birds, standing nearly four feet high. It is in the list of unclean birds (Lev. xi. 19; Deut. xiv. 18). The Black Stork, though less abundant, is scarcely less widely distributed. Both species are very numerous in Palestine.

Strain at (Matt. xxiii. 24). There can be little doubt the true reading is, "strain out." N. V.

Stranger. A person of foreign, i. e. non-Israelitish, extraction resident within the promised land. The stranger appears eligible to civil offices, that of king excepted (Deut. xvii. 15). If a bondsman, he was obliged to submit to circumcision (Ex. xii. 44).

Straw. Both wheat and barley straw were used by the ancient Hebrews chiefly as fodder (Gen. xxiv. 25; 1 K. iv. 28, It was employed by the Egyptians for making bricks (Ex. v. 7, 16).

ROMAN GLADIATORS.

Stripes. [PUNISHMENTS.]

Succoth. 1. An ancient town (Gen. xxxiii. 17). The name is derived from the fact of Jacob's having there put up "booths" (Succoth). Succoth lay near the ford of the torrent Jabbok. Succoth is named as the spot at which brass founderies were placed for casting the metal work of the Temple. 2. The first camping-place of the Israelites (Ex. xii. 37, xiii. 20; Num. xxxiii. 5, 6).

SIDON, FROM THE NORTH.

Swearing. [OATH.]

Sweat, Bloody (St. Luke xxii. 44). Of this malady, known by the term diapedeis, there have been examples. The cause assigned is generally violent mental emotion.

Swine. The flesh of swine was forbidden (Lev. xi. 7; Deut. xiv. 8). It is probable that dietetical considerations may have influenced the prohibition. There can be but little doubt that the heathen nations of Palestine used the flesh as food.

Sycamine-tree (Luke xvii. 6), distinct from the sycamore (xix. 4). The sycamine is the mulberry-tree. Both black and white mulberry-trees are common in Syria and Palestine.

Sycamore. Although the Sycamine is properly, and in Luke xvii. 6, the Mulberry, and the Sycamore the Fig-mulberry- or Sycamore-fig (Ficus Sycomorus), yet the latter is the tree generally referred to in the O. T. The Sycamore, or Fig-mulberry, is in Egypt and Palestine a tree of great importance. It affords a delightful shade. The fruit grows from the trunk on little sprigs, and in clusters, like the grape.

Sy'char (John iv. 5), a name applied to the town of Shechem.

Sometimes there was a college of Elders (Luke vii. 3), presided over (Luke viii. 41, 49, xiii. 14; Acts xviii. 8, 17). The third, sixth, and ninth hours were in the times of the N. T.

Syn'tyche, a female member of the Church of Philippi (Phil. iv.).

Syr'acuse, on the eastern coast of Sicily. St. Paul arrived thither from Melita, on his voyage to Rome (Acts xxviii. 12).

Syr'ia, the term used for the Hebrew Aram. It is difficult to fix the limits. Syria Proper was bounded by Amanus and Taurus on the N., by the Euphrates and the Arabian desert on the E., by Palestine on the S., by the Mediterranean near the mouth of the Orontes, and then by Phoenicia upon the W. This tract contains about 30,000 square miles. The general character of the tract is mountainous. Syria holds an important place, not only in the Old Testament, but in the New. The Syrian Church soon grew to be one of the most flourishing (Acts xiii. 1, xv. 23, 35, 41, &c.

Sy'ro-phoeni'cian (Mark vii. 26), perhaps a mixed race, half Phoenicians and half Syrians. Matthew (xv. 22) speaks of "a woman of Canaan" in place of St. Mark's "Syro-phoenician."

Tabering, an obsolete English word, used in Nahum ii. 7. The Hebrew connects itself with toph, "a timbrel."

BINDING SHEAVES.

Tabernacle. The Tabernacle was the tent of Jehovah, called by the same name as the tents of the people, in the midst of which it stood. It was also called the sanctuary, and the tabernacle of the congregation. During Moses' first retirement with God in Sinai, an exact pattern of the whole was shown him (Ex. xxv. 9, 40, xxvi, 30, xxxix. 32, 42, 43; Num. viii. 4; Acts vii. 44; Heb. viii. 5). The Court of the Tabernacle, in which the Tabernacle itself stood, was 100 cubits by 50. The Tabernacle itself was thirty cubits in length by 10 in width (45 feet by 15), and 10 in height; the interior being divided into two. The former was the Holy Place, containing the golden candlestick, the table of shew-bread and the altar of incense. The latter was the Most Holy Place, or the Holy of Holies, containing the ark. The front of the Sanctuary was closed by a hanging of fine linen, embroidered. A more sumptuous curtain divided the Holy from the Most Holy Place. It was called the VEIL.

Tabernacles, The Feast of (Ex. xxiii. 16, "the feast of in-gathering"), the third of the three great festivals of the Hebrews, which lasted from the 15th till the 22d of Tisri. The following passages refer to it: Exod. xxiii. 16; Lev. xxiii. 34–36, 39–43; Num. xxix. 12–38; Deut. xvi. 13–15, xxxi. 10–13. In Neh. viii. there is an account of the observance of the feast of Ezra. The time of the festival fell in the autumn. Its duration was seven days. During the seven days the Israelites were commanded to dwell in booths formed of the boughs of trees.

Tab'itha, also called Dorcas by St. Luke, a female disciple of Joppa, "full of good works." While St. Peter was at Lydda, Tabitha died; upon which the disciples at Joppa sent for the Apostle. Upon his arrival, "Peter put them all forth," prayed for the Divine assistance, and then commanded Tabitha to arise (comp. Mark v. 41; Luke vii. 54). She opened her eyes, and sat up. This great miracle was the occasion of many conversions there (Acts ix. 36–42).

Ta'bor and Mount Ta'bor, one of the most interesting mountains in Palestine. It rises abruptly from the north-eastern arm of the Plain of Esdraelon. The top of Tabor consists of an irregular platform, embracing a circuit of half an hour's walk, and commanding wide views of the subjacent plain. Barak, at the command of Deborah, assembled his forces on Tabor, and descended into the plain, and conquered Sisera (Judg. iv. 6–15).

Ta'bor, the Plain of. This should be THE OAK of TABOR. It is mentioned in 1 Sam. x. 3, only.

Tabret. [TIMBREL.]

Tab'rimon, properly TABRIMMON, i. e. "good is Rimmon," the Syrian god. The father of Benhadad I., king of Syria in the reign of Asa (1 K. xv. 18).

Tache occurs only in Ex. xxvi. 6, 11, 33, xxxv. 11. It indicates the small hooks by which a curtain is suspended.

Tad'mor. The city known to the Greeks and Romans as Palmyra. It was built by Solomon.

Tah'panhes, Tehaph'nehes, Tahap'anes, a city of Egypt, mentioned in the the time of Jeremiah and Ezekiel. The name is Egyptian. The Jews in Jeremiah's time remained here (Jer. xliv. 1). Here stood a house of Pharaoh-hophra, before which Jeremiah hid great stones (xliii. 8–10).

Tah'penes, an Egyptian queen, wife of the Pharaoh who received Hadad the Edomite, and gave him her sister in marriage (1 K. xi. 18–20).

Tah'tim Hodshi, The Land of, one of the places visited by Joab. It occurs between Gilead and Dan-jaan (2 Sam. xxiv. 6).

Talent. [WEIGHTS.]

Tal'itha Cu'mi, two Syriac words (Mark v. 41), signifying, "Damsel, arise."

Tal'mai. One of the three sons of "the Anak," slain by the men of Judah (Num. xiii. 22; Josh. xv. 14.

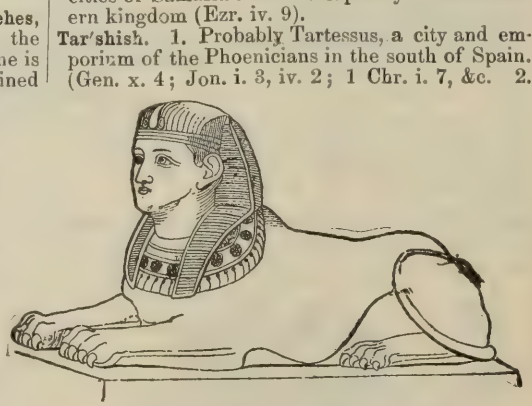
Talmud (i. e. doctrine, from the Hebrew "to learn"), a collection of writings, containing a full account of the civil and religious laws of the Jews. It was a fundamental principle of the Pharisees that by the side of the written law there was an oral law, to complete and explain the written law. This oral law, with the numerous commentaries upon it, forms the Talmud. It consists of two parts, the Mishna and Gemara.

Ta'mar (palm-tree). 1. The wife successively of the two sons of Judah, Er and Onan (Gen. xxxviii. 6-30). Er and Onan had successively perished suddenly. Judah's wife died; and there only remained a child, Shelah. She resorted to the expedient of intrapping the father. The fruits of this intercourse were twins, PHAREZ and ZARAH. 2. Daughter of David and Maachah, and sister of Absalom (2 Sam. xiii. 1–32; 1 Chr. iii. 9). She and her brother were remarkable for their beauty. This fatal beauty inspired a frantic passion in her half-brother Amnon, who forcibly accomplished his design upon her. 3. Daughter of Absalom (2 Sam. xiv. 7), became the mother of Maachah, the future wife of Abijah (1 K. xv. 2).

Tam'muz, properly "the Tammuz" (Ez. viii. 14). Jerome identifies Tammuz with Adonis. That Tammuz was the Egyptian Osiris was held by many.

TABERNACLE.

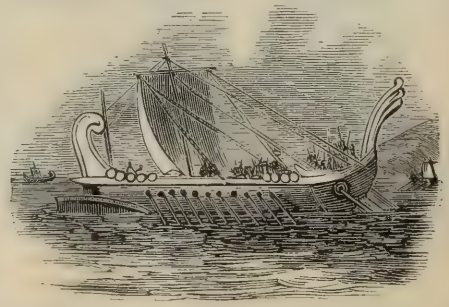
Ta'phath, the daughter of Solomon, who was married to Ben-Abinadab (1 K. iv. 11).



Tare'a, the same as Tahrea, the son of Micah (1 Chr. viii. 35).

Tares. The zizania of the parable (Matt. xiii. 25) denote the weed called "darnel." Before it comes into ear it is very similar to wheat.

Targum. The Scriptures in the Chaldee language or dialect.



Tär'pelites, The, a race of colonists planted in the cities of Samaria after the captivity of the northern kingdom (Ezr. iv. 9).

Tar'shish. 1. Probably Tartessus, a city and emporium of the Phoenicians in the south of Spain. (Gen. x. 4; Jon. i. 3, iv. 2; 1 Chr. i. 7, &c. 2.

ASSYRIAN SPHINX.

From Chronicles there would seem to have been a Tarshish accessible from the Red Sea. The expression, "ships of Tarshish," originally meant ships destined to go to Tarshish; hence, we may infer the word was also used to signify any distant place. This is shown by the nature of the imports (1 K. x. 22).

ANCIENT SAIP.

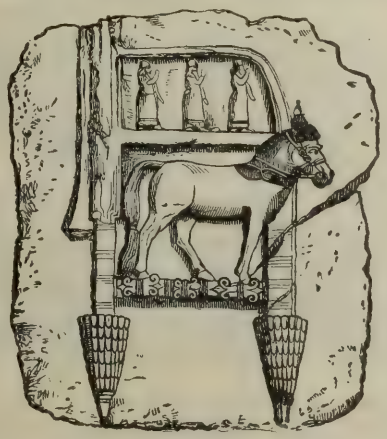
Tar'sus, the chief town of CILICIA, illustrious as the birthplace of Paul (Acts ix. 11, xxi. 39, xxii, 3), It was a city of considerable consequence. Augustus made it a "free city."



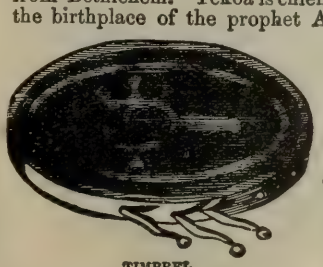
MOUNT TABOR.

Tar'tak, one of the gods of the Avite, or Avvite, colonists of Samaria (2 K. xvii. 31), said to have been worshipped under the form of an ass.

Tar'tan (2 K. xviii. 17; Is. xx. 1), generally regarded as a proper name, but more probably an official designation.

Taverns, The Three. [THREE TAVERNS.]

Taxes. Under the Judges, the only payments of permanent obligations were the TITHES, the FIRST FRUITS, the REDEMPTION-MONEY of the first-born, and other offerings as belonging to special occasions. The kingdom, with its greater magnificence, involved, of course, a larger expenditure, and therefore a heavier taxation.



ASSYRIAN THRONE.

Taxing. Two distinct taxings are mentioned by St. Luke. The first the result of an edict of Augustus (Luke ii. 1), and is connected with the name of Cyrenius, or Quirinus. [CYRENIUS]. The second, and more important (Acts.v. 37), is associated with the revolt of Judas of Galilee.

Te'beth. [MONTH.]

Teko'a and Teko'ah. 1. A town six Roman miles from Bethlehem. Tekoa is chiefly memorable as the birthplace of the prophet Amos (Amos vii. 14). 2. A name occurring in 1 Chr. ii. 24, iv. 5. There is little doubt that the town of Tekoa is meant.

TIMBREL.

Tel'aim. The place at which Saul numbered his forces before his attack on Amalek (1 Sam. xv. 4), and may be identical with TELEM.

Te'lem. One of the cities in the south of Judah (Josh xv. 24), probably the same as TELAIM.

Tema, the ninth son of Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 15; 1 Chr. i. 30); whence the tribe (Job vi. 19; Jer. xxv. 23), and the land (Is. xxi. 13, 14).

Te'man. 1. A son of Eliphaz, son of Esau by Adah (Gen. xxxvi. 11; 1 Chr. i. 36). 2. A country named after the Edomite phylarch, or from which the phylarch took his name.

Temple. Perhaps no building of the ancient world has excited so much attention as the Temple Solomon built at Jerusalem. David first proposed to replace the Tabernacle by a more permanent building, but was forbidden for the reasons assigned by Nathan (2 Sam. vii. 5, &c.). Solomon, with the assistance of Hiram king of Tyre, commenced this great undertaking in the fourth year of his reign (B. C. 1012), and completed it in seven years (B. C. 1005). It occupied the site prepared for it by David. The whole area enclosed by the outer walls formed a square of about 600 feet. As in the Tabernacle, the Temple consisted of three parts, the Porch, the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies. The Porch of the Temple was 10 cubits deep. The front of the porch was supported by the two great brazen pillars, Jachin and Boaz, 18 cubits high, with capitals of 5 cubits more, adorned with lily-work and pomegranates (1 K. vii. 15–22). The Holy Place, or outer hall, was 40 cubits long by 20 wide. The Holy of Holies was a cube of 20 cubits. Both within and without, the building was conspicuous by the lavish use of gold. It glittered in the morning sun like the sanctuay of an El Dorado. This Temple was destroyed on the capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 586.

ARAB TENTS.

TEMPLE OF ZERUBBABEL.—We have very few particulars regarding the Temple the Jews erected after their return from Captivity (about B. C. 520).

TEMPLE OF HEROD.—Herod announced (B. C. 20 or 19) his intention of restoring the Temple. He pulled down the whole to its foundations, and laid them anew on an enlarged scale. The new edifice was a stately pile of Graeco-Roman architecture, built in white marble with gilded acroteria.

CITY OF TARSUS.

The New Testament has made us familiar with the pride of the Jews in its magnificence.

Ten Commandments. In Scripture we have the "TEN WORDS" (Ex. xxxiv. 28), the "COVENANT" (Ex., Deut., ll. cc.; 1 K. viii. 21, &c.), or the TESTIMONY (Ex. xxv. 16, 21, &c.). In the midst of the cloud, and darkness, and lightning, and fiery smoke, and thunder, Moses was called to receive the Law. Their division into Two Tables is expressly mentioned, and no doubt the First Table contained Duties to God, and the Second, Duties to our Neighbor.

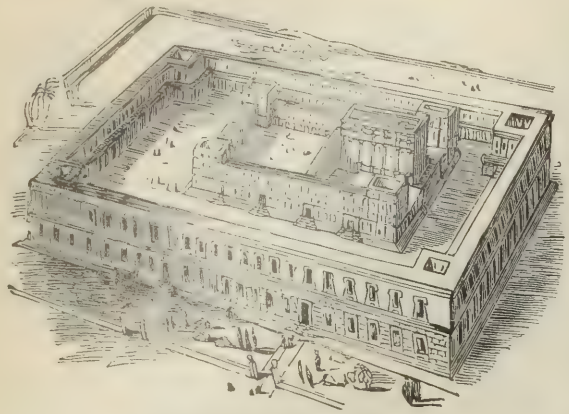
Tent. An Arab tent is called beit, "house;" its covering consists of stuff made of black goats'-hair (Cant. i. 5). This is sufficient to resist the heaviest rain. The ends of the tent-ropes are fastened to short pins, which are driven into the ground (Judg. iv. 21). The tent is divided into two apartments.

FACADE OF THE TOMB OF THE JUDGES.



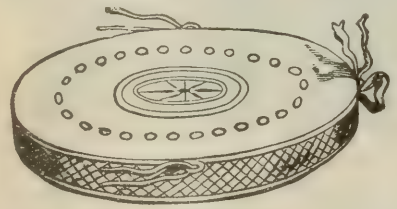
Te'rah, father of Abram, Naher, and Haran, and ancestor of the Israelites, Ishmaelites, Midianites, Moabites, and Ammonites (Gen. xi. 24-32). The account of him is very brief. He was an idolater (Josh xxiv. 2), dwelt in Ur of the Chaldees (Gen. xi. 28), and in his old age went with his son (Gen. xi. 31). And finally, "the days of Terah were two hundred and five years; and Terah died in Haran" (Gen. xi. 32).

Ter'aphim, only in plural, images connected with magical rites. Teraphim were consulted for oracular answers by the Israelites (Zech. x. 2; Judg. xviii. 5, 6; 2 K. xxiii. 24), and by the Babylonians (Ez. xxi. 19–22).

Te'resh, one of two eunuchs whose plot to assassinate Ahasuerus was discovered (Esth. ii. 21, vi. 2). He was hanged.

Ter'tius, probably a Roman, was the amanuensis of Paul in writing the Epistle to the Romans (Rom. xvi. 22).

Tertul'lus, "a certain orator" (Acts xxiv. 1) who was retained by the High Priest and Sanhedrim to accuse the Apostle Paul. He belonged to the class of professional orators.



SUPPOSED FORM OF FIRST TEMPLE.

Tetrarch, the governor of the fourth part of a country. (1.) Herod Antipas was distinguished as "Herod the tetrarch." (2.) Herod Philip was "tetrarch of Ituraea." (3.) Lysanias was "tetrarch of Abilene."

Thaddae'us. From a comparison with the catalogue of St. Luke (Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13) it seems that the three names of Judas, Lebbaeus, and Thaddaeus were borne by one and the same person.

Tha'mar. TAMAR 1 (Matt. i. 3).

Thank-offering, or Peace-offering. The properly eucharistic offering among the Jews, in theory resembling the MEAT-OFFERING, and indicating that the offerer was reconciled to, and in covenant with, God. Its ceremonial is described in Lev. iii.

Tha'ra. TERAH the father of Abraham (Luke iii. 34).

Theatre. The Greek and English terms denote the same thing. It was in the theatre at Caesarea that Herod Agrippa I. gave audience to the Tyrian deputies, and was himself struck with death, because he heard so gladly the impious acclamations of the people (Acts xii. 21–23).

Thebes (A. V. No, the multitude of No, populous No), a chief city of ancient Egypt. No-Amon is the name of Thebes in the Hebrew Scriptures (Jer. xlvi. 25; Nah. iii. 8). The origin of the city is lost. In the 1st century before Christ,

THRONES OF SENNACHERIB AND DARIUS.

Diodorus visited Thebes, and he preserves the tradition of its early grandeur. The grandeur of Egypt is here in almost every pillar, obelisk, and stone. Ezekiel proclaims the destruction of Thebes by the arm of Babylon (Ez. xxx. 14–16). The Persian invader completed the destruction that the Babylonian had begun.

The'bez, a place memorable for the death of the brave Abimelech (Judg. ix. 50). It is on the road to Scythopolis.

Theŏph'ilŭs, the person to whom St. Luke inscribes his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles (Luke i. 3; Acts i. 1). From Luke i. 3, it has been argued that he was high in official position.

Thessalo'nians, First Epistle to the, was written by Paul at Corinth, a few months after he had founded the Church at Thessalonica, at the close of the year 52 or beginning of 53. The Epistles to the Thessalonians are the earliest of St. Paul's writings—perhaps the earliest written records of Christianity. Certain features in the Thessalonian Church called for St. Paul's interference, to which he addresses himself.

Thessalo'nians, Second Epistle to the, appears to have been written from Corinth not long after the First, for Silvanus and Timotheus were still with St. Paul (i. 1).

Thes'salōni'ca. The original name of this city was Therma. Cassander named it after his wife Thessalonica, the sister of Alexander the Great.

TOMBS IN THE ROCKS.

Saloniki is still the most important town of European Turkey, next after Constantinople. A flourishing Church was formed there; and the Epistles show that its elements were much more Gentile than Jewish.

Theu'das, the name of an insurgent mentioned in Acts v. 35–39. He appeared at the head of about four hundred men. Probably one of the insurrectionary chiefs or fanatics by whom the land was overrun in the last year of Herod's reign.

Thieves, The two. The men who under this name appear in the crucifixion were robbers, belonging to lawless bands by which Palestine was infested. It was necessary to use an armed police to encounter them (Luke xxii. 52). Of the previous history of the two who suffered on Golgotha we know nothing.

Thistle. [THORNS AND THISTLES.]

Thom'as, one of the Apostles. The word means "a twin." He is said to have been born at Antioch. In the catalogue of the Apostles he is coupled with Matthew in Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 15; and with Philip in Acts i. 13. All that we know of him is derived from the Gospel of St. John. The earlier traditions, as believed in the 4th century, represent him as preaching in Parthia or Persia, and as finally buried at Edessa. His martyrdom is said to have been occasioned by a lance.

Thorns and Thistles. Eighteen or twenty Hebrew words point to different kinds of prickly or thorny shrubs. These are rendered "thorns," "briers," "thistles," &c. The "crown of thorns" (Matt. xxvii. 29), put in derision upon our Lord's head, was obviously some small, flexile, thorny shrub, perhaps cappares spinosae; Hasselquist says Arabian Nabk.

Three Taverns. A station on the Appian Road, along which St. Paul traveled from Puteoli to Rome (Acts xxviii. 15). It was near the modern Cisterna, and was a frequent meeting-place of travelers.

Threshing. [AGRICULTURE.]

Threshold. Of two words so rendered, one seems to mean sometimes a projecting beam (Ez. ix. 3, x. 4, 18).

Throne. The Hebrew word applies to any elevated seat occupied by a person in authority. Solomon's throne was approached by six steps (1 K. x. 19; 2 Chr. ix. 18). The materials and workmanship were costly.

TIMBREL.

Thum'mim. [URIM AND THUMMIM.]

Thunder is hardly ever heard in Palestine from the middle of April to the middle of September. Hence selected by Samuel as a striking expression of the Divine displeasure (1 Sam. xii. 17). In the imaginative philosophy of the Hebrews, thunder was regarded as the voice of Jehovah.

Thyati'ra, a city on the Lycus, on the confines of Mysia and Ionia. Dyeing formed an important part of industrial activity, as at Colossae and Laodicea (Acts xvi. 14). The principal deity was Apollo.

Thyine Wood (Rev. xviii. 12). There can be little doubt that the wood is that of the Callitris quadrivalvis of present botanists. This tree was much prized on account of the beauty of its wood.

ROMAN GLADIATORS.

Tibe'rias, a city in the time of Christ, on the Sea of Galilee; first mentioned in John vi. 1, 23, xxi. 1). Josephus states it was built by Herod Antipas. The Mishna was compiled at this place by the great Rabbi, Judah Hakkodesh (A. D. 190). Tiberias was the capital of Galilee until the reign of Herod Agrippa II.

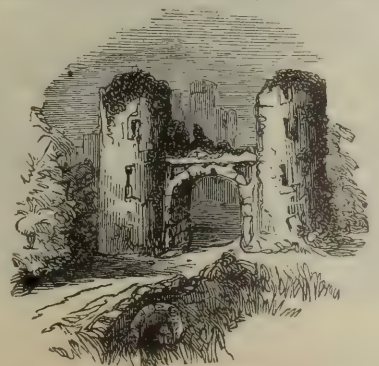
Tibe'rias, The Sea of (John xxi. 1). [GENNESARET, SEA OF.]

Tibe'rius (Tiberius Claudius Nero), the 2d Roman emperor, successor of Augustus, who began to reign A. D. 14, and reigned until A. D. 37. He was a step-son of Augustus. He was born at Rome on the 16th of November, B. C. 45. He became emperor in his 55th year, after having distinguished himself as a commander and as an orator. He was despotic in his government, cruel and vindictive in his disposition. Tiberius died, A. D. 37, at the age of 78, after a reign of 23 years. Our Saviour was put to death in the reign of Tiberius.



BRIDGE NEAR TYRE.

Tib'ni. After Zimri burnt himself in his palace, half the people followed Tibni and half Omri (1 K. xvi. 21, 22). Omri was the choice of the army. The struggle lasted four years (comp. 1 K. xvi. 15, 23).

Ti'dal (Gen. xiv. 1, 9). We conclude that he was a chief over various tribes.

Tig'lath-pile'ser, second Assyrian king mentioned as having come into contact with the Israelites. He attacked Samaria in the reign of Pekah (2 K.

TOWERS AND GATE.

xv. 29). He overran the whole district to the east of Jordan, carrying into captivity "the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. v. 26). He appears contemporary with Rezin, Pekah, and Ahaz; and therefore to have ruled Assyria during the latter half of the eighth century before our era. His reign lasted at least seventeen years.

Ti'gris is used by the LXX. as the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew Hiddekel. It rises from two principal sources in the Armenian mountains, and flows into the Euphrates. Its length is reckoned at 1146 miles.

Tik'vah, the father of Shallum the husband of the prophetess Huldah (2 K. xxii. 14).

Tile. Luke v. 19, "through the tiling," ("tiles," N. R.), has given much trouble to expositors. Did not St. Luke use the expression without reference to the material of the roof in question?

Timae'us, the father of the blind man, Bartimaeus (Mark x. 46).

EGYPTIAN GOD APIS.

Timbrel, Tabret (Heb. toph). The Heb. is the duff or diff of the Arabs. It is "a hoop (sometimes with pieces of brass fixed in it to make a jingle) over which a piece of parchment is distended. It is beaten with the fingers, and is the true tympanum of the ancients."

Tim'na, Tim'nah. 1. A concubine of Eliphaz son of Esau, and mother of Amalek (Gen. xxxvi. 12). 2. A duke, or phylarch, of Edom (1 Chr. i. 51–54).

TRAVELING IN THE EAST.

Tim'nah. 1. A place probably identical with the Timnath, or, more accurately, Timnathah, of Samson (Judg. xiv. 1, 2, 5). 2. Inaccurately written TIMNATH in the A. V., the scene of the adventure of Judah with his daughter-in-law Tamar (Gen. xxxviii. 12, 13, 14). There is nothing to indicate its position.

CORNER TOWER.

Tim'nath. [TIMNAH.]

Tim'nathah, the residence of Samson's wife (Judg. xiv. 1, 2, 5).

Tim'nath-se'rah, the name of the city presented to Joshua (Josh. xix. 50), and in "the border" of which he was buried (xxiv. 30). It is specified as "in Mount Ephraim." In Judg. ii. 9, the name is altered to TIMNATH-HERES.

Ti'mon, one of the seven, commonly called "deacons" (Acts vi. 1–6). He was probably a Hellenist.

Timo'theus. 1. A "captain of the Ammonites" (1 Macc. v. 6). 2. The Greek name of TIMOTHY (Acts xvi. 1, xvii. 14, &c.).

Tim'othy. The father was a Greek, i. e. a Gentile by descent (Acts xvi. 1, 3). The care of the boy devolved upon his mother Eunice and her mother Lois (2 Tim. i. 5). It is uncertain whether Lystra or Derbe was the residence of the devout family. The preaching of the Apostle prepared him for a life of suffering (Acts xiv. 22). During the interval of the Apostle's first and second journeys, the boy grew up to manhood. He was solemnly set apart to do the work of an Evangelist (1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6, iv. 5). Henceforth Timothy was one of his most constant companions. He continues, according to the old traditions, to act as bishop of Ephesus, and dies a martyr's death under Domitian or Nerva.

UZZAH AND THE ARK.

Timothy, Epistles of Paul to. The First Epistle was probably written between St. Paul's first and second imprisonments at Rome. The Second Epistle appears to have been written soon afterwards and at Rome.

Tin. Among the spoils of the Midianites, tin is enumerated (Num. xxxi. 22). It was known to the Hebrew metal workers (Is. i. 25; Ez. xxii. 18, 20). The markets of Tyre were supplied with it (Ez. xxvii. 12). It was used for plummets (Zech. iv. 10). Tin is not found in Palestine. The mines of Britain were the chief source of supply to the ancient world.

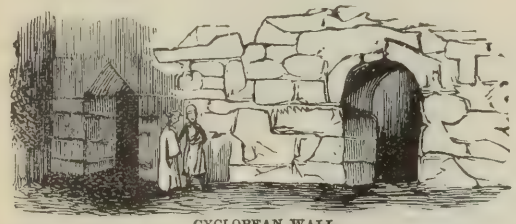
Tiph'sah (1 K. iv. 24), the limit of Solomon's empire towards the Euphrates. It was known to the Greeks and Romans under the name of Thapsacus.

RUINS AT TROAS.

Ti'ras, the youngest son of Japheth (Gen. x. 2), usually identified with the Thracians.

Tire, an ornamental headdress worn on festive occasions (Ez. xxiv. 17, 23).

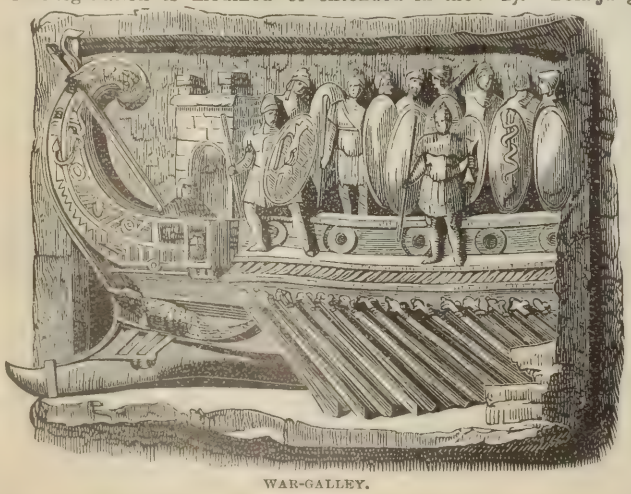
Tir'hakah, king of Ethiopia, the opponent of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 9; Is. xxxvii. 9). His accession was probably about B. C. 695.



ORIENTAL VESSEL.

Tir'shatha, the title of the governor of Judaea under the Persians (Neh. viii. 9, x. 1).

Tir'zah, an ancient Canaanite city (Josh. xii. 24). It reappears as the residence of Jeroboam and his successors (1 K. xiv. 17, 18).



Tish'bite, The, the well-known designation of Elijah (1 K. xvii. 1, xxi. 17, 28; 2 K. i. 3, 8, ix. 36) the prophet. Assuming that a town is alluded to, as Elijah's native place, it is not necessary to infer that it was itself in Gilead. The name "Tishbite" is regarded as referring to the place THISBE in Naphtali.

Ti'tans. According to Greek legends, the vanquished predecessors of the Olympian gods. Several Christian fathers inclined to the belief that Teitan was the mystic name of "the beast" in Rev. xiii. 18.

CYCLOPEAN WALL

Tithe. Instances of the use of tithes are prior to the Levitical tithes under the Law. In Biblical history the two prominent instances are—1. Abram presenting the tenth of his spoils to Melchizedek (Gen. xiv. 20; Heb. vii. 2, 6). 2. Jacob devoting a tenth of all his property to God (Gen. xxviii. 22). The first enactment of the Law is that the tenth of all produce, as of flocks and cattle, belongs to Jehovah, and must be offered to Him (Lev. xxvii. 30–33). This tenth is assigned to the Levites; and further, they are to dedicate to the Lord a tenth of these receipts, to be devoted to the high-priest (Num. xviii. 21–28). This legislation is modified or extended in the Book of Deuteronomy, i. e. from thirty-eight to forty years later.

WAR-GALLEY.

Titus. Titus is first seen in close association with Paul and Barnabas at Antioch. He goes with them to Jerusalem. His circumcision was either not insisted on at Jerusalem, or was resisted. He is very emphatically spoken of as a Gentile. He is said to have been permanent bishop in Crete, and to have died there at an advanced age. The modern capital, Candia, appears to claim the honor of being the burial-place.

Ti'tus, Epistle to. This Epistle has marks in its phraseology and style which assimilate it to the general body of the Epistles of St. Paul.

Tŏb, The Land of, a place in which Jephthah took refuge when expelled from home (Judg. xi. 3), and where he remained, at the head of a band of freebooters, till brought back by the sheikhs of Gilead (ver. 5).

Tō-bī'ah. "Tobiah the slave, the Ammonite," played a conspicuous part in the rancorous opposition made by Sanballat the Moabite and his adherents to the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

Tō-bī'jah. One of the Captivity in the time of Zechariah, in whose presence the prophet was commanded to take crowns of silver and gold and put them on the head of Joshua the high-priest (Zech. vii. 10, 14).

Tō'bit, Book of, a book of the Apocrypha, probably written in Greek. The scene is placed in Assyria, whither Tobit, a Jew, had been carried by Shalmaneser. It is a didactic narrative; and its point lies in the moral lessons it conveys.

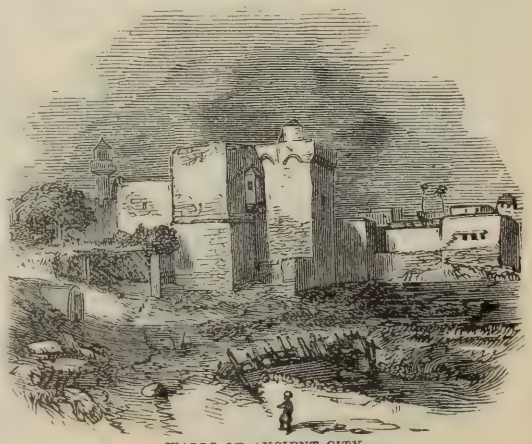
Togär'mah, as a geographical term, is connected with Armenia (Ez. xxvii. 14, xxxviii. 6).

Tō'i, king of Hamath on the Orontes, who, after the defeat of his enemy the Syrian king by David, sent his son Joram, or Hadoram, to do him homage with presents of gold and silver and brass (2 Sam. viii. 9, 10).

To'la. 1. The first-born of Issachar, and ancestor of the Tolaites (Gen. xlvi. 13; 1 Chr. vii. 1, 2). 2. Judge of Israel after Abimelech (Judg. x. 1, 2). Tola judged Israel for 23 years.

Tomb. From the burial of Sarah (Gen. xxiii. 19) to the rites prepared for Dorcas (Acts ix. 37), there is no mention of any sarcophagus, or coffin, in Jewish burial. A simplicity of rite was the distinguished characteristic in Jewish sepulchres. The early Jewish rulers had no fixed or favorite place of sepulture. Each was buried without much caring either for the sanctity or convenience of the place chosen. Later, of the 22 kings of Judah who reigned at Jerusalem from 1048 to 590 B. C., eleven, or exactly one half, were buried in one hypogeum in the "city of David." There are around Jerusalem, in the Valleys of Hinnon and Jehoshaphat, and to the north, a number of remarkable rock-cut sepulchres. The Tombs of the Judges form one of the most remarkable of the catacombs around Jerusalem.

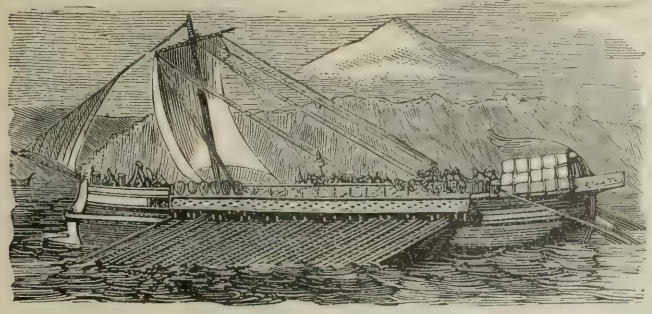
Tongues, Confusion of. Unity of language is assumed by the sacred historian apparently as a corollary of the unity of race. The human family endeavored to check the tendency to separation by the establishment of a great central edifice. The project was defeated by Jehovah, who determined to "confound their language." As the result, the people were scattered abroad upon the face of the earth, and the memory of the event was preserved in the name Babel.



VINE-GATHERERS.

Tongues, Gift of. The promise of our Lord to his disciples in Mark xvi. 17, was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, when cloven tongues like fire sat upon the disciples, and "every man heard them speak in his own language" (Acts ii. 1–12). Connected with the "tongues," there was the corresponding power of interpretation.

GRECIAN HEAVY-ARMED WARRIOR.



Topaz (Ex. xxviii. 17; Job xxviii. 19). The topaz of the ancient Greeks and Romans is allowed to be our chrysolite, while their chrysolite is our topaz.

WALLS OF ANCIENT CITY.

To'pheth, and once To'phet, was in the S. E. of the "Valley of the Son of Hinnom" (Jer. vii. 31). It seems to have been part of the king's gardens, and watered by Siloam. The name Tophet occurs only in the O. T. The New does not refer to it. Tophet was probably the king's "music-grove" or garden, denoting originally nothing evil or hateful. Afterwards it was polluted by the sacrifices of Baal and the fires of Molech. The pious kings defiled it, till it became the "abhorrence" of Jerusalem.

Tortoise (Heb. tsab), Lev. xi. 29, identified with the Arabic dhab, "a large kind of lizard."

Tower. Fortified posts in exposed situations are mentioned (Gen. xxxv. 21; Mic. iv. 8, &c.). Besides these military structures, we read of towers in vineyards as an almost necessary appendage to them (Is. v. 2; Matt. xxi. 33; Mark xii. 1).

this class of men was to record the laws and decrees of the state, and to read them in public.

Trăchoni'tis (Luke iii. 1) is in all probability the Greek equivalent for the Aramaic Argob. [ARGOB.]

Trance. In the N. T. we meet with the word three times (Acts x. 10, xi. 5, xxii. 17). The state in which a man has passed beyond the usual limits of consciousness and volition.

Trespass-offering. [SIN-OFFERING.]

Trial. 1. The trial of our Lord was a trial for the offence laesae majestatis; punishable with death (Luke xxiii. 2, 38; John xix. 12, 15). 2. The trials of St. Stephen, and St. Paul, before the high-priest, were according to Jewish rules (Acts iv., v. 27, vi. 12, xxii. 30, xxiii. 1). 3. The trial of St. Paul and Silas at Philippi, was on the charge of innovation in religion (Acts xvi. 19, 22). 4. The trials of St. Paul at Caesarea (Acts xxiv., xxv., xxvi.) were according to Roman rules.

EASTERN WELL.

Tribūte. The tribute mentioned in Matt. xvii. 24, 25, was the half shekel applied to defray the general expenses of the Temple. This "tribute" of Matt. xvii. 24 must not be confounded with that paid to the Roman emperor (Matt. xxii. 17).

Trip'olis, the Greek name of a Phoenician city of great commercial importance.

Tro'as, the city from which St. Paul first sailed (Acts xvi. 8, 11). Its situation was on the coast of MYSIA. In the time of St. Paul it was a colonia with the Jus Italicum.

Trogyl'liŭm, the rocky extremity of the ridge of Mycale, exactly opposite Samos (Acts xx. 15).

Troop, Band. Employed to represent the Hebrew word gedud, which has the sense of an irregular force for marauding and plunder.

Trŏph'imŭs. Both he and Tychicus accompanied St. Paul from Macedonia as far as Asia (Acts xxi. 27–29). He was a Gentile, and a native of EPHESUS. Trophimus was probably one of the two who, with TITUS, conveyed the 2d Epistle to the Corinthians (2 Cor. viii. 16–24).

the feast of the new moon, which fell on the first of Tizri. It was one of the seven days of Holy Convocation, "a day of blowing of trumpets."

Tryphe'na and Tryphō'sa, two Christian women at Rome, enumerated in St. Paul's letter (Rom. xvi. 12). They may have been sisters, but more likely were fellow-deaconesses.

Try'phon, a usurper of the Syrian throne. His proper name was Diodotus.

Tu'bal is reckoned with Javan and Meshech among the sons of Japheth (Gen. x. 2; 1 Chr. i. 5). Josephus identifies the descendants of Tubal with the Iberians.

Tu'bal-ca'in, the son of Lamech the Cainite by his wife Zillah (Gen. iv. 22).

Turpentine-tree (Ecclus. xxiv. 16), the Pistacia terebinthus, common in Palestine.

Turtle, Turtle-dove (Gen. xv. 9). From its habit of pairing for life, and its fidelity for its mate, it was a symbol of purity and an appropriate offering.

Tych'icŭs and Troph'imus, companions of St. Paul. In Acts xx. 4, Tychicus and Trophimus are said to be "of Asia;" but while Trophimus went with St. Paul to Jerusalem (Acts xxi. 29), Tychicus was left probably at Miletus (Acts xx. 15, 38). From 2 Tim. iv. 20, we learn that Trophimus had been left by the Apostle, in infirm health, at Miletus.

Tyrăn'nus (Acts xix. 9). The presumption is, that Tyrannus was a Greek, and a public teacher of philosophy or rhetoric.

Tyre, a celebrated commercial city of Phoenicia, on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. Tyre is named for the first time in the Book of Joshua WINE-SKINS.

(xix. 29), where it is adverted to as a fortified city. The first passages which afford glimpses of the actual condition of Tyre, are in the Book of Samuel (2 Sam. v. 11), in connection with Hiram king of Tyre; and subsequently in the Book of Kings, in connection with the building of Solomon's temple. Nebuchadnezzar laid siege to Tyre, and it submitted to the Chaldees. The prosperity of Tyre in the time of Augustus was great. The city was visited by Christ (Matt. xv. 21; Mark vii. 24). It was perhaps more populous than Jerusalem. At the time of the crusades Tyre was still a flourishing city.

WHALE'S MOUTH.

Ty'rus. This form is in Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea (Joel has "Tyre"), Amos and Zechariah.

U

U'cal (Prov. xxx. 1). Ithiel and Ucal must be sons of Agur the son of Jakeh. Ewald considers both symbolical names.

U'lai (Daniel viii. 2, 16), a river near to Susa, where Daniel saw his vision of the ram and the he-goat. Identified

Unclean Meats. These were things strangled, or dead of themselves, or through beasts or birds of prey; whatever beast did not part the hoof and chew the cud; and certain animals rated as "creeping things;" certain classes of birds mentioned in Lev. xi. and Deut. xiv.; whatever in the waters had not fins and scales; whatever winged insect had not besides four legs the two hind-legs for leaping; besides things offered to idols; and blood or whatever contained it; and therefore flesh from the live animal; as also all fat disposed among the intestines, and probably wherever discernable and separable (Lev. iii. 14-17, vii. 23).

Uncleanness The Israelites were to be "holy unto God" (Lev. xx. 24, 26), "a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation." Uncleanness as referred to man, may be arranged in three degrees; (1) that which defiled merely "until even," and was removed by bathing and washing the clothes; (2) that graver sort which defiled for seven days, removed by the "water of separation;" (3) uncleanness from the morbid, puerperal, or menstrual state; and in the case of leprosy lasting often for life.

Undergirding, Acts xxvii. 17. [SHIP.]

Unicorn, the rendering of the Hebrew Reem. It has nothing to do with the one-horned animal of the Greek and Roman writers. Considering that the Reem is a two-horned animal of great strength and ferocity, well known to the Jews, mentioned as fit for sacrificial purposes, and is associated with bulls and oxen, we think some species of wild-ox is intended; probably some gigantic Urus.

U'phaz, Jer. x. 9; Dan. x. 5. [OPHIR.]

Ur, Haran's nativity (Gen. xi. 28), from which Terah and Abraham started (Gen. xi. 31). It is called "Ur of the Chaldaeans;" St. Stephen places it in Mesopotamia. It has been identified with the city of Or-fah in the highlands of Mesopotamia.

Ur'bane, Urbanus. A Christian disciple in the list of those whom St. Paul salutes (Rom. xvi. 9).

Uri'ah. 1. One of the thirty commanders of David (1 Chr. xi. 41; 2 Sam. xxiii. 39). He was a foreigner—a Hittite. His name and speech (2 Sam. xi. 11) indicate that he had adopted the Jewish religion. He married Bathsheba, a woman of extraordinary beauty, the daughter of Eliam. In the first war with Ammon he followed Joab to the siege. He returned to Jerusalem, at an order from the king. The king met with an unexpected obstacle in the austere, soldier-like spirit of Uriah. On the third day, David sent him back to camp with a letter containing the command to Joab to cause his destruction in the battle. It is one of the touching parts of the story that Uriah falls unconscious of his wife's dishonor. 2. High-priest in the reign of Ahaz (Is. viii. 2; 2 K. xvi. 10–16). Probably the same as Urijah, who built the altar for Ahaz (2 K. xvi. 10).

Uri'as. 1. URIAH, the husband of Bathsheba (Matt. i. 6). 2. URIJAH (1 Esdr. ix. 43).

U'tiel, "the fire of God," an angel named only in 2 Esdr. iv. 1, 36, v. 20, x. 28.

U'riel. Uriel of Gibeah was the father of Maachah, r Michaiah, the favorite wife of Rehoboam, and mother of Abijah (2 Chr. xiii. 2).

Uri'jah. 1. Urijah the priest in the reign of Ahaz (2 K. xvi. 10). 2. The son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim. He prophesied in the days of Jehoiakim, by whom he was slain with the sword (Jer. xxvi. 20-23).

IN THE STOCKS.

U'rim and Thum'mim. Urim means "light," and Thummim "perfection." All we know of them is given in the order in Ex. xxv. 16; xxviii. 30. Not a word describes them. They are mentioned as things already familiar both to Moses and the people, connected naturally with the functions of the high-priest, as mediating between Jehovah and His people.

Usury. The practice of mortgaging land, sometimes at exorbitant interest, grew up among the Jews during the Captivity, in direct violation of the law (Lev. xxv. 36, 37; Ez. xviii. 8, 13, 17). Jewish law forbids usury.

Uz. 1. A son of Aram (Gen. x. 23; 1 Chr. i. 17), and grandson of Shem. 2. The country in which Job lived (Job i. 1), "The land of Uz" lay buried (2 K. xxi. 18, 26). It was suggested the garden was so called from being the spot at which Uzza died during the removal of the ark.

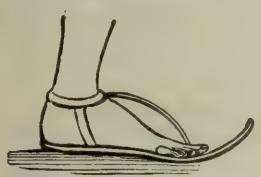
Uz'zah, or Uz'za, one of the sons of Abinadab, in whose house at Kirjath-Jearim the ark rested for 20 years. When David first undertook to carry it to Jerusalem, Ahio went before the cart (1 Chr. xiii. 7) and Uzzah walked by the side. "At the threshing-floor of Nachon" (2 Sam. vi. 6), or Chidon (1 Chr. xiii. 9), the oxen stumbled. Uzzah caught the ark to prevent its falling. The profanation was punished by his instant death.

ERECTION OF TABERNACLE.



The ark ought to have been borne on the shoulders of the Levites.

Uz'zi, son of Bukki (1 Chr. vi. 5, 51; Ezr. vii. 4). Though the lineal ancestor of Zadok, it does not appear that he was ever high-priest.

ANCIENT SHOES.

Uzzi'ah, King of Judah (B. C. 808-9—756-7). His name appears also as Azariah. After the murder of Amaziah, his son Uzziah was chosen to occupy the vacant throne at the age of 16; and for the greater part of his long reign of 52 years he lived in the fear of God. He was much influenced by Zechariah (2 Chr. xxvi. 5). He deter mined to burn incense on the altar of God, but was opposed by the high-priest and eighty others (Ex. xxx. 7, 8; Num. xvi. 40, xviii. 7). Enraged at their resistance, he pressed forward with his censer, and was suddenly smitten with leprosy. Uzziah was buried "with his fathers" (2 Chr. xxvi. 23).

hath, father of Mishael, Elzaphan or Elizaphan, and Zithri, and uncle to Aaron (Ex. vi. 18, 22; Lev. x. 4).

Uzzi'elites, The, the descendants of Uzziel, and one of the four great families of the Kohathites (Num. iii. 27; 1 Chr. xxvi. 23).

V

Vale, Valley. The structure of the Holy Land does not lend itself to the formation of valleys in our sense of the word. The abrupt transitions of its crowded rocky hills preclude the existence of any extended sweep of valley.

Vāsh'ni, firstborn of Samuel as the text now stands (1 Chr. vi. 28 [13]). But in 1 Sam. viii. 2 his firstborn is Joel. Probably in the Chronicles the name of Joel has dropped out.

Vāsh'ti, the "queen" of Ahasuerus, who was repudiated and deposed (Esth. i.). It is probable she was only one of the inferior wives, dignified with the title of queen.

Veil. In ancient times the veil was adopted either as an article of dress (Cant. iv. 1, 3, vi. 7), or by betrothed maidens in the presence of their future husbands (Gen. xxiv. 65, xxix. 25), or by women of loose character (Gen. xxxviii. 14).

Version, Authorized. I. WYCLIFFE (b. 1324; d. 1384).—The N. T. was translated by Wycliffe himself. The O. T. was undertaken by Nicholas de Hereford. The version was based entirely upon the Vulgate. II. TYNDAL.—Tyndal is the patriarch of the Authorized Version, the true hero of the English Reformation. He spent years of labor in Greek and Hebrew. In 1525 the whole of the N. T. was printed in 4to. III. COVERDALE. — A complete translation, different from Tyndal's, bearing the name of Miles Coverdale, appeared in 1535. This was from the German and Latin. IV. MATTHEW.—In 1537, a large folio Bible appeared as edited by Thomas Matthew. Tradition connects this Matthew with John Rogers, the proto-martyr. It somewhat reproduces Tyndal's work. This was the first Authorized Version. V. TAVERNER (1539).—This may be described as an expurgated edition of Matthew's. VI. CRANMER.—In the same year as Taverner's, and coming from the same press, appeared this English Bible. It was the Authorized Version of the English Church till 1568. VII. GENEVA.—The exiles to Geneva in the reign of Mary made a translation, which was for sixty years the most popular of all versions. It was based on Tyndal's Version. It entirely omitted Apocrypha. VIII. THE BISHOPS' BIBLE.—Eight bishops, with deans and professors, brought out a magnificent folio (1568 and 1572). Is was based on Cranmer's. IX. RHEIMS AND DOUAY.—English Catholic refugees at Rheims undertook a version. The N. T. was published at Rheims in 1582. The work of translation was completed later by the publication of the O. T. at Douay in 1609. X. AUTHORIZED VERSION.—Among the demands at the Hampton Court Conference in 1604, was one for a new, or a revised translation. The work was congenial to James, and in 1606 was commenced. It was intrusted to 54 scholars. Published in 1611. The Revision of the version of 1611 had its origin in the convocation of Canterbury in 1870. A committee of 101 of the best scholars of Eng. and the U. S. were engaged in the work. The Revised N. T. was published in 1881.

Village. This word is often used to imply unwalled suburbs outside walled towns. The Talmudists define a village as a place destitute of a synagogue.

Vine, the well-known plant cultivated from the earliest times. The first mention is in Gen. ix. 20, 21. The vines of Palestine were celebrated for luxuriant growth and immense clusters of grapes. The vintage, which formerly was a season of general festivity, commenced in September.

Vine of Sodom (Deut. xxxii. 32). It is supposed this passage alludes to the celebrated apples of Sodom. It has been variously identified.

Vinegar, applied to a beverage of wine or strong drink turned sour; artificially made by an admixture of barley and wine, and thus liable to fermentation. It was used by laborers (Ruth ii. 14). Similar was the acetum of the Romans. This was the beverage of which the Saviour partook in His dying moments (Matt. xxvii. 48; Mark xv. 36; John xix. 29, 30).

Viper. [SERPENT.]

Vows. The earliest mention of a vow is that of Jacob (Gen. xxviii. 18–22, xxxi. 13). Vows are mentioned in Job xxii. 27). The Law regulated the practice of vows. Three sorts are mentioned: I. Vows of devotion; II. Vows of abstinence; III. Vows of destruction.

Vulgate, The, the Latin version of the Bible. The name is equivalent to Vulgata editio (the current text of Holy Scripture). The history of the earliest Latin Version of the Bible is lost. All that can be affirmed is, that it was made in Africa in the 2d century. In the 6th century the use of Jerome's Version was universal among scholars except in Africa. In the 7th century the traces of the Old Version grow rare. In the 8th century Bede speaks of Jerome's Version as "our edition." In the 8th century Charlemagne intrusted to Alcuin (circ. A. D. 802) the task of revising the Latin text. It was subsequently revised by many eminent scholars. When the Council of Trent declared the Vulgate the authoritative text of Scripture, the want of a standard text became urgent. At length an edition was published in 1590, under Pope Sixtus V. Another edition under papal authority appeared in 1592 in the Pontificate of Clement VIII. By far the greater part of the current doctrinal terminology is based on the Vulgate. Predestination, justification, supererogation (supererogo), sanctification, salvation, mediation, regeneration, revelation, visitation (met.), propitiation, first appear in the Old Vulgate. Grace, redemption, election, reconciliation, satisfaction, inspiration, scripture, were devoted there to a new and holy use. Sacrament and communion are from the same source; and though baptism is Greek it comes to us from the Latin. It would be easy to extend the list by the addition of orders, penance, congregation, priest.

Vulture. There seems no doubt but that the original words refer to some of the smaller species of raptorial birds, as kites or buzzards.

W

Wages. The earliest mention of wages is in Gen.

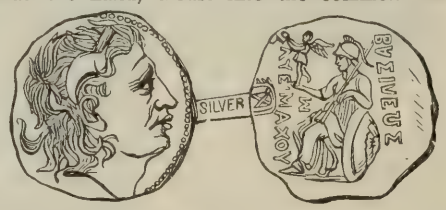
EGYPTIAN TASKMASTERS.

xxix. 15, 20, xxx. 28, xxxi. 7, 8, 41). In Egypt, money payments of wages were in use (Ex. ii. 9). The only mention of the rate of wages is in the parable of the householder (Matt. xx. 2). The law was strict in requiring daily payment of wages (Lev. xix, 13; Deut. xxiv. 14, 15).

Wagon. The Oriental wagon is a vehicle of two or three planks fixed on two solid circular blocks of wood, from two to five feet in diameter, as wheels. The vehicle is drawn by buffaloes or oxen.

TIMBREL.

Walls. 1. The practice common in Palestine of carrying foundations down to the solid rock

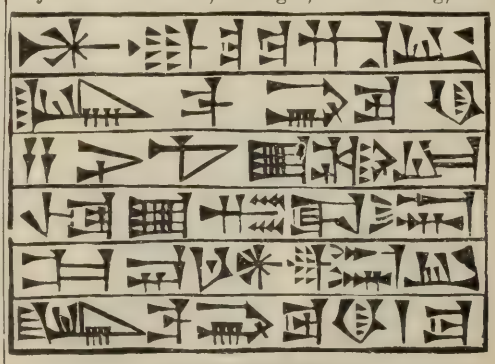


SOLDIERS OF SHISHAK, KING OF EGYPT.

(Luke vi. 48). 2. Incrusting or veneering a wall of brick or stone with slabs, as marble or alabaster. 3. To support mountain roads or terraces on the sides of hills.

Wandering in the Wilderness. [WILDERNESS OF WANDERING.]

War. Before entering on a war of aggression the Hebrews sought for Divine sanction. Formal proclamations of war were not interchanged. When an engagement was imminent a sacrifice was offered (1 Sam. vii. 9), and an address delivered. Then followed the battle-signal. The bodies of soldiers killed were plundered; the survivors were either killed mutilated, or carried into captivity.



Washing the Hands and Feet. It was necessary that the hand, thrust into the common dish, should be clean; and again, as sandals were ineffectual against dust, washing the feet on entering a house was an act of respect and refreshment. The former of these was transformed by the Pharisees into ritual observance (Mark vii. 3).

TETRADRACHM OR ATTIC TALENT.

Watches of Night. The Jews divided the night into military watches. The proper Jewish reckoning recognized only three such, entitled the first, (Lam. ii. 19), the middle watch (Judg. vii. 19), and the morning watch (Ex. xiv. 24; 1 Sam. xi. 11). These would last from sunset to 10 P. M.; from 10 P. M. to 2 A. M.; and from 2 A. M. to sunrise. Subsequently the number was four, described either according to numerical order or by the terms "even, midnight, cock-crowing, and morning' (Mark xiii. 35). These terminated at 9 P. M., midnight, 3 A. M., and 6 A. M.

Water of Jealousy (Num. v. 11–31). The ritual consisted in the husband's bringing the woman before the priest, and the essential part is the oath, to which the "water" was subsidiary, symbolical, and ministerial. Josephus adds, if the suspicion was unfounded, she obtained conception, if true, she died infamously.

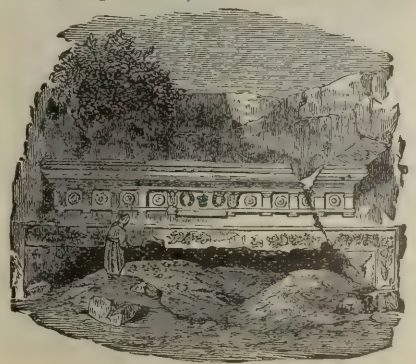
Water of Separation. [PURIFICATION; UNCLEANNESS.]

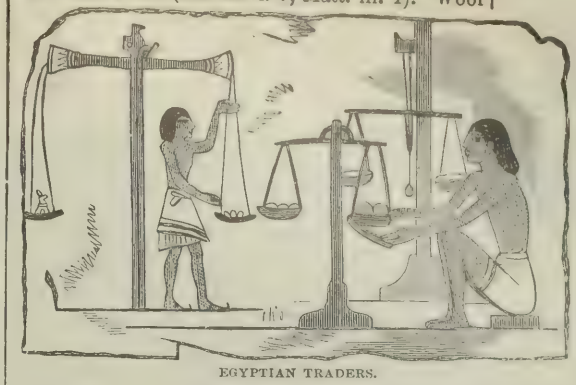
Wave-offering. This rite, with that of "heaving" or "raising" the offering, was an inseparable accompaniment of peace offerings.

Way. There is hardly a single passage in which this word would not be made clearer and more real if "road to" were substituted for "way of."



FELLING TREES.

Weapons. [ARMS.].



Weasel (Lev. xi. 29). The Hebrew ought to be translated "mole." Moles are common in Palestine.

Weaving. The "vestures" Joseph wore (Gen. xli. 42) were of Egyptian looms. The Bible speaks of the beam to which the warp was attached (1 Sam. xvii. 7; 2 Sam. xxi. 19), and of the pin to which the cloth was fixed and on which rolled (Judg. xvi. 14). We have notice of the shuttle (Job vii. 6); the thrum which attached the web to the beam (Is. xxxviii. 12, margin); and the web itself (Judg xvi. 14; A.V. "beam"). The textures produced by Jewish weavers were various. The coarser kinds were made of goat's or camel's hair (Ex. xxvi. 7; Matt. iii. 4). Wool was used for ordinary clothing, while for finer work flax was used, varying in quality. The mixture of wool and flax in cloth for a garment was interdicted (Lev. xix. 19; Deut. xxii. 11).

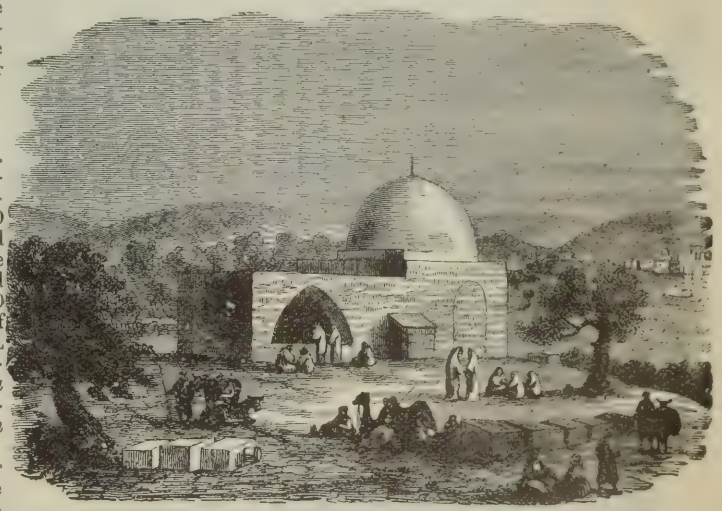
Wedding. [MARRIAGE.]

Week (Gen. viii. 10, xxix. 27). The week and the Sabbath are as old as man himself. In the N. T. we find such clear recognition of and familiarity with the week as needs scarcely be dwelt on. The Christian Church, from the very first, was familiar with it (1 Cor. xvi. 2).



Weeks, Feast of. [PENTECOST.]

Weights and Measures. A. WEIGHTS. A talent of silver, in Exodus, contained 3000 shekels, distinguished as the "shekel of the sanctuary." The gold talent contained 10,000 shekels. The chief Unit was the SHEKEL (i. e. weight), subdivided into the Beka (i. e. half) or half-shekel, and the Gerah (i. e. a grain or bean). The chief multiple, or higher unit, was the Kikkar, translated TALENT; subdivided into the Maneh. For Gold, a different SHEKEL was used. There appears to have been a third standard for Copper. B. MEASURES. I. MEASURES OF LENGTH.—In the Hebrew, as in every system, there are two classes; length and distance, or itinerary measures. The Hebrew lesser measures were the finger's breadth; the palm or handbreadth; the span. Three cubits were used, namely: (1.) The cubit of a man (Deut. iii. 11); (2.) The old Mosaic or legal cubit, a handbreadth larger than the first; (3.) The new cubit, still larger, agreed with the larger Egyptian cubit. The reed for measuring buildings was equal to six cubits. Of Measures of Distance the smallest is the pace, and the largest the day's journey. (a) The Pace (2 Sam. vi. 13), whether single or double, is defined as 30 inches for the former, and 5 feet for the latter. (b) The Day's Journey. The ordinary day's journey among the Jews was 30 miles; but when in companies, only 10 miles. (c) The Sabbath-day's Journey of 2000 cubits (Acts i. 12) would be six-tenths of a mile. (d) The stadium of 600 Greek feet is common in the N. T. Our version renders it furlong. The fathom is the full stretch of the two arms from tip to tip of middle finger, and in a man of full stature is six feet. II. MEASURES OF CAPACITY.—the absolute values of the liquid and dry measures are stated differently, and as we are unable to decide between them, we give a double estimate:

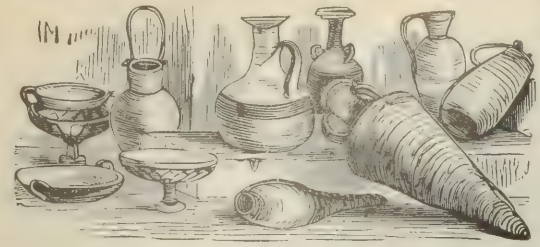
Well. The necessity of water (Judg. i. 15) in a hot climate has always involved questions of property of the highest importance. Wells in Palestine are usually excavated from solid limestone rock. The brims are furnished with a curb or low wall of stone. Water was raised by: 1. The rope and bucket, or water-skin; 2. The sakiyeh, or Persian wheel; 3. A lever moving on a pivot. Wells are usually furnished with troughs of wood or stone, into which water is emptied for the use of persons or animals. Women are usually the water-carriers.

Whale. The Hebrew terms tan and tannin are variously rendered by "dragon," "whale," "serpent," "sea-monster." The "great fish" that swallowed the prophet Jonah must have been a large specimen of the White Shark, that dreaded enemy of sailors, and the most voracious of Squalidae. This shark sometimes attains the length of thirty feet. The whole body of a man in armor has been found in the stomach of a white shark.

A TOMB ON THE ROAD FROM BETHLEHEM TO JERUSALEM.

Wheat. Syria and Palestine produced wheat of fine quality and in large quantities (Ps. cxlvii. 14, lxxxi. 16, &c.). Our Lord alludes to grains of wheat which in good ground produce a hundredfold (Matt. xiii. 8). Wheat is reaped towards the end of April, in May, and in June, according to soil and position.



Whirl'wind. The Hebrew conveys the notion of a violent wind or hurricane, not the specific notion of a whirl-wind.

ANCIENT VESSEL.

Widow. Widows were left dependent partly on relations, especially the eldest son, and partly on participation in the triennial third tithe (Deut xiv. 29, xxvi. 12). With regard to the remarriage of widows, see Deut. xxv. 5, 6; Matt. xxii. 23–30). In the Apostolic Church the widows were sustained at the public expense.

Wild Beasts. 1. Behemah, the general name for "domestic cattle," denotes "any large quadruped." 2. Chayyah is frequently used of "wild beast."

Wilderness of the Wandering. Uncertainties commence from the very starting-point of the route of the Wandering. It is impossible to fix the point at which in "the wilderness of Etham" (Num. xxxiii. 6, 7) Israel emerged from the sea. The direction in which the people started on their wanderings is defined, "by the way of the Red Sea" (Num. xiv. 25; Deut. i. 40), which seems clearly to mean down the Arabah to the head of the Elanitic Gulf.

WRITING MATERIALS.

Willows (Lev. xxiii 40; Job. xl. 22; Is. xliv. 4; Ps. cxxxvii. 2). The tree upon which the captive Israelites hung their harps was doubtless the weeping-willow.

Willows, The Brook of the, a wady (Isaiah xv. 7). One of the boundaries of the country.

Wills. Under a system of close inheritance like that of the Jews, the scope for bequest was limited. Houses in walled towns no doubt must have frequently been bequeathed by will (Lev. xxv. 30).

EASTERN WINE-PRESS.

Wimple, hood or veil (Is. iii. 22). The same word translated "veil" in Ruth iii. 15, signifies rather a shawl or mantle.

Window. In an Oriental house, an aperture closed in with lattice-work.

Winds. The Hebrews recognized four winds as issuing from the four cardinal points. In addition to the four regular winds, we have notice of local squalls (Mark iv. 37; Luke viii. 23). We meet with the term Lips to describe the south-west wind, Carus or Caurus the north-west wind (Acts xxvii. 12), and Euroclydon (Euraquilo, N.R.), a wind of very violent character from E. N. E. (Acts xxvii. 14).

Wine. The ripe fruit was carried to the wine-press, and placed in the upper of two receptacles and subjected to "treading." A certain amount of juice exuded from the ripe fruit from its own pressure. This was kept separate and formed the "sweet wine" (Acts ii. 13). The "treading" was effected by one or more men. The expressed juice escaped by an aperture into the lower vat. Sometimes wine was preserved in its unfermented state, and drunk as must, but generally it was bottled off after fermentation. The wines of Palestine varied. We have special notice of the wine of Helbon (Ez. xxvii. 18), and the wine of Lebanon, famed for its aroma (Hos. xiv. 7). In the early Christian Church it was usual to mix the sacramental wine with water.

ZEAL FOR THE TRUTH.

Wine-Press. Wine-presses of the Jews consisted of two vats at different elevations. The vats were usually hewn out of solid rock. Ancient wine-presses are still to be seen.

Winnowing. [AGRICULTURE.]

Wisdom of Jesus, Son of Sirach. [ECCLESIASTICUS.]

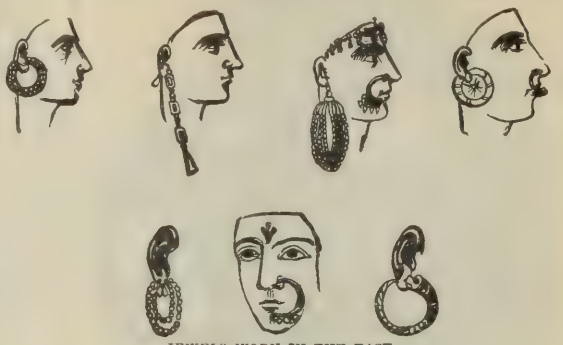
Wisdom, The, of Solomon, a book of the Apocrypha. From internal evidence, the book was composed in Greek at Alexandria some time before the time of Philo (about 120–80 B. C.).

Wise Men. [MAGI.]

TORCHBEARER.

Witch, Witchcrafts. [DIVINATION; MAGIC.]

Witness. Special provisions exist with reference to evidence in Num. xxxv. 30; John viii. 17; Num. v. 13; Lev. v. 1; Ex. xx. 16, xxiii. 1; Lev. xix. 16, 18, &c.; Deut. xiii. 9, xvi. 7; Acts vii. 58; Ex. xxii. 13.



Wizard. [DIVINATION; MAGIC.]

Wolf. The wolf of Palestine is the common Canis lupus. Wolves were doubtless common in Biblical times.

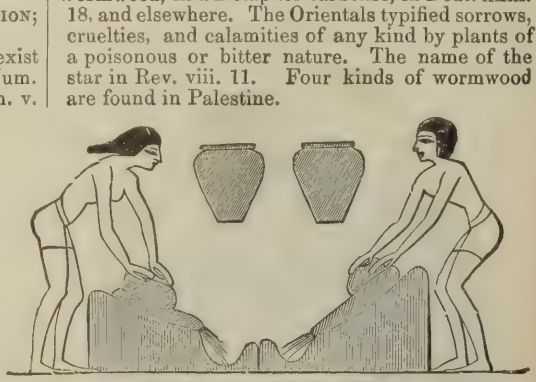
Women. The wives and maidens of ancient times mingled freely and openly in the affairs of ordinary life. Women took part in public celebrations (Ex. xv. 20, 21; Judg. xi. 34). The odes of Deborah (Judg. v.) and of Hannah (1 Sam. ii. 1, &c.) exhibit intellectual cultivation. Women also occasionally held public offices (Ex. xv. 20; 2 K. xxii. 14; Neh. vi. 14; Luke ii. 36; Judg. iv. 4). The management of household affairs devolved mainly on the women.

Wood. [FOREST.]

Wool, an article of highest value among the Jews, as the staple material for clothing (Lev. xiii. 47; Deut. xxii. 11; Job xxxi. 20; Prov. xxxi. 13; Ez.

JEWELS WORN IN THE EAST.

xxxiv. 3; Hos. ii. 5).

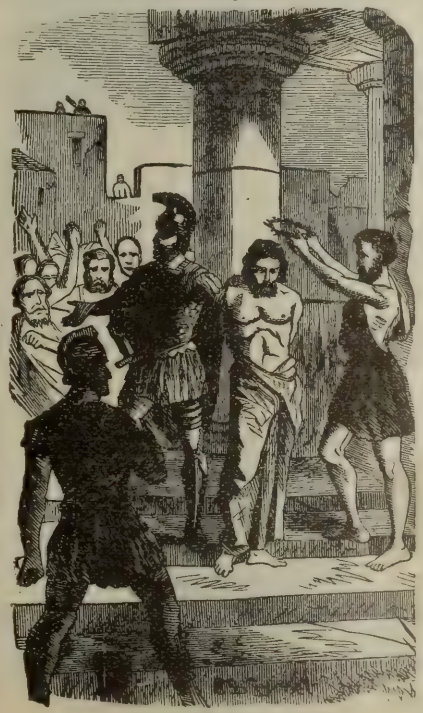


Woolen, Linen and. Israelites were forbidden to wear a garment of woolen and linen. The reason given by Josephus for the law is, that such were worn by the priests alone.

Worm, the representative of several Hebrew words. Sas (Is. li. 8) denotes some species of moth; Rimmah (Ex. xvi. 20) points to various kinds of maggots; Toleah (Deut. xxviii. 39) to larvae destructive to the vines. The death of Herod Agrippa I. was by worms (Acts xii. 23); according to Josephus, his death took place five days after his departure from the theatre.

WISDOM AND BRUTISHNESS.

Wormwood, in a metaphorical sense, in Deut. xxix. 18, and elsewhere. The Orientals typified sorrows, cruelties, and calamities of any kind by plants of a poisonous or bitter nature. The name of the star in Rev. viii. 11. Four kinds of wormwood are found in Palestine.



WASHING IN ANCIENT TIMES.

Worshipper, a translation of the Greek neocoros (Acts xix. 35, O.V.). The term became applied to communities which undertook the worship of emperors even during their lives. The first occurrence of the term in connection with Ephesus is on coins of the age of Nero (A. D. 54–68).

Wrestling. [GAMES.]

Writing. Writing is first mentioned in Ex. xvii. 14. and the connection implies that it was so familiar as to be used for historic records. Investigations have shown that the square Hebrew character has been formed from a more ancient type by a gradual process of developement, and this ancient type was probably Phoenician. The oldest evidence on the subject of the Hebrew alphabet is derived from the alphabetical Psalms and poems. From these we ascertain that the number of letters was twenty-two, as at present. Hebrew was originally written without any divisions between the words. The modern synagogue rolls and the MSS. of the Samaritan Pentateuch have no vowel points, but the words are divided. It is most probable that the ancient as well as the most common material which the Hebrews used for writing was dressed skin in some form or other. In the Bible the only allusions to the use of papyrus are in 2 John 12, and 3 Macc. iv. 20. Parchment was used for the MSS. of the Pentateuch in the time of Josephus. It was one of the provisions in the Talmud that the Law should be written on the skins of clean animals, tame or wild, or of clean birds. The skins when written upon were formed into rolls. The rolls were generally written on one side only. They were divided into columns (A. V. "leaves," Jer. xxxvi. 23). But besides skins, for permanent kinds of writing, tablets of wood covered with wax (Luke i. 63) served for ordinary purposes. They were written upon with a pointed style, sometimes of iron. For parchment of skins a reed was used. The ink was of lampblack dissolved in gall-juice. It was carried in an inkstand, suspended at the girdle. To professional scribes there are allusions in Ps. xlv. 1; Ezr. vii. 6; Esdr. xiv. 24.

X

Xăn'thicŭs, a Macedonian month, same as the Hebrew Nisan.

Xerx'es, the Ahasuerus of Esther (the names being also identical), as is shown by resemblance of character, by certain chronological indications, as well as by commonly received historical statements.

Y

Yarn. The notice of yarn is contained in an extremely obscure passage in 1 K. x. 28 (2 Chr. i. 16).

Year. A year of 360 days appears in use in Noah's time, or at least in the time of the writer of the narrative of the Flood. A year of 360 days is the rudest known. The Hebrew year, from the time of the Exodus, was evidently lunar, though in some manner rendered virtually solar. But it is certain that the months were lunar, each commencing with a new moon. There must therefore have been some method of adjustment. Probably the Hebrews determined their new year's day by the observation of heliacal or other star-risings or settings. The later Jews had two commencements of the year, whence it is said they had two years, the sacred and civil. We prefer to speak of the sacred and civil reckonings. The sacred reckoning was that instituted at the Exodus, according to which the first month was Abib; by the civil reckoning the first month was the seventh. The interval between the two was thus exactly half a year. The year was divided into—1. Seasons. Two seasons are mentioned in the Bible, "summer" and "winter." 2. Months. [MONTHS.] 3. Weeks. [WEEKS.]

Year, Sabbatical. [SABBATICAL YEAR.]

Year of Jubilee. [JUBILEE, YEAR OF.]

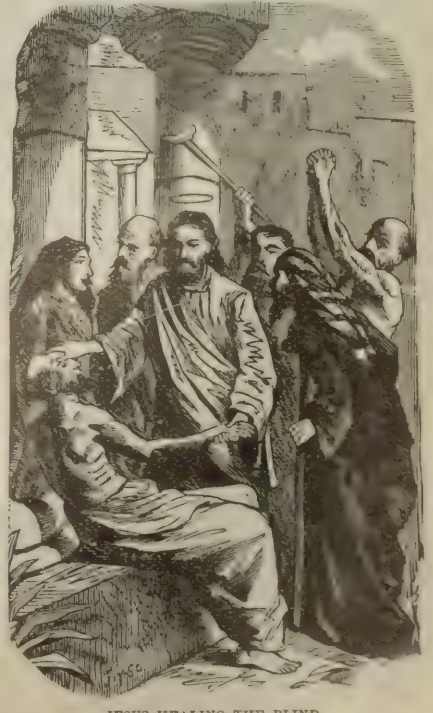
Yoke. 1. A well-known implement of husbandry, used metaphorically for subjection. 2. A pair of oxen, so termed (1 Sam. xi. 7; 1 K. xix. 19, 21). The Hebrew Term is also applied to asses (Judg. xix. 10) and mules (2 K. v. 17), and even to a couple of riders (Is. xxi. 7). 3. The term is also applied to land.

BAY OF NAPLES. NAPLES, SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF PUTEOLA.

Z

Zāanā'im, The Plain of, or "the oak of Zaanaim," a tree mentioned as marking the spot near which Heber the Kenite was encamped when Sisera took refuge in his tent (Judg. iv. 11). Its situation is defined "near Kedesh." Zaanannim is found in Josh. xix. 33.

Zăb'ade'ans, an Arab tribe attacked and spoiled by Jonathan, on his way back from his fruitless pursuit of the army of Demetrius (1 Macc. xii. 31).



Zab'bai, father of Baruch, who assisted Nehemiah in rebuilding the city wall (Neh. iii. 20).

Za'bud, son of Nathan (1 K. iv. 5), is described as a priest (A. V. "principal officer"), and as holding at the court of Solomon the post of "king's friend."

Zab'ulun, the Greek form of the name ZEBULUN (Matt. iv. 13, 15; Rev. vii. 8).

Zacchae'us, a tax-collector near Jericho, who, being short in stature, climbed up into a sycamore-tree in order to obtain a sight of Jesus as He passed through that place. (Luke xix. 1–10). Zacchaeus was a Jew. The term "the chief among the publicans" describes him, no doubt, as the superintendent of customs in the district where he lived. The office must have been a lucrative one.

Zachari'ah. 1. Or properly ZECHARIAH, son of Jeroboam II., 14th king of Israel, and last of the house of Jehu. There is a difficulty about the date of his reign. But whether we assume an interregnum or an error in the MSS., we must place Zachariah's accession B. C. 772–1. His reign lasted six months. He was killed in a conspiracy, of which Shallum was the head, and in fulfillment of prophecy (2 K. x. 30). 2. The father of Abi, or Abijah, Hezekiah's mother (2 K. xviii. 2).

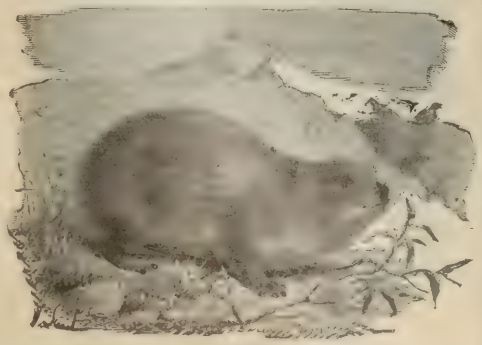
DAVID'S TOMB AT MT. ZION.



Zachari'as. 1. Father of John the Baptist (Luke i. 5, &c.). 2. Son of Barachias, who, our Lord says, was slain by the Jews between the altar and the temple (Matt. xxiii. 35; Luke xi. 51). There can be little or no doubt that the allusion is to EASTERN DEVICE.

Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada (2 Chr. xxiv. 20, 21).

Za'dok (just), son of Ahitub, and one of the two chief priests in the time of David, Abiathar being the other. Zadok was of the house of Eleazar, the son of Aaron (1 Chr. xxiv. 3), and eleventh in descent from Aaron (1 Chr. xii. 28). When Adonijah, in David's old age, set up for king, Zadok was unmoved, and was employed by David to anoint Solomon (1 K. i.). And for this fidelity he was rewarded by Solomon (1 K. ii. 27, 35). From this time we hear little of him. Zadok and Abiathar were of nearly equal dignity.

(2 Sam. xv. 35, 36, xix. 11). The duties of the office were divided.

Zal'mon, Mount, a wooded eminence in the neighborhood of Shechem (Judg. ix. 48). Dalmanutha has been supposed to be a corruption of Zalmon.

Zalmun'na. [ZEBAH.]

Zamzŭm'mims, the Ammonite name for the people who by others were called REPHAIM (Deut. ii. 20, only), described as originally a powerful nation of giants. It is conjectured that the Zamzummim are identical with the Zuzim.

Zăph'nath-pāanē'ah, a name given by Pharaoh to Joseph (Gen. xli. 45).

Zăr'ĕphăth, the residence of the prophet Elijah during the latter part of the drought (1 K. xvii. 9, 10). Beyond that it was near Zidon, the Bible gives no clew to its position. In the N. T. Zarephath appears under the Greek form of SAREPTA (Luke iv. 26, J. V.).

Zar'hites, The, a branch of Judah, descended from Zerah the son of Judah (Num. xxvi. 13, 20; Josh. vii. 17; 1 Chr. xxvii. 11, 13).

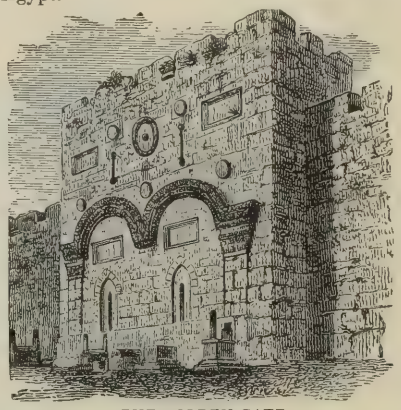
Zar'than. 1. A place in the circle of Jordan (1 K. vii. 46). 2. Named in the account of the passage of the Jordan (Josh. iii. 16), where the A. V. has Zaretan. 3. Zeredathah (2 Chr. iv. 17) is substituted for Zarthan; and this is perhaps identical with the Zererath of Judg. vii. 22.

Ze'bah and Zalmun'na, two "kings" of Midian who commanded the great invasion of Palestine, and who finally fell by the hand of Gideon himself (Judg viii. 5–21; Ps. lxxxiii. 11).

Zeb'edee, a fisherman of Galilee, the father of the Apostles James the Great and John (Matt. iv. 21), and the husband of Salome (Matt. xxvii.

ANCIENT SHIP, FROM ASSYRIAN MARBLE.

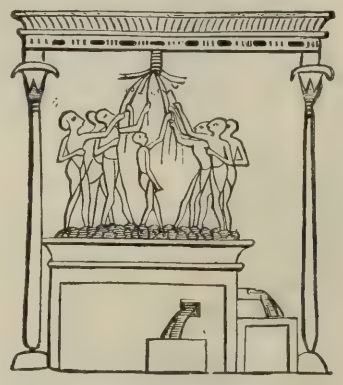
56; Mark xv. 40). He probably lived at Bethsaida or neighborhood.



Zebo'im. 1. One of the five cities of the circle of Jordan. It is mentioned in Gen. x. 19, xiv. 2, 8; Deut. xxix. 23; and Hos. xi. 8, with Admah. 2. THE VALLEY OF ZEBOIM, a ravine or gorge, apparently east of Michmash (1 Sam. xiii. 18).

Zebu'dah, wife of Josiah and mother of king Jehoiakim (2 K. xxiii. 36).

Ze'bul, chief (A. V. "ruler") of Shechem at the contest between Abimelech and the native Canaanites (Judg. ix. 28, 30, 36, 38, 41).



Zeb'ulonite (Judg. xii. 11, 12). Applied only to ELON, the one judge produced by the tribe (Judg. xii. 11, 12) of Zebulun.

Zĕb'ulŭn (a habitation), the tenth of the sons of Jacob; the sixth and last of Leah. His birth is recorded in Gen. xxx. 19, 20. Of the individual nothing is recorded. The list of Gen. xlvi. ascribes to him three sons, founders of the chief families of the tribe at the time of the migration to Egypt.

THE GOLDEN GATE.

Zechari'ah. 1. Eleventh in order of the twelve minor prophets, called the son of Berechiah, and grandson of Iddo; and in Ezra v. 1, vi. 14, the son of Iddo. Zechariah was priest as well as prophet. He entered upon his office young (Zech. ii. 4), and must have been born in Babylon, whence he returned with the first exiles under Zerubbabel and Jeshua. In the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, he first publicly discharged his office. In this he acted in concert with Haggai. Generally speaking, Zechariah's style is pure. THE BOOK OF ZECHARIAH consists of three parts, chs. i.–viii., chs. ix.–xi., chs. xii.–xiv. The first of these is allowed by all to be the genuine work of Zechariah. The Section xii.–xiv. is entitled "the burden of the word of Jehovah for Israel." Many maintain that the later chapters, from the 9th to the 14th, were written by some other prophet. The prophecy closes with a grand and stirring picture. 2. Son of the high-priest Jehoiada, in the reign of Joash (2 Chr. xxiv. 20), and the king's cousin. After Jehoiada, Zechariah probably succeeded to his office, and in attempting to check the reaction in favor of idolatry, he fell a victim to a conspiracy by the king, and was stoned in the court of the Temple. Probably the same as the "Zacharias son of Barachias," slain between the Temple and the altar (Matt. xxiii. 35).

Zĕdekī'ah. 1. The last king of Judah and Jerusalem, the son of Josiah. His original name, MATTANIAH, was changed to Zedekiah by Nebuchadnezzar, when he carried off Jehoiachim and left him on the throne of Jerusalem. Zedekiah was but 21 years old when placed in charge of the kingdom (B. C. 597). His history is contained in 2 K. xxiv. 17–xxv. 7, and in Jer. xxxix. 1-7, lii. 1-11, and in 2 Chr. xxxvi. 10, &c.; and also in Jer., xxi., xxiv., xxvii., xxviii., xxix., xxxii., xxxiii., xxxiv., xxxvii., xxxviii., and Ez. xvi. 11–21. From these it is evident that Zedekiah was weak in will. He revolted against Nebuchadnezzar and brought on Jerusalem an invasion of the Chaldeans. The city fell, and as the Chaldean army entered the king and his wives fled by the opposite gate. The king's party were overtaken and carried to Riblah. Nebuchadnezzar ordered the sons of Zedekiah killed before him, and his own eyes to be thrust out (B. C. 586). He was then loaded with fetters, and taken to Babylon, where he died. 2. Son of Chenaanah, a prophet at the court of Ahab. He appears but once (1 K. xxii.; 2 Chr. xviii.). 3. The son of Maaseiah, a false prophet in Babylon (Jer. xxix. 21, 22).

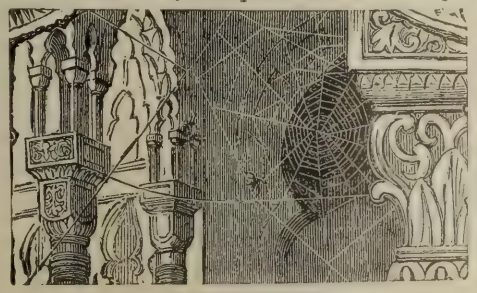
THE HARVEST.

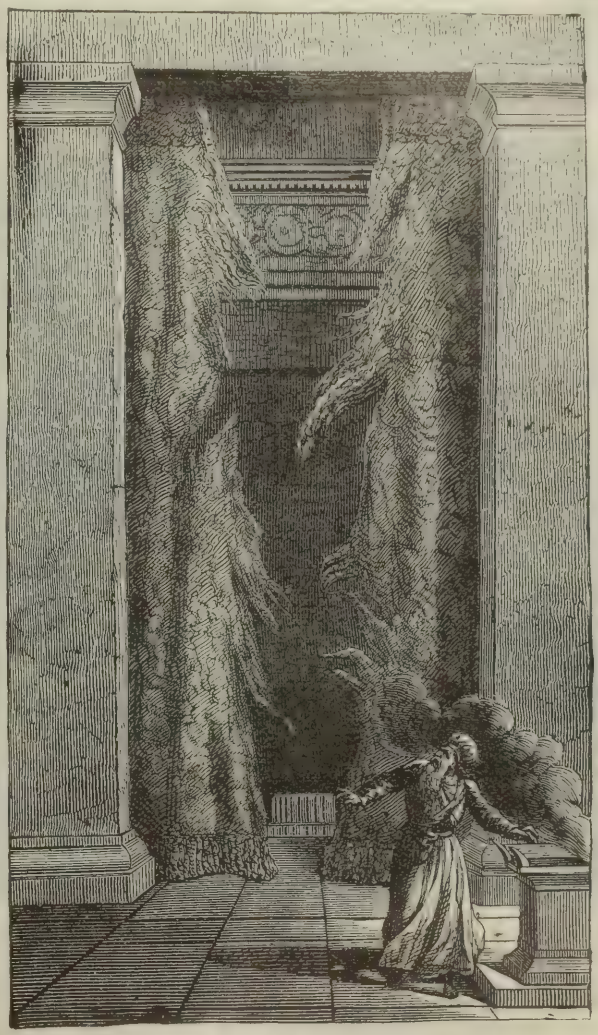


Zeeb, one of two "princes" of Midian (Judg. vii. 25, viii. 3; Ps. lxxxiii. 11). Zeeb and Oreb were slain in crossing the Jordan. Zeeb, the wolf, was brought to bay in a winepress.

Ze'lah, a city which (Josh. xviii. 28) contained the family tomb of Kish, father of Saul (2 Sam. xxi. 14.)

Zelo'phehad, son of Hepher (Josh. xvii. 3). Zelophehad came out of Egypt with Moses, but died (Num. xiv. 35, xxvii. 3). On his death without male heirs, his five daughters came before Moses and Eleazar to claim the inheritance. The claim was admitted by divine direction (Num. xxvi. 33, xxvii. 1–11).

Zelo'tes, (Zealot, N. R.) the epithet given to the Apostle Simon to distinguish him from Simon Peter (Luke vi. 15).



Ze'nas, a believer, and preacher of the Gospel, mentioned in Tit. iii. 13 with Apollos. He is further described as "the lawyer."

Zĕphanī'ah. 1. The ninth of the twelve minor prophets. His pedigree is traced to his fourth ancestor, Hezekiah (i. 1), supposed to be the celebrated king of that name. 2. The son of Maaseiah (Jer. xxi. 1). He succeeded Jehoiada (Jer. xxix. 25, 26), and was probably a ruler of the Temple. On the capture of Jerusalem he was slain at Riblah (Jer. lii. 24, 27; 2 K. xxv. 18, 21). THE BOOK OF. The chief characteristics are unity and harmony, and the rapid alternations of threats and promises. The tone is Messianic. The date is the reign of Josiah, from 642 to 611 B. C.

ZACHARIAS IN THE TEMPLE.

Zĕph'athah, The Valley of, in which Asa joined battle with Zerah the Ethiopian (2 Chr. xiv. 10).

Ze'phon, ZIPHION, son of Gad (Num. xxvi. 15), and ancestor of the ZEPHONITES.

Ze'rah. 1. Less properly, ZARAH, twin son, with Pharez, of Judah and Tamar (Gen. xxxviii. 30; 1 Chr. ii. 6; Matt. i. 3). 2. The Ethiopian defeated by Asa B. C. 941. Zerah is probably the Hebrew name of Usarken I., of the Egyptian xxiid dynasty, or Usarken II., his successor.

Zĕrahī'ah, a priest, son of Uzzi, and ancestor of Ezra the Scribe (1 Chr. vi. 6, 51; Ezr. vii. 4).

Ze'red (Deut. ii. 13, 14), or Za'red (Num. xxi. 12), a brook or valley running into the Dead Sea near its S. E. corner.

Zer'eda, the native place of Jeroboam (1 K. xi. 26). Zereda was, according to the LXX., on Mount Ephraim.

Ze'resh, the wife of Haman the Agagite (Esth. v. 10, 14, vi. 13).

Zeru'ah, the mother of Jeroboam the son of Nebat (1 K. xi. 26).

Zerub'babel (born at Babel, i. e. Babylon), the head of the tribe of Judah at the return from Babylonish Captivity in the first year of Cyrus. In the first year of Cyrus, at Babylon he was the recognized prince of Judah. He was appointed by the Persian king governor of Judaea. On arriving at Jerusalem, Zerubbabel's great work was the rebuilding of the Temple. After many hindrances, the Temple was finished, in the sixth year of Darius, and dedicated with much pomp. The other works of Zerubbabel are the restoration of the courses of priests and Levites, the registering the returned captives (Neh. vii. 5), and the keeping of a Passover. Zerubbabel's apocryphal history is told in 1 Esdr. iii.–vii. His exact parentage is a little obscure. He was the lineal descendant of Nathan the son of David. In the N. T. the name appears ZOROBABEL.

Zerui'ah, the mother of Abishai, Joab, and Asahel. She was the daughter of Nahash. Of Zeruiah's husband there is no mention.

Zi'ba, a person who plays a part, with no credit to himself, in one of the episodes of David's history (2 Sam. ix. 2–12, xvi. 1–4, xix. 17, 29).

Zib'iah, of Beersheba, and mother of King Joash (2 K. xii. 1; 2 Chr. xiv. 1).

Jehoiada (2 Chr. xxiii. 1). 3. An Ephraimite hero in the invading army of Pekah (2 Chr. xxviii. 7).

Zi'don, or Si'don (Gen. x. 15, 19; Josh. xi. 8, xix. 28; Judg. i. 31, &c.; Matt. xi. 21, 22; Luke vi. 17, &c.). An ancient wealthy city of Phoenicia, on the eastern coast of the Mediterranean, less than 20 miles north of Tyre. Its Hebrew name, Tsidon, signifies "Fishery." This city is inferior in interest to its neighbor Tyre, though in early times more influential. Zidon was threatened by Joel (iii. 4) and Jeremiah (xxvii. 3). One of its sources of gain was trade in slaves. The city was governed by kings (Jer. xxvii. 3, and xxv. 22), and at one period it was subject, in some sense, to Tyre. During the Persian domination, Zidon attained its highest prosperity. Its prosperity was cut short by revolt against Persia, which ended in the destruction of the town (B. C. 351). Forty thousand persons perished. Sidon became again a flourishing town. It is about fifty miles from Nazareth.

TRAVELERS RESTING.

Zĭdō'nians, the inhabitants of Zidon. They oppressed the Israelites at first (Judg. x. 12), and lived a luxurious, reckless life (Judg. xviii. 7); They were skilful in hewing timber (1 K. v. 6), and were employed for this purpose by Solomon. They worshipped Ashtoreth as their tutelary goddess (1 K. xi. 5, 33; 2 K. xxiii. 13), as well as the sun-god Baal, from whom their king was named (1 K. xvi. 31).

Zif (1 K. vi. 37). [Month.]

Zik'lag, the residence and private property of David. It was, at David's request, bestowed upon him by Achish king of Gath. He relinquished it for Hebron (ii. 1). The situation of the town is difficult to determine.

Zil'lah. [LAMECH.]

Zil'pah, a Syrian given by Laban to his daughter Leah as an attendant (Gen. xxix. 24), and by Leah to Jacob as a concubine. She was the mother of Gad and Asher (Gen. xxx. 9–13, xxxv. 26, &c.).

Zim'ran, the eldest son of Keturah (Gen. xxv. 2; 1 Chr. i. 32).

Zim'ri. 1. The son of Salu, slain by Phinehas (Num. xxv. 14). 2. Fifth sovereign of the separate kingdom of Israel, of which he occupied the throne for the brief period of seven days in the year B. C. 930 or 929. He gained the crown by the murder of king Elah. But the army proclaimed their general, Omri, king. Zimri retreated into the innermost part of the late king's palace, set it on fire, and perished in the ruins (1 K. xvi. 9–20).

Zin, the name given a portion of the desert tract between the Dead Sea, Ghor, Arabah, and the plateau of the Tih.

Zi'on. [JERUSALEM.]

Ziph, two towns in Judah. 1. In the south between Ithnan and Telem,

2. A town between Carmel and Juttah (Josh. xv. 55). The place is immortalized by its connection with David (1 Sam. xxiii. 14, 15, 24, xxvi. 2). The name Zif is found about three miles S. of Hebron.

Zi'phims, The, the inhabitants of ZIPH (Ps. liv.), called also, Zi'phites, The (1 Sam. xxiii. 19; xxvi. 1).

Zip'por, father of Balak king of Moab (Num. xxii. 2, 4, 10, 16, xxiii. 18; Josh. xxiv. 9; Judg. xi. 25).

Ziz, The Cliff of, the pass by which the Moabites, Ammonites, and Mehunim, made their way up from the Dead Sea to the wilderness of Judah near Tekoa (2 Chr. xx. 16 only; comp. 20). It was the pass of Ain Jidy.

Zi'za, son of Rehoboam by Maachah, the grand daughter of Absalom (2 Chr. xi. 20).

Zo'an, an ancient city of Lower Egypt. It stood on the eastern bank of the Tanitic branch of the Nile. This city is mentioned in connection with the Plagues in such a manner as to leave no doubt that it is the city spoken of in the narrative in Exodus as that where Pharaoh dwelt.

Zo'ar, one of the most ancient cities of Canaan. Its original name was BELA (Gen. xiv. 2, 8). It was in intimate connection with Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboiim. Zoar was spared to afford shelter to Lot (xix. 22, 23, 30). It is mentioned in Deut. xxxiv. 3, and was known in the times of Isaiah (xv. 5) and Jeremiah (xlviii. 34) in the Bible. It was situated evidently very near to Sodom (Gen. xix. 23, 27, 28).

BETHSAIDA TELL JULIAS (On the east of the Jordan. Here Christ fed the multitude of five thousand).

Zo'ba, or Zo'bah, the name of a portion of Syria. It probably was eastward of Coele-Syria. We first hear of Zobah in the time of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 47). Some forty years later we find Zobah under Hadadezer. He had wars with Toi (2 Sam. viii. 10). David (2 Sam. viii. 3) attacked Hadadezer and took chariots, horsemen and footmen. The wealth of Zobah is very apparent. Later they were again in arms against David (2 Sam. x. 9; 1 Chr. xix. 16). Zobah caused trouble to the Jewish kings. A man of Zobah, Rezon, son of Eliadah, proved a fierce adversary to Israel all through the reign of Solomon (1 K. xi. 23–25). Solomon also engaged in a war with Zobah itself (2 Chr. viii. 3). The name is found later in the Inscriptions of Assyria.

Zo'har. One of the sons of Simeon (Gen. xlvi. 10; Ex. vi. 15); called ZERAH in 1 Chr. iv. 24.

Zō'hĕleth, The Stone, "by En Rogel" (1 K. i. 9). In all likelihood not far from the well of the Virgin.

Zō'phāi, son of Elkanah and ancestor of Samuel (1 Chr. vi. 26 [11]), called ZUPH.

Zō'phar, one of the three friends of Job (Job ii. 11, xi. 1, xx. 1, xlii. 9).

Zō'phim, The Field of, a spot on Pisgah, from which Balaam had his second view of the encampment of Israel (Num. xxiii. 14).

Zō'rah (Josh. xix. 41), the residence of Manoah and the native place of Samson. It is mentioned amongst the places fortified by Rehoboam (2 Chr. xi. 10).

Zŭph, The Land of. A district at which Saul and his servant arrived after passing through those of Shalisha, of Shalim, and of the Benjamites (1 Sam. ix. 5, only). It contained the city in which they encountered Samuel (ver. 6), and that again was not far from the "tomb of Rachel." It may be identified with Soba, about seven miles west of Jerusalem.

Zŭph, a Kohathite Levite, ancestor of Elkanah and Samuel (1 Sam. i. 1; 1 Chr. vi. 35). In 1 Chr. vi. 26 he is called ZOPHAI.

Zur. 1. Father of Cozbi (Num. xxv. 15), and one of the five princes of Midian slain by the Israelites when Balaam fell (Num. xxxi. 8). 2. Son of Jehiel the founder of Gibeon (1 Chr. viii. 30, ix. 35, 36).

Zū'zims, The. An ancient people, who, lying in the path of Chedorlaomer and his allies, were attacked and overthrown by them (Gen. xiv. 5). The Zuzims perhaps inhabited the country of the Ammonites.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED GENESIS.

CHAPTER I.

Creation of heaven and earth, and of man in the image of God.

IN the [a]beginning [b]God created the heaven and the earth.
2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. [c]And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.
3 ¶[d]And God said, [e]Let there be light: and there was light.
4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided †the light from the darkness.
5 And God called the light [f]Day, and the darkness he called Night. †And the evening and the morning were the first day.
6 ¶And God said, [g]Let there be a †firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.
7 And God made the firmament, [h]and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were [i]above the firmament: and it was so.
8 And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.
9 ¶And God said, [k]Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.
10 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.
11 And God said, Let the earth [l]bring forth †grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding [m]fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.
12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.
13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.
14 ¶And God said, Let there be [n]lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide †the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and [o]for seasons, and for days, and years:
15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.
16 And God [p]made two great lights; the greater light †to rule the day, and [q]the lesser light to rule the night: he made [r]the stars also.
17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,
18 And to [s]rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.
19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.
20 ¶And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the ‖ moving creature that hath †life, and †fowl that may fly above the earth in the †open firmament of heaven.
21 And [u]God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.
22 And God blessed them, saying, [w]Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.
23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.
24 ¶And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES, COMMONLY CALLED GENESIS.

1 In the beginning God created the heaven and the
2 earth. And the earth was waste and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the spirit of God [1]moved upon the face of the waters.
3 And God said, Let there be light: and there was 4 light. And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.
5 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And there was evening and there was morning, one day.
6 And God said, Let there be a [2]firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from 7 the waters. And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and 8 it was so. And God called the firmament Heaven. And there was evening and there was morning, a second day.
9 And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry
10 land appear: and it was so. And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was 11 good. And God said, Let the earth put forth grass, herb yielding seed, and fruit tree bearing fruit after its kind, wherein is the seed thereof, upon the earth:
12 and it was so. And the earth brought forth grass, herb yielding seed after its kind, and tree bearing fruit, wherein is the seed thereof, after its kind: and 13 God saw that it was good. And there was evening and there was morning, a third day.
14 And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days
15 and years: and let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth:
16 and it was so. And God made the two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light
17 to rule the night: he made the stars also. And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give 18 light upon the earth, and to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the dark-
19 ness: and God saw that it was good. And there was evening and there was morning, a fourth day.
20 And God said, Let the waters [3]bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and let fowl fly above the earth [4]in the open firmament of heaven.
21 And God created the great sea-monsters, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kinds, and every winged fowl after its kind: and God saw that it was good.
22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl
23 multiply in the earth. And there was evening and there was morning, a fifth day.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶And God said, [z]Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and [y]let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image, [z]in the image of God created he him; [a]male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, [b]Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that †moveth upon the earth.

29 ¶And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb †bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; [c]to you it shall be for meat.

30 And to [d]every beast of the earth, and to every [e]fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is †life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And [f]God saw every thing that he had made, and behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

CHAPTER II.

The garden of Eden—Naming the creatures—Making of woman.

THUS the heavens and the earth were finished, and [a]all the host of them.

2 [b]And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

3 And God [c]blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God †created and made.

4 ¶[d]These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,

5 And every [e]plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not [f]caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man [g]to till the ground.

6 But ‖there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man †of the [h]dust of the ground, and [i]breathed into his [k]nostrils the breath of life; and [l]man became a living soul.

8 ¶And the LORD God planted [m]a garden [n]eastward in [o]E'den; and there [p]he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow [q]every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; [r]the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, [s]and the tree [t]of knowledge of good and evil.

10 ¶And a river went out of E'den to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pi'son: that is it which compasseth [u]the whole land of Hav'i-lah, where there is gold;

12 And the gold of that land is good: [w]there is bdellium and the onyx stone.

13 And the name of the second river is Gi'hon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of †E-thi-o'pi-a.

14 And the name of the third river is [x]Hid'de-kel: that is it which goeth ‖toward the east of As-syr'i-a. And the fourth river is Eu-phra'tes.

15 ¶And the LORD God took ‖the man, and [y]put him into the garden of E'den, to dress it and to keep it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden †thou mayest freely eat:

19 [e]And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and [f]brought them unto ||Ad'am to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Ad'am called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

20 And Ad'am †gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Ad'am there was not found a help meet for him.

21 ¶And the LORD God caused a [g]deep sleep to fall upon Ad'am, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

22 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, †made he a woman, and [h]brought her unto the man.

23 And Ad'am said, This is now [i]bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called †Woman, because she was [k]taken out of †man.

24 [l]Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

25 [m]And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not [n]ashamed.

CHAPTER III.

The serpent deceiveth Eve—Man's fall and banishment from paradise.

NOW [a]the serpent was [b]more subtile than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, †Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 [c]But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4 [d]And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then [e]your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was †pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, [f]and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; [g]and he did eat.

7 And [h]the eyes of them both were opened, [i]and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves ||aprons.

8 And they heard [k]the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the †cool of the day: and Ad'am and his wife [l]hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 ¶And the LORD God called unto Ad'am, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, [m]and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, [n]The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, [o]The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶And the LORD God said [p]unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and [q]dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

17 but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

18 And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help [1]meet
19 for him. And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto the man to see what he would call them: and whatsoever the man called every living creature, that was the name thereof.
20 And the man gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for [2]man there was not found an help meet for him.
21 And the LORD God caused a deep sleep to fall upon the man, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs,
22 and closed up the flesh instead thereof: and the rib, which the LORD God had taken from the man, [3]made he a woman, and brought her unto the 23 man. And the man said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called [4]Woman, because she was taken out of [5]Man.
24 Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they 25 shall be of one flesh. And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

3 Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye
2 shall not eat of [6]any tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, Of the fruit of the 3 trees of the garden we may eat: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye
4 touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto
5 the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as [7]God,
6 knowing good and evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was a delight to the eyes, and that the tree was [8]to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and she gave also unto
7 her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves
8 together, and made themselves [9]aprons. And they heard the [10]voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the [11]cool of the day: and the man and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the 9 LORD God amongst the trees of the garden. And the LORD God called unto the man, and said unto 10 him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy [10]voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I
11 was naked; and I hid myself. And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou 12 shouldest not eat? And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of 13 the tree, and I did eat. And the LORD God said unto the woman, What is this thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me,
14 and I did eat. And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou [12]above all cattle, and [12]above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

17 And unto Ad'am he said, [y]Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, [z]and hast eaten of the tree [a]of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: [b]cursed is the ground for thy sake; [c]in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

CHAPTER IV.

The murder of Abel and the curse of Cain.

AND Ad'am knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare || Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

2 And she again bare his brother †A'bel. And A'bel was †a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a [a]tiller of the ground.

3 And †in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought [b]of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

4 And A'bel, he also brought of [c]the firstlings of his †flock and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had [d]respect unto A'bel and to his offering:

5 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect, and Cain was very wroth, [e]and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not || be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door: and || unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 And Cain talked with A'bel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against A'bel his brother, and [f]slew him.

9 ¶And the LORD said unto Cain, [g]Where is A'bel thy brother? And he said, [h]I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

10 And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's †blood [i]crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

12 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, || My punishment is greater than I can bear.

14 [k]Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and [l]from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, [m]that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

15 and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall [1]bruise thy head, and thou shalt [1]bruise his

17 rule over thee. And unto Ad'am he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in [2]toil shalt

19 shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust
20 thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. And the man called his wife's name [3]Eve; because she

4 And the man knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, I have [4]gotten a
2 man with the help of the LORD. And again she bare his brother A'bel. And A'bel was a keeper of 3 sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground. And in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.
4 And A'bel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect

15 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him [n]sevenfold. And the LORD [o]set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

16 ¶And Cain [p]went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of E'den.

17 And Cain knew his wife; and she conceived, and bare †E'noch: and he builded a city, [q]and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, E'noch.

18 And unto E'noch was born I'rad: and I'rad begat Me-hu'ja-el: and Me-hu'ja-el begat Me-thu'sa-el: and Me-thu'sa-el begat †La'mech.

19 ¶And La'mech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was A'dah, and the name of the other Zil'lah.

20 And A'dah bare Ja'bal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Ju'bal: he was the [r]father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zil'lah, she also bare Tu'bal-cain, an †instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tu'bal-cain was Na'a-mah.

23 And La'mech said unto his wives, A'dah and Zil'lah, Hear my voice; ye wives of La'mech, hearken unto my speech: for ||I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man ||to my hurt.

24 [s]If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, truly La'mech seventy and sevenfold.

25 ¶And Ad'am knew his wife again, and she bare a son, and [t]called his name †||Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of A'bel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, [u]to him also there was born a son; and he called his name †E'nos: then began men ||[w]to call upon the name of the LORD.

CHAPTER V.

The genealogy, age, and death of the Patriarchs from Adam unto Noah.

THIS is the [a]book of the generations of Ad'am. In the day that God created man, in [b]the likeness of God made he him;

2 [c]Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Ad'am, in the day when they were created.

3 And Ad'am lived a hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image; and [d]called his name Seth:

4 [e]And the days of Ad'am after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: [f]and he begat sons and daughters:

5 And all the days that Ad'am lived were nine hundred and thirty years: [g]and he died.

6 And Seth lived a hundred and five years, and [h]begat E'nos:

7 And Seth lived after he begat E'nos eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters:

8 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

9 ¶And E'nos lived ninety years, and begat †Cai'nan.

10 And E'nos lived after he begat Cai'nan eight hundred and fifteen years, and begat sons and daughters:

11 And all the days of E'nos were nine hundred and five years: and he died.

12 ¶And Cai'nan lived seventy years, and begat †Ma-ha'la-le-el:

13 And Cai'nan lived after he begat Ma-ha'la-le-el eight hundred and forty years, and begat sons and daughters:

14 And all the days of Cai'nan were nine hundred and ten years: and he died.

15 ¶And Ma-ha'la-le-el lived sixty and five years, and begat †Ja'red:

16 And Ma-ha'la-le-el lived after he begat Ja'red eight hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters:

17 And all the days of Ma-ha'la-le-el were eight hundred ninety and five years: and he died.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the LORD appointed a sign for Cain, lest any finding him should smite him.

16 And Cain went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of [1]Nod, [2]on the east of E'den.

17 And Cain knew his wife: and she conceived, and bare E'noch: and he builded a city, and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, E'noch.

21 and have cattle. And his brother's name was Ju'bal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and 22 pipe. And Zil'lah, she also bare Tu'bal-cain, [3]the forger of every cutting instrument of [4]brass and iron: and the sister of Tu'bal-cain was Na'a-mah.

23 And La'mech said unto his wives:
A'dah and Zil'lah, hear my voice;
Ye wives of La'mech, hearken unto my speech:
For [5]I have slain a man [6]for wounding me,
And a young man for bruising me:

24 If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold,
Truly La'mech seventy and sevenfold.

25 And Ad'am knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name [7]Seth: For, said she, God [8]hath appointed me another seed instead of A'bel; for Cain

26 slew him. And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name E'nosh: then began men to call upon the name of the LORD.

Wickedness of the world—God's wrath—Order and form of the ark.

AND it came to pass, [a]when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,
2 That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they [b]took them wives of all which they chose.
3 And the LORD said, [c]My Spirit shall not always strive with man, [d]for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be a hundred and twenty years.
4 There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them: the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.
5 ¶And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that ‖every [e]imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil †continually.
6 And [f]it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it [g]grieved him at his heart.
7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; †both man and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.
8 But No'ah [h]found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

10 And No'ah begat three sons, [l]Shem, Ham, and Ja'pheth.

12 And God [o]looked upon the earth, and behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.
13 And God said unto No'ah, [p]The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; [q]and behold, I will destroy them ‖with the earth.

† Heb. nests.

18 And Ja'red lived an hundred sixty and two years,
19 and begat E'noch: and Ja'red lived after he begat E'noch eight hundred years, and begat sons and 20 daughters: and all the days of Ja'red were nine hundred sixty and two years: and he died.
21 And E'noch lived sixty and five years, and begat
22 Me-thu'se-lah: and E'noch walked with God after he begat Me-thu'se-lah three hundred years, and begat
23 sons and daughters: and all the days of E'noch were 24 three hundred sixty and five years: and E'noch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.
25 And Me-thu'se-lah lived an hundred eighty and 26 seven years, and begat La'mech: and Me-thu'se-lah lived after he begat La'mech seven hundred eighty 27 and two years, and begat sons and daughters: and all the days of Me-thu'se-lah were nine hundred sixty and nine years: and he died.
28 And La'mech lived an hundred eighty and two
29 years, and begat a son: and he called his name No'ah, saying, This same shall [1]comfort us for our work and for the toil of our hands, [2]because of the ground
30 which the LORD hath cursed. And La'mech lived after he begat No'ah five hundred ninety and five 31 years, and begat sons and daughters: and all the days of La'mech were seven hundred seventy and seven years: and he died.
32 And No'ah was five hundred years old: and No'ah begat Shem, Ham, and Ja'pheth.

[2] Or, which cometh from the ground.

6 And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the ground, and daughters were born
2 unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them
3 wives of all that they chose. And the LORD said, My spirit shall not [3]strive with man for ever, [4]for that he also is flesh: [5]yet shall his days be an hundred
4 and twenty years. The [6]Neph'i-lim were in the earth in those days, and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them: the same were the mighty
5 men which were of old, the men of renown. And the LORD saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the 6 thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the 7 earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the LORD said, I will [7]destroy man whom I have created from the face of the ground; both man, and beast, and creeping thing, and fowl of the air; for it repenteth
8 me that I have made them. But No'ah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

9 These are the generations of No'ah. No'ah was a
10 righteous man, and [8]perfect in his generations: No'ah walked with God. And No'ah begat three sons, Shem,
11 Ham, and Ja'pheth. And the earth was corrupt before
12 God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God saw the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.
13 And God said unto No'ah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy 14 them with the earth. Make thee an ark of gopher wood; [9]rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

16 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof: with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

17 [r]And behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven: and every thing that is in the earth shall die.

18 But with thee will I establish my covenant: and [s]thou shalt come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, [t]two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

20 Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind; two of every sort [u]shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

21 And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

Noah, his family, and living creatures enter the ark—The flood.

17 [p]And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lifted up above the earth.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 [s]And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

The ark resteth on Ararat—Noah buildeth an altar, and offereth sacrifice.

AND God [a]remembered No'ah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: [b]and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged.

5 And the waters †decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that No'ah opened [f]the window of the ark which he had made:

8 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground.

12 And he stayed yet other seven days, and sent forth the dove, which returned not again unto him any more.

2348. 13 ¶And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and No'ah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶And God spake unto No'ah, saying,

CHAPTER IX.

God's covenant signified by the rainbow—Noah replenisheth the world.

AND God blessed No'ah and his sons, and said unto them, [a]Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

2 [b]And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered.

3 [c]Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the [d]green herb have I given you [e]all things.

4 [f]But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

5 And surely your blood of your lives will I require: [g]at the hand of every beast will I require it, and [h]at the hand of man; at the hand of every [i]man's brother will I require the life of man.

6 [k]Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: [l]for in the image of God made he man.

7 And you, [m]be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶And God spake unto No'ah, and to his sons with him, saying,

9 And I, [n]behold, I establish [o]my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

10 [p]And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

11 And [q]I will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, [r]This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

13 I do set [s]my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And [u]I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember [w]the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto No'ah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' 19 wives with him: every beast, every creeping the earth, after their families, went forth out of 20 the ark. And No'ah builded an altar unto the LORD; and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the 21 altar. And the LORD smelled the sweet savour;

2 ish the earth. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air; with all wherewith the ground [2]teemeth, and all the fishes of the sea, into your liveth shall be food for you; as the green herb have 4 I given you all. But flesh with the life thereof, surely your blood, the blood of your lives, will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it;

6 man's brother, will I require the life of man. Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be 7 shed: for in the image of God made he man. And you, be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.
8 And God spake unto No'ah, and to his sons with 9 him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant 10 with you, and with your seed after you; and with every living creature that is with you, the fowl, the cattle, and every beast of the earth with you; of all that go out of the ark, even every beast of the earth.
11 And I will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of the flood; neither shall there any more be a flood 12 to destroy the earth. And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for 13 perpetual generations: [3]I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant 14 between me and the earth. And it shall come to 15 bow shall be seen in the cloud, and I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all 17 flesh that is upon the earth. And God said unto No'ah, This is the token of the covenant which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.
18 And the sons of No'ah, that went forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Ja'pheth: and Ham is the 19 father of Ca'naan. These three were the sons of No'ah: and of these was the whole earth overspread.

CHAPTER X.

The generations of Noah—Nimrod the first monarch.

NOW these are the generations of the sons of No'ah: Shem, Ham, and Ja'pheth: [a] and unto them were sons born after the flood.
2 [b] The sons of Ja'pheth; Go'mer, and Ma'gog, and Mad'a-i, and Ja'van, and Tu'bal, and Me'shech, and Ti'ras.
3 And the sons of Go'mer; Ash'ke-naz, and Ri'phath, and To-gar'mah.
4 And the sons of Ja'van; E-li'shah, and Tar'shish, Kit'tim, and || Do-da'nim.
5 By these were [c] the isles of the Gen'tiles divided in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations.
6 ¶ [d] And the sons of Ham; Cush, and Miz'ra-im, and Phut and Ca'naan.
7 And the sons of Cush; Se'ba, and Hav'i-lah, and Sab'tah, and Ra'a-mah, and Sab'te-cha: and the sons of Ra'a-mah; She'ba, and De'dan.
8 And Cush begat Nim'rod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.
9 He was a mighty [e] hunter [f] before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nim'rod the mighty hunter before the LORD.
10 [g] And the beginning of his kingdom was †Ba'bel, and E'rech, and Ac'cad, and Cal'neh, in the land of Shi'nar.
11 Out of that land || went forth As'shur, and builded Nin'e-veh, and || the city Re-ho'both, and Ca'lah,
12 And Re'sen between Nin'e-veh and Ca'lah: the same is a great city.
13 And Miz'ra-im begat Lu'dim, and An'a-mim, and Le'ha-bim, and Naph'tu-him, 14 And Path-ru'sim, and Cas-lu'him ([h] out of whom came Phi-lis'tim,) and Caph'to-rim.
15 ¶ And Ca'naan begat †Si'don his firstborn, and Heth,
16 And the Jeb'u-site, and the Am'o-rite, and the Gir'ga-site,
17 And the Hi'vite, and the Ark'ite, and the Sin'ite,
18 And the Ar'va-dite, and the Zem'a-rite, and the Ham'ath-ite: and afterward were the families of the Ca'naan-ites spread abroad.
19 [i] And the border of the Ca'naan-ites was from Si'don, as thou comest to Ge'rar, unto †Ga'za; as thou goest unto Sod'om and Go-mor'rah, and Ad'mah, and Ze-bo'im, even unto La'sha.

CHAPTER XI.

Building the tower of Babel—The confusion of tongues.

AND the whole earth was of one †language, and of one †speech.

2 And it came to pass, as they journeyed || from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shi'nar; and they dwelt there.

3 And †they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and †burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.

4 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city, and a tower, [a]whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

5 [b]And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

6 And the LORD said, Behold, [c]the people is one, and they have all [d]one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have [e]imagined to do.

7 Go to, [f]let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may [g]not understand one another's speech.

8 So [h]the LORD scattered them abroad from thence [i]upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called || Ba'bel: [k]because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

10 ¶ [l]These are the generations of Shem: Shem was a hundred years old, and begat Ar-phax'ad two years after the flood:

11 And Shem lived after he begat Ar-phax'ad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

12 And Ar-phax'ad lived five and thirty years, [m]and begat Sa'lah.

13 And Ar-phax'ad lived after he begat Sa'lah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

14 And Sa'lah lived thirty years, and begat E'ber:

15 And Sa'lah lived after he begat E'ber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

16 [n]And E'ber lived four and thirty years, and begat [o]Pe'leg:

17 And E'ber lived after he begat Pe'leg four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

18 And Pe'leg lived thirty years, and begat Re'u:

19 And Pe'leg lived after he begat Re'u two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

E'ber [1]the elder brother of Ja'pheth, to him also 22 were children born. The sons of Shem; E'lam, and As'shur, and Ar pach'shad, and Lud, and A'ram.
23 And the sons of A'ram; Uz, and Hul, and Ge'ther, 24 and Mash. And Ar-pach'shad [2]begat She'lah; and 25 She'lah begat E'ber. And unto E'ber were born two sons: the name of the one was [3]Pe'leg; for in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's
26 name was Jok'tan. And Jok'tan begat Al-mo'dad, 27 and She'leph, and Ha-zar-ma'veth, and Je'rah; and 28 Ha-do'ram, and U'zal, and Dik'lah; and [4]O'bal, and 29 A-bim'a-el, and She'ba; and O'phir, and Hav'i-lah, and 30 Jo'bab: all these were the sons of Jok'tan. And their dwelling was from Me'sha, as thou goest
31 toward Se'phar, the [5]mountain of the east. These are the sons of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.
32 These are the families of the sons of No'ah, after their generations, in their nations: and of these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.

11 And the whole earth was of one [6]language and of
2 one [7]speech. And it came to pass, as they journeyed [8]east, that they found a plain in the land of
3 Shi'nar; and they dwelt there. And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them throughly. And they had brick for stone, and
4 [9]slime had they for mortar. And they said, Go to, let us build us a city, and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven, and let us make us a name; lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the 5 whole earth. And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men
6 builded. And the LORD said, Behold, they are one people, and they have all one language; and this is what they begin to do: and now nothing will be withholden from them, which they purpose
7 to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one
8 another's speech. So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth:
9 and they left off to build the city. Therefore was the name of it called Ba'bel; because the LORD did there [10]confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.
10 These are the generations of Shem. Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Ar-pach'shad two 11 years after the flood: and Shem lived after he begat Ar-pach'shad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.
12 And Ar-pach'shad lived five and thirty years, and 13 begat She'lah: and Ar-pach'shad lived after he begat She'lah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.
14 And She'lah lived thirty years, and begat E'ber:
15 and She'lah lived after he begat E'ber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.
16 And E'ber lived four and thirty years, and begat
17 Pe'leg: and E'ber lived after he begat Pe'leg four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.
18 And Pe'leg lived thirty years, and begat Re'u:
19 and Pe'leg lived after he begat Re'u two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

CHAPTER XII.

God calleth Abram, and blesseth him—He buildeth an altar unto the Lord.

NOW the [a]LORD had said unto A'bram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:
2 [b]And I will make of thee a great nation, [c]and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; [d]and thou shalt be a blessing:
3 [e]And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: [f]and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.
4 So A'bram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and A'bram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Ha'ran.
5 And A'bram took Sa'rai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and [g]the souls that they had gotten [h]in Ha'ran; and they went forth to go into the land of Ca'naan; and into the land of Ca'naan they came.
6 ¶And A'bram [i]passed through the land unto the place of Si'chem, [k]unto the plain of Mo'reh. [l]And the Ca'naan-ite was then in the land.
7 [m]And the LORD appeared unto A'bram, and said, [n]Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an [o]altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.
8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Ha'i on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and [p]called upon the name of the LORD.
9 And A'bram journeyed, †[q]going on still toward the south.
10 ¶And there was [r]a famine in the land: and [s]A'bram went down into E'gypt to sojourn there; for the famine was [t]grievous in the land.
11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into E'gypt, that he said unto Sa'rai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art [u]a fair woman to look upon:

B. C. 2185.

20 And Re'u lived two and thirty years, and begat
21 Se'rug: and Re'u lived after he begat Se'rug two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.
22 And Se'rug lived thirty years, and begat Na'hor:
23 and Se'rug lived after he begat Na'hor two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.
24 And Na'hor lived nine and twenty years, and 25 begat Te'rah: and Na'hor lived after he begat Te'rah an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters.
26 And Te'rah lived seventy years, and begat A'bram, Na'hor, and Ha'ran.
27 Now these are the generations of Te'rah. Te'rah begat A'bram, Na'hor, and Ha'ran; and Ha'ran begat
28 Lot. And Ha'ran died in the presence of his father Te'rah in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chal'-
29 dees. And A'bram and Na'hor took them wives: the name of A'bram's wife was Sa'rai; and the name of Na'hor's wife, Mil'cah, the daughter of Ha'ran, the 30 father of Mil'cah, and the father of Is'cah. And 31 Sa'rai was barren; she had no child. And Te'rah took A'bram his son, and Lot the son of Ha'ran, his son's son, and Sa'rai his daughter in law, his son A'bram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chal'dees, to go into the land of Ca'naan;
32 and they came unto Ha'ran, and dwelt there. And the days of Te'rah were two hundred and five years: and Te'rah died in Ha'ran.

12 Now the LORD said unto A'bram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will shew thee:
2 and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and be thou
3 a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse; and in thee
4 shall all the families of the earth be blessed. So A'bram went, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and A'bram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Ha'ran.
5 And A'bram took Sa'rai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Ha'ran; and they went forth to go into the land of Ca'naan; and
6 into the land of Ca'naan they came. And A'bram passed through the land unto the place of She'chem, unto the [1]oak of Mo'reh. And the Ca'naan-ite was 7 then in the land. And the LORD appeared unto A'bram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land; and there builded he an altar unto the LORD,
8 who appeared unto him. And he removed from thence unto the mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and A'i on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the 9 LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD. And A'bram journeyed, going on still toward the [2]South.
10 And there was a famine in the land: and A'bram went down into E'gypt to sojourn there; for the 11 famine was sore in the land. And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into E'gypt, that he said unto Sa'rai his wife, Behold now, I know that 12 thou art a fair woman to look upon: and it shall come to pass, when the E-gyp'tians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife: and they will 13 kill me, but they will save thee alive. Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake, and that my soul may live because of thee.

[1] Or, terebinth
[2] Heb. Negeb, the southern tract of Judah.

14 ¶And it came to pass, that, when A'bram was come into E'gypt, the E-gyp'tians [v]beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The princes also of Pha'raoh saw her, and commended her before Pha'raoh: and the woman was [x]taken into Pha'raoh's house.

16 And he [a]entreated A'bram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and menservants, and maidservants, and she-asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD [b]plagued Pha'raoh and his house with great plagues, because of Sa'rai, A'bram's wife.

18 And Pha'raoh called A'bram, and said, [c]What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 [d]And Pha'raoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

CHAPTER XIII.

Abram and Lot return out of Egypt—God reneweth the promise to Abram.

AND A'bram went up out of E'gypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, [e]into the south.

2 [b]And A'bram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys [c]from the south even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Ha'i;

4 Unto the [d]place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there A'bram [e]called on the name of the LORD.

5 ¶And Lot also, which went with A'bram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

6 And [f]the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 And there was [g]a strife between the herdmen of A'bram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: [h]and the Ca'naan-ite and the Per'iz-zite dwelt then in the land.

8 And A'bram said unto Lot, [i]Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be †brethren.

9 [k]Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: [l]if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all [m]the plain of Jor'dan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD [n]destroyed Sod'om and Go-mor'rah, [o]even as the garden of the LORD, like the land of E'gypt, as thou comest unto [p]Zo'ar.

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jor'dan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 A'bram dwelt in the land of Ca'naan, and Lot [q]dwelt in the cities of the plain, and [r]pitched his tent toward Sod'om.

13 But the men of Sod'om [s]were wicked, and [t]sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶And the LORD said unto A'bram, after that Lot [u]was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art [w]northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

15 For all the land which thou seest, [x]to thee will I give it, and [y]to thy seed for ever.

16 And [z]I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 Then A'bram removed his tent, and came and [a]dwelt in the †plain of Mam're, [b]which is in He'bron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.

14 And it came to pass, that, when A'bram was come into E'gypt, the E-gyp'tians beheld the woman
15 that she was very fair. And the princes of Pha'raoh saw her, and praised her to Pha'raoh: and 16 the woman was taken into Pha'raoh's house. And he entreated A'bram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and menservants, and 17 maidservants, and she-asses, and camels. And the LORD plagued Pha'raoh and his house with great 18 plagues because of Sa'rai A'bram's wife. And Pha'raoh called A'bram, and said, What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that 19 she was thy wife? Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so that I took her to be my wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.
20 And Pha'raoh gave men charge concerning him: and they brought him on the way, and his wife, and all that he had.

13 And A'bram went up out of E'gypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the
2 South. And A'bram was very rich in cattle, in 3 silver, and in gold. And he went on his journeys from the South even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el
4 and A'i; unto the place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there A'bram called on
5 the name of the LORD. And Lot also, which went
6 with A'bram, had flocks, and herds, and tents. And the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that
7 they could not dwell together. And there was a strife between the herdmen of A'bram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: and the Ca'naan-ite and the 8 Per'iz-zite dwelled then in the land. And A'bram said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy 9 herdmen; for we are brethren. Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou take the right hand, then I will 10 go to the left. And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the [1]Plain of Jor'dan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sod'om and Go-mor'rah, like the garden of the LORD, like the land of E'gypt, as thou goest unto Zo'ar.
11 So Lot chose him all the Plain of Jor'dan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the 12 one from the other. A'bram dwelled in the land of Ca'naan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the Plain,
13 and moved his tent as far as Sod'om. Now the men of Sod'om were wicked and sinners against the LORD
14 exceedingly. And the LORD said unto A'bram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward:
15 for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give 16 it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed
17 also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for unto 18 thee will I give it. And A'bram moved his tent, and came and dwelt by the [2]oaks of Mam're, which are in He'bron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.

CHAPTER XIV.

Battle of the kings—Lot is taken prisoner—Melchizedek blesseth Abram.

B. C. about 1719.

AND it came to pass in the days of Am'ra-phel king [a]of Shi'nar, A'ri-och king of El'la-sar, Ched-or-la'o-mer king of [b]E'lam, and Ti'dal king of nations;

2 That these made war with Be'ra king of Sod'om, and with Bir'sha king of Go-mor'rah, Shi'nab king of [c]Ad'mah, and Shem'-e-ber king of Ze-bo'i-im, and the king of Be'la, which is [d]Zo'ar.

3 All these were joined together in the vale of Sid'dim, [e]which is the salt sea.

4 Twelve years [f]they served Ched-or-la'o-mer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Ched-or-la'o-mer, and the kings that were with him, and smote [g]the Reph'a-im [h]in Ash'te-roth Kar'na-im, and [i]the Zu'zim in Ham, [k]and the E'mim in || Sha'veh Kir-i-a-tha'im,

6 [l]And the Ho'rites in their mount Se'ir, unto || El-pa'ran, which is by the wilderness.

7 And they returned, and came to En-mish'pat, which is Ka'desh, and smote all the country of the Am'a-lek-ites, and also the Am'o-rites, that dwelt [m]in Haz'e-zon-ta'mar.

8 And there went out the king of Sod'om, and the king of Go-mor'rah, and the king of Ad'mah, and the king of Ze-bo'i-im, and the king of Be'la, (the same is Zo'ar;) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Sid'dim;

9 With Ched-or-la'o-mer the king of E'lam, and with Ti'dal king of nations, and Am'ra-phel king of Shi'nar, and A'ri-och king of El'la-sar; four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Sid'dim was full of [n]slime pits; and the kings of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah fled, and fell there; and they that remained fled [o]to the mountain.

11 And they took [p]all the goods of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah, and all their victuals, and went their way.

12 And they took Lot, A'bram's [q]brother's son, [r]who dwelt in Sod'om, and his goods, and departed.

13 ¶ And there came one that had escaped, and told A'bram the He'brew; for [s]he dwelt in the plain of Mam're the Am'o-rite, brother of Esh'col, and brother of A'ner: [t]and these were confederate with A'bram.

14 And when A'bram heard that [u]his brother was taken captive, he || armed his || trained servants, [w]born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them [x]unto Dan.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and [y]smote them, and pursued them unto Ho'bah, which is on the left hand of Da-mas'cus.

16 And he brought back [z]all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

17 ¶ And the king of Sod'om [a]went out to meet him, [b](after his return from the slaughter of Ched-or-la'o-mer, and of the kings that were with him,) at the valley of Sha'veh, which is the [c]king's dale.

18 And [d]Mel-chiz'e-dek king of Sa'lem brought forth bread and wine: and he was [e]the priest of [f]the most high God.

19 And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be A'bram of the most high God, [g]possessor of heaven and earth:

20 And [h]blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes [i]of all.

21 And the king of Sod'om said unto A'bram, Give me the †persons, and take the goods to thyself.

22 And A'bram said to the king of Sod'om, I [k]have lifted up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, [l]the possessor of heaven and earth,

23 That [m]I will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made A'bram rich:

24 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men [n]which went with me, A'ner, Esh'col, and Mam're; let them take their portion.

14 And it came to pass in the days of Am'ra-phel king of Shi'nar, A'ri-och king of El'la-sar, Ched-or-la'o-mer king of E'lam, and Ti'dal king of [1]Go'i-im,
2 that they made war with Be'ra king of Sod'om, and with Bir'sha king of Go-mor'rah, Shi'nab king of Ad'mah, and Shem'e-ber king of Ze-bo'i-im, and the 3 king of Be'la (the same is Zo'ar). All these [2]joined together in the vale of Sid'dim (the same is the Salt
4 Sea). Twelve years they served Ched-or-la'o-mer,
5 and in the thirteenth year they rebelled. And in the fourteenth year came Ched-or-la'o-mer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the Reph'a-im in Ash'te-roth-kar'na-im, and the Zu'zim in Ham, and
6 the E'mim in [3]Sha'veh-kir-i-a-tha'im, and the Ho'rites in their mount Se'ir, unto El-pa'ran, which is by the 7 wilderness. And they returned, and came to En-mish'pat (the same is Ka'desh), and smote all the [4]country of the Am'a-lek-ites, and also the Am'o-rites,
8 that dwelt in Haz'a-zon-ta'mar. And there went out the king of Sod'om, and the king of Go-mor'rah, and the king of Ad'mah, and the king of Ze-bo'i-im, and the king of Be'la (the same is Zo'ar); and they set the battle in array against them in the vale of Sid'-
9 dim; against Ched-or-la'o-mer king of E'lam, and Ti'dal king of Go'i-im, and Am'ra-phel king of Shi'-nar, and A'ri-och king of El'la-sar; four kings against 10 the five. Now the vale of Sid'dim was full of [5]slime pits; and the kings of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah fled, and they fell there, and they that remained fled to 11 the mountain. And they took all the goods of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah, and all their victuals, and 12 went their way. And they took Lot, A'bram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sod'om, and his goods,
13 and departed. And there came one that had escaped, and told A'bram the He'brew: now he dwelt by the [6]oaks of Mam're the Am'o-rite, brother of Esh'col, and brother of A'ner; and these were 14 confederate with A'bram. And when A'bram heard that his brother was taken captive, he led forth his trained men, born in his house, three hundred and 15 eighteen, and pursued as far as Dan. And he divided himself against them by night, he and his servants, and smote them, and pursued them unto Ho'bah, which is on the [7]left hand of Da-mas'cus.
16 And he brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and 17 the women also, and the people. And the king of Sod'om went out to meet him, after his return from the slaughter of Ched-or-la'o-mer and the kings that were with him, at the vale of Sha'veh (the same is 18 the King's Vale). And Mel-chiz'e-dek king of Sa'lem brought forth bread and wine: and he was priest
19 of [8]God Most High. And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be A'bram of [8]God Most High, [9]pos-
20 sessor of heaven and earth: and blessed be [8]God Most High, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him a tenth of all.
21 And the king of Sod'om said unto A'bram, Give me
22 the persons, and take the goods to thyself. And A'bram said to the king of Sod'om, I have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, [8]God Most High, [9]pos-
23 sessor of heaven and earth, that I will not take a thread nor a shoelatchet nor aught that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made A'bram rich:
24 [10]save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me; A'ner, Esh'col, and Mam're, let them take their portion.

CHAPTER XV.

Abram justified by faith—Canaan promised, and confirmed by a vision.

B. C. about 1913.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto A'bram [a]in a vision, saying, [b]Fear not, A'bram: I am thy [c]shield, and thy exceeding [d]great reward.

2 And A'bram said, Lord GOD, what wilt thou give me, [e]seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this E'li-e'zer of Da-mas'cus?

3 And A'bram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, [f]one born in my house is mine heir.

4 And behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that [g]shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and [h]tell the [i]stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, [k]So shall thy seed be.

6 And he [l]believed in the LORD; and he [m]counted it to him for righteousness.

7 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that [n]brought thee out of [o]Ur of the Chal'dees, [p]to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord GOD, [q]whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me a heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and [r]divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but [s]the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcasses, A'bram drove them away.

12 And when the sun was going down, [t]a deep sleep fell upon A'bram; and, lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto A'bram, Know of a surety [u]that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and [w]they shall afflict them four hundred years;

14 And also that nation, whom they shall serve, [x]will I judge: and afterward [y]shall they come out with great substance.

15 And [z]thou shalt go [a]to thy fathers in peace; [b]thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

16 But [c]in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity [d]of the Am'o-rites [e]is not yet full.

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and †a burning lamp that [f]passed between those pieces.

18 In that same day the LORD [g]made a covenant with A'bram, saying, [h]Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of E'gypt unto the great river, the river Eu-phra'tes:

19 The Ken'ites, and the Ken'iz-zites, and the Kad'mon-ites,

CHAPTER XVI.

Sarai being barren giveth Hagar to Abram—Ishmael is born.

NOW Sa'rai, A'bram's wife, [a]bare him no children: and she had a handmaid, an [b]E-gyp'tian, whose name was [c]Ha'gar.

2 [d]And Sa'rai said unto A'bram, Behold now, the LORD [e]hath restrained me from bearing: I pray [f]thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may †obtain children by her. And A'bram [g]hearkened to the voice of Sa'rai.

3 And Sa'rai, A'bram's wife, took Ha'gar her maid the E-gyp'tian, after A'bram [h]had dwelt ten years in the land of Ca'naan, and gave her to her husband A'bram to be his wife.

4 ¶And he went in unto Ha'gar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was[i] despised in her eyes.

5 And Sa'rai said unto A'bram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: [k]the LORD judge between me and thee.

15 After these things the word of the LORD came unto A'bram in a vision, saying, Fear not, A'bram: I am thy shield, [1]and thy exceeding great reward.
2 And A'bram said, O Lord [2]GOD, what wilt thou give me, seeing I [3]go childless, and he that shall be possessor of my house is [4]Dam'me-sek E'li-e'zer?
3 And A'bram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir.
4 And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This man shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall
5 be thine heir. And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to tell them: and he said unto 6 him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed in the LORD; and he counted it to him for righteousness.
7 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chal'dees, to give thee this
8 land to inherit it. And he said, O Lord GOD,
9 whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it? And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove, and a young
10 pigeon. And he took him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each half over against 11 the other: but the birds divided he not. And the birds of prey came down upon the carcases, and 12 A'bram drove them away. And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon A'bram; and, lo,
13 an horror of great darkness fell upon him. And he said unto A'bram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four 14 hundred years; and also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they 15 come out with great substance. But thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a 16 good old age. And in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the 17 Am'o-rite is not yet full. And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a flaming torch that passed 18 between these pieces. In that day the LORD made a covenant with A'bram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of E'gypt unto the 19 great river, the river Eu-phra'tes: the Ken'ite, and 21 and the Per'iz-zite, and the Reph'a-im, and the Am'o-rite, and the Ca'naan-ite, and the Gir'ga-shite, and the Jeb'u-site.

2 was Ha'gar. And Sa'rai said unto A'bram, Behold now, the LORD hath restrained me from bearing; go in, I pray thee, unto my handmaid; it may be that I shall [5]obtain children by her. And A'bram hark-
3 ened to the voice of Sa'rai. And Sa'rai A'bram's wife took Ha'gar the Egyptian, her handmaid, after A'bram had dwelt ten years in the land of Ca'naan, and gave
4 her to A'bram her husband to be his wife. And he went in unto Ha'gar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was despised

6 [l]But A'bram said unto Sa'rai, [m]Behold, thy maid is in thy hand; do to her †as it pleaseth thee. And when Sa'rai †dealt hardly with her, [n]she fled from her face.

7 ¶ And the angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, [o]by the fountain in the way to [p]Shur.

8 And he said, Ha'gar, Sa'rai's maid, whence camest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sa'rai.

9 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and [q]submit thyself under her hands.

10 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, [r]I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

11 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, [s]and shalt call his name || Ish'ma-el; because the LORD hath heard thy affliction.

12 [t]And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him: [u]and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

13 And she called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him [x]that seeth me?

14 Wherefore the well was called [y]|| Be'er-la-hai'-roi; behold, it is [z]between Ka'desh and Be'red.

15 ¶ And [a]Ha'gar bare A'bram a son: and A'bram called his son's name, which Ha'gar bare, [b]Ish'ma-el.

16 And A'bram was fourscore and six years old, when Ha'gar bare Ish'ma-el to A'bram.

CHAPTER XVII.

God reneweth his covenant—Circumcision instituted—Isaac is promised.

AND when A'bram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD [a]appeared to A'bram, and said unto him, [b]I am the Almighty God; [c]walk before me, and be thou || [d]perfect.

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and [e]will multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And A'bram [f]fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be [g]a father of †many nations.

5 Neither shall thy name any more be called A'bram, but [h]thy name shall be || A'bra-ham; [i]for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make [k]nations of thee, and [l]kings shall come out of thee.

7 And I will [m]establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant: [n]to be a God unto thee, and to [o]thy seed after thee.

8 And [p]I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land †[q]wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Ca'naan, for an everlasting possession; and [r]I will be their God.

9 ¶ And God said unto A'bra-ham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; [s]Every man child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be [t]a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And †he that is eight days old [u]shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

14 And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul [w]shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham.

1898. AND the LORD appeared unto him in the [a]plains of Mam're: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day;
2 [b]And he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: [c]and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground,
3 And said, My lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant:
4 Let [d]a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:
5 And [e]I will fetch a morsel of bread, and †[f]comfort ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: [g]for therefore †are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.
6 And A'bra-ham hastened into the tent unto Sa'rah, and said, †Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.
7 And A'bra-ham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.
8 And [h]he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat.
9 ¶And they said unto him, Where is Sa'rah thy wife? And he said, Behold, [i]in the tent.
10 And he said, I [k]will certainly return unto thee [l]according to the time of life; and, lo, [m]Sa'rah thy wife shall have a son. And Sa'rah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.
11 Now [n]A'bra-ham and Sa'rah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sa'rah [o]after the manner of women.

B. C. 1910.

15 And God said unto A'bra-ham, As for Sa'rai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sa'rai, but [1]Sa'rah
16 shall her name be. And I will bless her, and moreover I will give thee a son of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of peo-
17 ples shall be of her. Then A'braham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old?
18 and shall Sa'rah, that is ninety years old, bear? And A'bra-ham said unto God, Oh that Ish'ma-el might 19 live before thee! And God said, Nay, but Sa'rah thy wife shall bear thee a son; and thou shalt call his name [2]I'saac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant for his seed
20 after him. And as for Ish'ma-el, I have heard thee: behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation.
21 But my covenant will I establish with I'saac, which Sa'rah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next
22 year. And he left off talking with him, and God went 23 up from A'bra-ham. And A'bra-ham took Ish'ma-el his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of A'bra-ham's house, and circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the selfsame day, as God had 24 said unto him. And A'bra-ham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his 25 foreskin. And Ish'ma-el his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his 26 foreskin. In the selfsame day was A'bra-ham circum-
27 cised, and Ish'ma-el his son. And all the men of his house, those born in the house, and those bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised with him.

18 And the LORD appeared unto him by the [3]oaks of Mam're, as he sat in the tent door in the heat of the
2 day; and he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood over against him: and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and
3 bowed himself to the earth, and said, [4]My lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away,
4 I pray thee, from thy servant: let now a little water be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves
5 under the tree: and I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort ye your heart; after that ye shall pass on: [5]forasmuch as ye are come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.
6 And A'bra-ham hastened into the tent unto Sa'rah, and said, Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes.
7 And A'bra-ham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf tender and good, and gave it unto the servant; and he hasted to dress
8 it. And he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they
9 did eat. And they said unto him, Where is Sa'rah
10 thy wife? And he said, Behold, in the tent. And he said, I will certainly return unto thee when the season [6]cometh round; and, lo, Sa'rah thy wife shall have a son. And Sa'rah heard in the 11 tent door, which was behind him. Now A'bra-ham and Sa'rah were old, and well stricken in age; it had ceased to be with Sa'rah after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sa'rah [p]laughed within herself, saying, [q]After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my [r]lord being old also?
13 And the LORD said unto A'bra-ham, Wherefore did Sa'rah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?
14 [s]Is any thing too hard for the LORD? [t]At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sa'rah shall have a son.
15 Then Sa'rah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.
16 ¶ And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sod'om: and A'bra-ham went with them [u]to bring them on the way.
17 And the LORD said, [w]Shall I hide from A'bra-ham that thing which I do;
18 Seeing that A'bra-ham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be [x]blessed in him?
19 For I know him, [y]that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon A'bra-ham that which he hath spoken of him.
20 And the LORD said, Because [z]the cry of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah is great, and because their sin is very grievous, 21 [a]I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, [b]I will know.
22 And the men turned their faces from thence, [c]and went toward Sod'om: but A'bra-ham [d]stood yet before the LORD.
23 ¶ And A'bra-ham [e]drew near, and said, [f]Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?
24 [g]Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?
25 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked; and [h]that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: [i]Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?
26 And the LORD said, [k]If I find in Sod'om fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.
27 And A'bra-ham answered and said, [l]Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am [m]but dust and ashes:
28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.
29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he said, I will not do it for forty's sake.
30 And he said unto him, Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak: Peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And he said, I will not do it, if I find thirty there.
31 And he said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.
32 And he said, [n]Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there. [o]And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.
33 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with A'bra-ham: and A'bra-ham returned unto his place.

CHAPTER XIX.

Sodom and Gomorrah destroyed—Lot's wife made a pillar of salt.

AND there [a]came two angels to Sod'om at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sod'om: and [b]Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;
2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, [c]turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and [d]wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, [e]Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

12 And Sa'rah laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord
13 being old also? And the LORD said unto A'bra-ham, Wherefore did Sa'rah laugh, saying, Shall 14 I of a surety bear a child, which am old? Is any thing too [1]hard for the LORD? At the set time I will return unto thee, when the season
15 [2]cometh round, and Sa'rah shall have a son. Then Sa'rah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.
16 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sod'om: and A'bra-ham went with them to

18 I hide from A'bra-ham that which I do; seeing that A'bra-ham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be 19 blessed in him? For I have [3]known him, to the end that he may command his children and his household after him, that they may keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgement; to the end that the LORD may bring upon A'bra-ham that which he 20 hath spoken of him. And the LORD said, [4]Because the cry of Sod'om and Go-mor'rah is great, and

22 and if not, I will know. And the men turned from thence, and went toward Sod'om: but A'bra-ham
23 stood yet before the LORD. And A'bra-ham drew near, and said, Wilt thou consume the righteous with 24 the wicked? Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou consume and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?
25 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked, that so the righteous should be as the wicked; that be far from thee: shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?
26 And the LORD said, If I find in Sod'om fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for 27 their sake. And A'bra-ham answered and said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the 28 Lord, which am but dust and ashes: peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, I will not destroy it, if I find there forty and five.
29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he 30 said, I will not do it for the forty's sake. And he said, Oh let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak: peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And 33 I will not destroy it for the ten's sake. And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with A'bra-ham: and A'bra-ham returned unto his place.

19 And the two angels came to Sod'om at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sod'om: and Lot saw them, and rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself
2 with his face to the earth; and he said, Behold now, my lords, turn aside, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your way. And they said, Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

11 And they smote the men *p*that were at the door of the house with blindness, both small and great: so that they wearied themselves to find the door.

12 ¶And the men said unto Lot, Hast thou here any besides? son in law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, *q*bring them out of this place:

18 And Lot said unto them, Oh, *e*not so, my Lord:

CHAPTER XX.

Abraham sojourneth at Gerar—He denieth his wife, and loseth her.

about 1898. AND A'bra-ham journeyed from [a]thence toward the south country, and dwelt between [b]Ka'desh and Shur, and [c]sojourned in Ge'rar.

2 And A'bra-ham said of Sa'rah his wife, [d]She is my sister: and A-bim'e-lech king of Ge'rar sent, and [e]took Sa'rah.

3 But [f]God came to A-bim'e-lech [g]in a dream by night, and said to him, [h]Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is †a man's wife.

4 But A-bim'e-lech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, [i]wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: [k]in the ‖integrity of my heart and innocency of my hands have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for [l]I also withheld thee from sinning [m]against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife; [n]for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, [o]know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, [p]and all that are thine.

8 Therefore A-bim'e-lech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.

9 Then A-bim'e-lech called A'bra-ham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, [q]that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me [r]that ought not to be done.

10 And A-bim'e-lech said unto A'braham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

31 and his two daughters. And the firstborn said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth to come in unto us after the man-
32 ner of all the earth: come, let us make our father drink wine, and we will lie with him, that we may 33 preserve seed of our father. And they made their father drink wine that night: and the firstborn went in, and lay with her father; and he knew not when
34 she lay down, nor when she arose. And it came to pass on the morrow, that the firstborn said unto the younger, Behold, I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed
35 of our father. And they made their father drink wine that night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he knew not when she lay down,
36 nor when she arose. Thus were both the daughters
37 of Lot with child by their father. And the firstborn bare a son, and called his name Mo'ab: the same is 38 the father of the Mo'ab-ites unto this day. And the younger, she also bare a son, and called his name Ben-am'mi: the same is the father of the children of Am'mon unto this day.

20 And A'braham journeyed from thence toward the land of the South, and dwelt between Ka'desh and 2 Shur; and he sojourned in Ge'rar. And A'bra-ham said of Sa'rah his wife, She is my sister: and A-bim'e-
3 lech king of Ge'rar sent, and took Sa'rah. But God came to A-bim'e-lech in a dream of the night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, because of the woman which thou hast taken; for she 4 is a man's wife. Now A-bim'e-lech had not come near her: and he said, Lord, wilt thou slay even a
5 righteous nation? Said he not himself unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart and 6 the innocency of my hands have I done this. And God said unto him in the dream, Yea, I know that in the integrity of thy heart thou hast done this, and I also withheld thee from sinning against me: there-
7 fore suffered I thee not to touch her. Now therefore restore the man's wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely
8 die, thou, and all that are thine. And A-bim'e-lech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and 9 the men were sore afraid. Then A-bim'e-lech called A'bra-ham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and wherein have I sinned against thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought 10 not to be done. And A-bim'e-lech said unto A'bra-ham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

11 And A'bra-ham said, Because I thought, Surely [r]the fear of God is not in this place; and [t]they will slay me for my wife's sake.
12 And yet indeed [u]she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.
13 And it came to pass, when [z]God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, [y]say of me, He is my brother.
14 And A-bim'e-lech [z]took sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and womenservants, and gave them unto A'bra-ham, and restored him Sa'rah his wife.
15 And A-bim'e-lech said, Behold, [a]my land is before thee: dwell †where it pleaseth thee.
16 And unto Sa'rah he said, Behold, I have given [b]thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: [c]behold, he is to thee [d]a covering of the eyes, unto all that are with thee, and with all other: thus she was reproved.
17 ¶ So A'bra-ham [e]prayed unto God: and God healed A-bim'e-lech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare children.
18 For the LORD [f]had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of A-bim'e-lech, because of Sa'rah, A'bra-ham's wife.

CHAPTER XXI.

Isaac born and circumcised—Hagar and Ishmael cast forth.

AND the LORD [a]visited Sa'rah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sa'rah [b]as he had spoken.
2 For Sa'rah [c]conceived, and bare A'bra-ham a son in his old age, [d]at the set time of which God had spoken to him.
3 And A'bra-ham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sa'rah bare to him, [e]I'saac.
4 And A'bra-ham [f]circumcised his son I'saac being eight days old, [g]as God had commanded him.
5 And [h]A'bra-ham was a hundred years old, when his son I'saac was born unto him.
6 ¶ And Sa'rah said, [i]God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear [k]will laugh with me.
7 And she said, Who would have said unto A'bra-ham, that Sa'rah should have given children suck? [l]for I have borne him a son in his old age.
8 And the child grew, and was weaned: And A'bra-ham made a great feast the same day that I'saac was weaned.
9 ¶ And Sa'rah saw the son of Ha'gar [m]the E-gyp'tian, [n]which she had borne unto A'bra-ham, [o]mocking.
10 Wherefore she said unto A'bra-ham, [p]Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with I'saac.
11 And the thing was very grievous in A'bra-ham's sight [q]because of his son.
12 ¶ And God said unto A'bra-ham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sa'rah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in [r]I'saac shall thy seed be called.
13 And also of the son of the bondwoman will I make [s]a nation, because he is thy seed.
14 And A'bra-ham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Ha'gar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and [t]sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Be'er-she'ba.
15 And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.
16 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bowshot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lifted up her voice, and wept.
17 And [u]God heard the voice of the lad; and the angel of God called to Ha'gar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Ha'gar? fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for [w]I will make him a great nation.

19 And [x]God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And God [y]was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, [z]and became an archer.

21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Pa'ran: and his mother [a]took him a wife out of the land of E'gypt.

22 ¶And it came to pass at that time, that [b]A-bim'e-lech and Phi'chol the chief captain of his host spake unto A'bra-ham, saying, [c]God is with thee in all that thou doest:

23 Now therefore [d]swear unto me here by God, †that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son; but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And A'bra-ham said, I will swear.

25 And A'bra-ham reproved A-bim'e-lech because of a well of water, which A-bim'e-lech's servants [e]had violently taken away.

26 And A-bim'e-lech said, I wot not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day.

27 And A'bra-ham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto A-bim'e-lech; and both of them [f]made a covenant.

28 And A'bra-ham set seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And A-bim'e-lech said unto A'bra-ham, [g]What mean these seven ewe lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that [h]they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he [i]called that place ‖ Be'er-she'ba; because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus they made a covenant at Be'er-she'ba: then A-bim'e-lech rose up, and Phi'chol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Phi-lis'tines.

33 ¶And A'bra-ham planted a ‖ grove in Be'er-she'ba, and [k]called there on the name of the LORD, [l]the everlasting God.

34 And A'bra-ham sojourned in the Phi-lis'tines' land many days.

CHAPTER XXII.

Abraham tempted to offer Isaac—He giveth proof of his faith and obedience.

AND it came to pass after these things, that [a]God did tempt A'bra-ham, and said unto him, A'bra-ham: and he said, †Behold, here I am.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, [b]thine only son I'saac, whom thou lovest, and get thee [c]into the land of Mo-ri'ah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

3 ¶And A'bra-ham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and I'saac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the third day A'bra-ham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And A'bra-ham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

6 And A'bra-ham took the wood of the burnt offering, and [d]laid it upon I'saac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

7 And I'saac spake unto A'bra-ham his father, and said, My father: and he said, †Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the ‖ lamb for a burnt offering?

8 And A'bra-ham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and A'bra-ham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound I'saac his son, and [e]laid him on the altar upon the wood.

B. C. 1892.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand;
19 for I will make him a great nation. And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave 27 I of it, but to-day. And A'bra-ham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto A-bim'e-lech; and they two 28 made a covenant. And A'bra-ham set seven ewe

29 lambs of the flock by themselves. And A-bim'e-lech said unto A'bra-ham, What mean these seven ewe
30 lambs which thou hast set by themselves? And he said, These seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that it may be a witness unto me, that I have 31 digged this well. Wherefore he called that place Be'er-she'ba; because there they sware both of them.
32 So they made a covenant at Be'er-she'ba: and A-bim'e-lech rose up, and Phi'col the captain of his host, and 33 they returned into the land of the Phi-lis'tines. And A'bra-ham planted a tamarisk tree in Be'er-she'ba, and called there on the name of the LORD, the Ever-
34 lasting God. And A'bra-ham sojourned in the land of the Phi-lis'tines many days.

22 And it came to pass after these things, that God did prove A'bra-ham, and said unto him, A'bra-ham;
2 and he said, Here am I. And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son, whom thou lovest, even I'saac, and get thee into the land of Mo-ri'ah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the 8 is the lamb for a burnt offering? And A'bra-ham said, God will [3]provide himself the lamb for a burnt offering, my son: so they went both of them to-

9 gether. And they came to the place which God had told him of; and A'bra-ham built the altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound I'saac his son, and laid him on the altar, upon the wood.

10 And A'bra-ham stretched forth his hand, and took 11 the knife to slay his son. And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, A'bra-ham,
12 A'bra-ham: and he said, Here am I. And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from 13 me. And A'bra-ham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and [1] behold, behind him a ram caught in the thicket by his horns: and A'bra-ham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead
14 of his son. And A'bra-ham called the name of that place [2] Je-ho'vah-ji'reh: as it is said to this day, In the 15 mount of the LORD [3] it shall be provided. And the angel of the LORD called unto A'bra-ham a second 16 time out of heaven, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, because thou hast done this thing,
17 and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy 18 seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth [4] be blessed;
19 because thou hast obeyed my voice. So A'bra-ham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Be'er-she'ba; and A'bra-ham dwelt at Be'er-she'ba.
20 And it came to pass after these things, that it was told A'bra-ham, saying, Behold Mil'cah, she also hath 21 borne children unto thy brother Na'hor; Uz, his firstborn, and Buz his brother, and Kem'u-el the father of 22 A'ram; and Che'sed, and Ha'zo, and Pil'dash, and 23 Jid'laph, and Beth'u-el. And Beth'u-el begat Rebek'ah: these eight did Mil'cah bear to Na'hor, 24 A'bra-ham's brother. And his concubine, whose name was Reu'mah, she also bare Te'bah, and Ga'ham, and Ta'hash, and Ma'a-cah.

And the life of Sa'rah was an hundred and seven and twenty years: these were the years of the life of 2 Sa'rah. And Sa'rah died in Kir'i-ath-ar'ba (the same is He'bron), in the land of Ca'naan: and A'bra-ham
3 came to mourn for Sa'rah, and to weep for her. And A'bra-ham rose up from before his dead, and spake
4 unto the children of Heth, saying, I am a stranger and a sojourner with you; give me a possession of a buryingplace with you, that I may bury my dead
5 out of my sight. And the children of Heth an-
6 swered A'bra-ham, saying unto him, Hear us, my lord: thou art [5] a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou
7 mayest bury thy dead. And A'bra-ham rose up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the 8 children of Heth. And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and intreat for me
9 to E'phron the son of Zo'har, that he may give me the cave of Mach-pe'lah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for the full price let him give it to me in the midst of you for a pos-
10 session of a buryingplace. Now E'phron was sitting in the midst of the children of Heth: and 12 And A'bra-ham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto E'phron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And E'phron answered A'bra-ham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred [h]shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And A'bra-ham hearkened unto E'phron; and A'bra-ham [i]weighed to E'phron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The marriage of Isaac and Rebekah.

AND A'bra-ham [a]was old, and †well stricken in age: and the LORD [b]had blessed A'bra-ham in all things.

2 And A'bra-ham said [c]unto his eldest servant of his house, that [d]ruled over all that he had, [e]Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

3 And I will make thee [f]swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that [g]thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Ca'naan-ites, among whom I dwell:

4 [h]But thou shalt go [i]unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son I'saac.

5 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And A'bra-ham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 ¶The LORD God of heaven, which [k]took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, [l]Unto thy seed will I give this land; [m]he shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then [n]thou shalt be clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of A'bra-ham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶And the servant took ten camels of the camels of his master, and departed; [o]|| for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mes-o-po-ta'mi-a, unto [p]the city of Na'hor.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time †[q]that women go out to draw water:

E'phron the Hit'tite answered A'bra-ham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that 11 went in at the gate of his city, saying, Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy 12 dead. And A'bra-ham bowed himself down before
13 the people of the land. And he spake unto E'phron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt, I pray thee, hear me: I will give the price of the field; take it of me, and I will bury 14 my dead there. And E'phron answered A'bra-ham,
15 saying unto him, My lord, hearken unto me: a piece of land worth four hundred shekels of silver, what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy
16 dead. And A'bra-ham hearkened unto E'phron; and A'bra-ham weighed to E'phron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the children of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with 17 the merchant. So the field of E'phron, which was in Mach-pe'lah, which was before Mam're, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the border
18 thereof round about, were made sure unto A'bra-ham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

20 same is He'bron), in the land of Ca'naan. And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto A'bra-ham for a possession of a buryingplace by the children of Heth.

6 land from whence thou camest? And A'bra-ham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my 7 son thither again. The LORD, the God of heaven, that took me from my father's house, and from the land of my nativity, and that spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his angel before thee, and
8 thou shalt take a wife for my son from thence. And if the woman be not willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be clear from this my oath; only thou shalt
9 not bring my son thither again. And the servant put his hand under the thigh of A'bra-ham his master, and sware to him concerning this matter.
10 And the servant took ten camels, of the camels of his master, and departed; [1]having all goodly things of his master's in his hand: and he arose, and went to [2]Mes-o-po-ta'mi-a, unto the city of Na'-

12 And he said, [r]O LORD God of my master A'bra-ham, I pray thee, [s]send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master A'bra-ham.

13 Behold, [t]I stand here by the well of water; and [u]the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

15 ¶And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Re-bek'ah came out, who was born to Beth'u-el, son of [x]Mil'cah, the wife of Na'hor, A'bra-ham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel [y]was †very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 [z]And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit whether [a]the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden [b]‖ earring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold;

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, [c]I am the daughter of Beth'u-el the son of Mil'cah, which she bare unto Na'hor.

25 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man [d]bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, [e]Blessed be the LORD God of my master A'bra-ham, who hath not left destitute my master of [f]his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD [g]led me to the house of my master's brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

29 ¶And Re-bek'ah had a brother, and his name was [h]La'ban: and La'ban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the earring, and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Re-bek'ah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me, that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, [i]thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 ¶And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and [k]gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, [l]I will not eat, until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 And he said, I am A'bra-ham's servant.

40 follow me. And he said unto me, The LORD, before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my 41 son of my kindred, and of my father's house: then shalt thou be clear from my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give her not to thee,
42 thou shalt be clear from my oath. And I came this day unto the fountain, and said, O LORD, the God of my master A'bra-ham, if now thou do prosper my 43 way which I go: behold, I stand by the fountain of water; and let it come to pass, that the maiden which cometh forth to draw, to whom I shall say, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;
44 and she shall say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed for my master's son.
45 And before I had done speaking in mine heart, behold, Re-bek'ah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the fountain, and drew: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray
46 thee. And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the 47 camels drink also. And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Beth'u-el, Na'hor's son, whom Mil'cah bare unto him; and I put the ring upon her nose,
48 and the bracelets upon her hands. And I bowed my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD, the God of my master A'bra-ham, which had led me in the right way to take my master's brother's
49 daughter for his son. And now if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or 50 to the left. Then La'ban and Beth'u-el answered and said, The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we can-51 not speak unto thee bad or good. Behold, Re-bek'ah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy 52 master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken. And it came to pass, that, when A'bra-ham's servant heard their words, he bowed himself down to the earth
53 unto the LORD. And the servant brought forth jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Re-bek'ah; he gave also to her 54 brother and to her mother precious things. And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, Send me away unto 55 my master. And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us a few days,
56 at the least ten; after that she shall go. And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away
57 that I may go to my master. And they said, We will call the damsel and inquire at her mouth.
58 And they called Re-bek'ah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

61 ¶And Re-bek'ah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Re-bek'ah, and went his way.
62 And I'saac came from the way of the [p]well La-hai'-roi; for he dwelt in the south country.
63 And I'saac went out ‖ [q]to meditate in the field at the eventide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

CHAPTER XXV.

Generations of Ishmael—Birth of Esau and Jacob—Esau's birthright.

about 1853.

THEN again A'bra-ham took a wife, and her name was Ke-tu'rah.
2 And [a]she bare him Zim'ran, and Jok'shan, and Me'dan, and Mid'i-an, and Ish'bak, and Shu'ah.
3 And Jok'shan begat She'ba, and De'dan. And the sons of De'dan were As-shu'rim, and Le-tu'shim, and Le-um'mim.
4 And the sons of Mid'i-an; E'phah, and E'pher, and Ha'noch, and A-bi'dah, and El-da'ah. All these were the children of Ke-tu'rah.
5 ¶And [b]A'bra-ham gave all that he had unto I'saac.
6 But unto the sons of the concubines, which A'bra-ham had, A'bra-ham gave gifts, and [c]sent them away from I'saac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto [d]the east country.
7 And these are the days of the years of A'braham's life which he lived, a hundred threescore and fifteen years.
8 Then A'bra-ham gave up the ghost, and [e]died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and [f]was gathered to his people.
9 And [g]his sons I'saac and Ish'ma-el buried him in the cave of Mach-pe'lah, in the field of E'phron the son of Zo'har the Hit'tite, which is before Mam're;
10 [h]The field which A'bra-ham purchased of the sons of Heth: [i]there was A'bra-ham buried, and Sar'ah his wife.
11 ¶And it came to pass after the death of A'bra-ham, that God blessed his son I'saac; and I'saac dwelt by the [k]well La-hai'-roi.
12 ¶Now these are the generations of Ish'ma-el, A'bra-ham's son, [l]whom Ha'gar the E-gyp'tian, Sa'rah's handmaid, bare unto A'bra-ham:
13 And [m]these are the names of the sons of Ish'ma-el, by their names, according to their generations: the firstborn of Ish'ma-el, Ne-ba'joth; and Ke'dar, and Ad'be-el, and Mib'sam,
14 And Mish'ma, and Du'mah, and Mas'sa,
15 ‖ Ha'dar, and Te'ma, Je'tur, Na'phish, and Ked'e-mah:
16 These are the sons of Ish'ma-el, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; [n]twelve princes according to their nations.
17 And these are the years of the life of Ish'ma-el, a hundred and thirty and seven years: and he [o]gave up the ghost and died, and was gathered unto his people.

19 ¶And these are the generations of I'saac, A'bra-ham's son: [r]A'bra-ham begat I'saac:

20 And I'saac was forty years old when he took Re-bek'ah to wife, [s]the daughter of Beth'u-el the Syr'i-an of Pa'dan-a'ram, [t]the sister to La'ban the Syr'i-an.

21 And I'saac entreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: [u]and the LORD was entreated of him, and [w]Re-bek'ah his wife conceived.

22 And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? [x]And she went to inquire of the LORD.

23 And the LORD said unto her, [y]Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and [z]the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and [a]the elder shall serve the younger.

24 ¶And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.

26 And after that came his brother out, and [c]his hand took hold on E'sau's heel; and his name was called Ja'cob: and I'saac was threescore years old when she bare them.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides [a]the first famine that was in the days of A'bra-ham. And I'saac went unto [b]A'bim'e-lech king of the Phi-lis'tines unto Ge'rar.

2 And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into E'gypt; dwell in [c]the land which I shall tell thee of.

5 [l]Because that A'bra-ham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶And I'saac dwelt in Ge'rar.

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and [m]he said, She is my sister: for [n]he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Re-bek'ah; because she [o]was fair to look upon.

9 And A-bim'e-lech called I'saac, and said, Behold of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And I'saac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

[9] Or, bless, themselves

B. C. 1804.

10 And A-bim'e-lech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lain with thy wife, and [p]thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And A-bim'e-lech charged all his people, saying, He that [q]toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

12 Then I'saac sowed in that land, and †received in the same year [r]a hundredfold: and the LORD [s]blessed him:

13 And the man [t]waxed great, and †went forward, and grew until he became very great:

14 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of || servants: and the Phi-lis'tines [u]envied him.

15 For all the wells [w]which his father's servants had digged in the days of A'bra-ham his father, the Phi-lis'tines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And A-bim'e-lech said unto I'saac, Go from us; for [x]thou art much mightier than we.

17 ¶And I'saac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Ge'rar, and dwelt there.

18 And I'saac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of A'bra-ham his father; for the Phi-lis'tines had stopped them after the death of A'bra-ham: [y]and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And I'saac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of †springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Ge'rar [z]did strive with I'saac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well || E'sek; because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it || Sit'nah.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it || Re-ho'both; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall [a]be fruitful in the land.

23 And he went up from thence to Be'er-she'ba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, [b]I am the God of A'bra-ham thy father: [c]fear not, for [d]I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant A'bra-ham's sake.

25 And he [e]builded an altar there, and [f]called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there I'saac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶Then A-bim'e-lech went to him from Ge'rar, and A-huz'zath one of his friends, [g]and Phi'chol the chief captain of his army.

27 And I'saac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing [h]ye hate me, and have [i]sent me away from you?

28 And they said, †We saw certainly that the LORD [k]was with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 †That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: [l]thou art now the blessed of the LORD.

30 [m]And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and [n]sware one to another: and I'saac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that I'saac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it || She'bah: [o]therefore the name of the city is || Be'er-she'ba unto this day.

34 ¶ [p]And E'sau was forty years old when he took to wife Ju'dith the daughter of Be-e'ri the Hit'tite, and Bash'e-math the daughter of E'lon the Hit'tite:

35 Which [q]were †a grief of mind unto I'saac and to Re-bek'ah.

10 And A-bim'e-lech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guilt-
11 iness upon us. And A-bim'e-lech charged all the people, saying, He that toucheth this man or his wife
12 shall surely be put to death. And I'saac sowed in that land, and found in the same year an hundredfold:
13 and the LORD blessed him. And the man waxed great, and grew more and more until he became very 14 great: and he had possessions of flocks, and possessions of herds, and a great household: and the Phi-
15 lis'tines envied him. Now all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of A'bra-ham his father, the Phi-lis'tines had stopped them, and 16 filled them with earth. And A-bim'e-lech said unto I'saac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than 17 we. And I'saac departed thence, and encamped in 18 the valley of Ge'rar, and dwelt there. And I'saac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of A'bra-ham his father; for the Phi-lis'tines had stopped them after the death of A'bra-ham: and he called their names after the names
19 by which his father had called them. And I'saac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well
20 of [1]springing water. And the herdmen of Ge'rar strove with I'saac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well [2]E'sek;
21 because they contended with him. And they digged another well, and they strove for that also: and he 22 called the name of it [3]Sit'nah. And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it [4]Re-ho'both; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for 23 us, and we shall be fruitful in the land. And he 24 went up from thence to Be'er-she'ba. And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of A'bra-ham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed
25 for my servant A'bra-ham's sake. And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there I'saac's
26 servants digged a well. Then A-bim'e-lech went to him from Ge'rar, and A-huz'zath his friend, and Phi'col
27 the captain of his host. And I'saac said unto them, Wherefore are ye come unto me, seeing ye hate me,
28 and have sent me away from you? And they said, We saw plainly that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there now be an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with 29 thee; that thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou
30 art now the blessed of the LORD. And he made
31 them a feast, and they did eat and drink. And they rose up betimes in the morning, and sware one to another: and I'saac sent them away, and they de-
32 parted from him in peace. And it came to pass the same day, that I'saac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said 33 unto him, We have found water. And he called it [5]Shi'bah: therefore the name of the city is Be'er-she'ba unto this day.
34 And when E'sau was forty years old he took to wife Ju'dith the daughter of Be-e'ri the Hit'tite, and 35 Bas'e-math the daughter of E'lon the Hit'tite; and they were a [6]grief of mind unto I'saac and to Re-bek'ah.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Isaac sendeth Esau for venison—Jacob obtaineth the blessing.

B. C. about 1760.

AND it came to pass, that when I'saac was old, and [a]his eyes were dim, so that he could not see, he called E'sau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

[a]ch. 48. 10. 1 Sam. 3. 2.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I [b]know not the day of my death:

[b]Prov. 27. 1. Jam. 4. 14.

3 [c]Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and †take me some venison;

[c]ch. 25. 27, 28. †Heb. hunt.

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul [d]may bless thee before I die.

[d]ver. 27. ch. 48. 9, 15. & 49. 28. Deut. 33. 1.

5 And Re-bek'ah heard when I'saac spake to E'sau his son. And E'sau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶And Re-bek'ah spake unto Ja'cob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto E'sau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

[e]ver. 13.

8 Now therefore, my son, [e]obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them [f]savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

[f]ver. 4.

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he [g]may bless thee before his death.

[g]ver. 4.

11 And Ja'cob said to Re-bek'ah his mother, Behold, [h]E'sau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

[h]ch. 25. 25.

12 My father peradventure will [i]feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring [k]a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

[i]ver. 22. [k]ch. 9. 25. Deut. 27. 18.

13 And his mother said unto him, [l]Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

[l]ch. 43. 9. 1 Sam. 25. 24. 2 Sam. 14. 9 Matt. 27. 25.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother [m]made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

[m]ver. 4, 9.

15 And Re-bek'ah took †[n]goodly raiment of her eldest son E'sau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Ja'cob her younger son:

†Heb. desirable [n]ver. 27.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

17 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Ja'cob.

18 ¶And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Ja'cob said unto his father, I am E'sau thy firstborn; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, [o]that thy soul may bless me.

[o]ver. 4.

20 And I'saac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it †to me.

†Heb. before me.

21 And I'saac said unto Ja'cob, Come near, I pray thee, that I [p]may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son E'sau or not.

[p]ver. 12.

22 And Ja'cob went near unto I'saac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Ja'cob's voice, but the hands are the hands of E'sau.

23 And he discerned him not, because [q]his hands were hairy, as his brother E'sau's hands: so he blessed him.

[q]ver. 16.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son E'sau? And he said, I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's vension, [r]that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

[r]ver. 4.

26 And his father I'saac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said,

B. C. 1760.

See, [a]the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore [f]God give thee of [u]the dew of heaven, and [w]the fatness of the earth, and [x]plenty of corn and wine:

29 [y]Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and [z]let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: [a]cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶And it came to pass, as soon as I'saac had made an end of blessing Ja'cob, and Ja'cob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of I'saac his father, that E'sau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and [b]eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And I'saac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy firstborn, E'sau.

33 And I'saac †trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath †taken venison and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, [c]and he shall be blessed.

34 And when E'sau heard the words of his father, [d]he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, [e]Is not he rightly named ‖ Ja'cob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: [f]he took away my birthright; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And I'saac answered and said unto E'sau, [g]Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and [h]with corn and wine have I ‖ sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And E'sau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father. And E'sau lifted up his voice, [i]and wept.

39 And I'saac his father answered and said unto him, Behold, [k]thy dwelling shall be ‖ the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above:

40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and [l]shalt serve thy brother; and [m]it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41 ¶And E'sau [n]hated Ja'cob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and E'sau said in his heart, [o]The days of mourning for my father are at hand; [p]then will I slay my brother Ja'cob.

42 And these words of E'sau her elder son were told to Re-bek'ah: and she sent and called Ja'cob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother E'sau, as touching thee, doth [q]comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to La'ban my brother [r]to Ha'ran;

44 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send, and fetch thee from thence: why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Re-bek'ah said to I'saac, [s]I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: [t]if Ja'cob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Vision of Jacob's ladder—Stone of Beth-el—Jacob's vow.

B. C. 1760.

AND I'saac called Ja'cob, and [c]blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, [b]Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Ca'naan.

2 [c]Arise, go to [d]Pa'dan-a'ram, to the house of [e]Beth'u-el thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of [f]La'ban thy mother's brother.

3 [g]And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be †a multitude of people;

4 And give thee [h]the blessing of A'bra-ham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land †[i]wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto A'bra-ham.

5 And I'saac sent away Ja'cob: and he went to Pa'dan-a'ram unto La'ban, son of Beth'u-el the Syr'i-an, the brother of Re-bek'ah, Ja'cob's and E'sau's mother.

6 ¶When E'sau saw that I'saac had blessed Ja'cob, and sent him away to Pa'dan-a'ram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Ca'naan;

7 And that Ja'cob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Pa'dan-a'ram;

8 And E'sau seeing [k]that the daughters of Ca'naan †pleased not I'saac his father;

9 Then went E'sau unto Ish'ma-el, and took unto the wives which he had [l]Ma'ha-lath the daughter of Ish'ma-el A'bra-ham's son, [m]the sister of Ne-ba'joth, to be his wife.

10 ¶And Ja'cob [n]went out from Be'er-she'ba, and went toward [o]Ha'ran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.

12 And he [p]dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold [q]the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 [r]And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, [s]I am the LORD God of A'bra-ham thy father, and the God of I'saac: [t]the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And [u]thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth: and thou shalt †spread abroad [w]to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and [x]in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

15 And, behold, [y]I am with thee, and will [z]keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will [a]bring thee again into this land; for [b]I will not leave thee, [c]until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶And Ja'cob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in [d]this place; and I knew it not.

17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Ja'cob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and [e]set it up for a pillar, [f]and poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And he called the name of [g]that place ‖Beth'-el: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.

20 [h]And Ja'cob vowed a vow, saying, If [i]God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me [k]bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that [l]I come again to my father's house in peace; [m]then shall the LORD be my God:

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, [n]shall be God's house: [o]and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

28 And I'saac called Ja'cob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of 2 the daughters of Ca'naan. Arise, go to Pad'dan-a'ram, to the house of Beth'u-el thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of
3 La'ban thy mother's brother. And [1]God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that
4 thou mayest be a company of peoples; and give thee the blessing of A'bra-ham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land of thy so-
5 journings, which God gave unto A'bra-ham. And I'saac sent away Ja'cob: and he went to Pad'dan-a'ram unto La'ban, son of Beth'u-el the [2]Syr'i-an, the brother of
6 Re-bek'ah, Ja'cob's and E'sau's mother. Now E'sau saw that I'saac had blessed Ja'cob and sent him away to Pad'dan-a'ram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the 7 daughters of Ca'naan; and that Ja'cob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Pad'dan-
8 a'ram: and E'sau saw that the daughters of Ca'naan
9 pleased not I'saac his father; and E'sau went unto Ish'ma-el, and took unto the wives which he had Ma'ha-lath the daughter of Ish'ma-el A'bra-ham's son, the sister of Ne-ba'ioth, to be his wife.
10 And Ja'cob went out from Be'er-she'ba, and went 11 toward Ha'ran. And he lighted upon [3]a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took one of the stones of the place, and put it under his head, and lay down in that 12 place to sleep. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending
13 and descending on it. And, behold, the LORD stood [4]above it, and said, I am the LORD, the God of A'bra-ham thy father, and the God of I'saac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy 14 seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt [5]spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth
15 be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee
16 of. And Ja'cob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not.
17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and 18 this is the gate of heaven. And Ja'cob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put under his head, and set it up for a pillar, and poured
19 oil upon the top of it. And he called the name of that place [6]Beth'el: but the name of the city was 20 Luz at the first. And Ja'cob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment
21 to put on, so that I come again to my father's house
22 in peace, [7]then shall the LORD be my God, and this stone, which I have set up for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

LEAH AND RACHEL.

B. C. 1760.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Jacob covenanteth for Rachel—Deceived with Leah—Marrieth Rachel also.

THEN Ja'cob †went on his journey, [c]and came into the land of the †people of the east.

2 And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Ja'cob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, of Ha'ran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye La'ban the son of Na'hor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, †[b]Is he well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Ra'chel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, †it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, We can not, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

9 ¶And while he yet spake with them, [c]Ra'chel came with her father's sheep: for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Ja'cob saw Ra'chel the daughter of La'ban his mother's brother, and the sheep of La'ban his mother's brother, that Ja'cob went near, and [d]rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of La'ban his mother's brother.

11 And Ja'cob [e]kissed Ra'chel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

12 And Ja'cob told Ra'chel that he was [f]her father's brother, and that he was Re-bek'ah's son: [g]and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when La'ban heard the †tidings of Ja'cob his sister's son, that [h]he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told La'ban all these things.

14 And La'ban said to him, [i]Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him †the space of a month.

15 ¶And La'ban said unto Ja'cob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And La'ban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Le'ah, and the name of the younger was Ra'chel.

17 Le'ah was tender eyed; but Ra'chel was beautiful and well favoured.

18 And Ja'cob loved Ra'chel; and said, [k]I will serve thee seven years for Ra'chel thy younger daughter.

19 And La'ban said, It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Ja'cob [l]served seven years for Ra'chel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

21 ¶And Ja'cob said unto La'ban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may [m]go in unto her.

22 And La'ban gathered together all the men of the place, and [n]made a feast.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Le'ah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

24 And La'ban gave unto his daughter Le'ah Zil'pah his maid for a handmaid.

25 And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Le'ah: and he said to La'ban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Ra'chel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?

26 And La'ban said, It must not be so done in our country, †to give the younger before the firstborn.

29 Then Ja'cob [1]went on his journey, and came to the 2 land of the children of the east. And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, three flocks of sheep lying there by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and the stone upon the well's
3 mouth was great. And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone
4 again upon the well's mouth in its place. And Ja'cob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye?
5 And they said, Of Ha'ran are we. And he said unto them, Know ye La'ban the son of Na'hor? And 6 they said, We know him. And he said unto them, Is it well with him? And they said, It is well: and, behold, Ra'chel his daughter cometh with the sheep.
7 And he said, Lo, it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together:
8 water ye the sheep, and go and feed them. And they said, We can not, until all the flocks be gathered together, and they roll the stone from the well's
9 mouth; then we water the sheep. While he yet spake with them, Ra'chel came with her father's 10 sheep; for she kept them. And it came to pass, when Ja'cob saw Ra'chel the daughter of La'ban his mother's brother, and the sheep of La'ban his mother's brother, that Ja'cob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the 11 flock of La'ban his mother's brother. And Ja'cob kissed Ra'chel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.
12 And Ja'cob told Ra'chel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Re-bek'ah's son: and she 13 ran and told her father. And it came to pass, when La'ban heard the tidings of Ja'cob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told 14 La'ban all these things. And La'ban said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he 15 abode with him the space of a month. And La'ban said unto Ja'cob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell 16 me, what shall thy wages be? And La'ban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Le'ah, and the 17 name of the younger was Ra'chel. And Le'ah's eyes were tender; but Ra'chel was beautiful and well
18 favoured. And Ja'cob loved Ra'chel; and he said, I will serve thee seven years for Ra'chel, thy younger
19 daughter. And La'ban said, It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another 20 man: abide with me. And Ja'cob served seven years for Ra'chel; and they seemed unto him but a 21 few days, for the love he had to her. And Ja'cob said unto La'ban, Give me my wife, for my days are 22 fulfilled, that I may go in unto her. And La'ban gathered together all the men of the place, and made 23 a feast. And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Le'ah his daughter, and brought her to him;
24 and he went in unto her. And La'ban gave Zil'pah his handmaid unto his daughter Le'ah for an hand-
25 maid. And it came to pass in the morning that, behold, it was Le'ah: and he said to La'ban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Ra'chel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled 26 me? And La'ban said, It is not so done in our place, to give the younger before the firstborn.

†Heb. to-morrow. Ex. 13. 14.

34 And La'ban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

35 And he removed that day the he-goats that were ringstreaked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons.

36 And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Ja'cob: and Ja'cob fed the rest of La'ban's flocks.

[g]See ch. 31. 9—12.

37 ¶And [g]Ja'cob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chestnut tree; and pilled white streaks in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ringstreaked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Ja'cob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ringstreaked, and all the brown in the flock of La'ban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto La'ban's cattle.

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Ja'cob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

18 And Le'ah said, God hath given me my [1]hire, because I gave my handmaid to my husband: and 19 she called his name Is'sa-char. And Le'ah conceived

20 again, and bare a sixth son to Ja'cob. And Le'ah said, God hath endowed me with a good dowry; now will my husband [2]dwell with me, because I have borne him six sons: and she called his name Zeb'u-lun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her

22 name Di'nah. And God remembered Ra'chel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

23 And she conceived, and bare a son: and said,

24 God hath taken away my reproach: and she called his name Jo'seph, saying, the LORD [3]add to me another son.

25 And it came to pass, when Ra'chel had borne Jo'seph, that Ja'cob said unto La'ban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my 26 country. Give me my wives and my children for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service wherewith I have served thee.

27 And La'ban said unto him, If now I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have divined that 28 the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake. And he said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle hath fared with me.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it hath [4]increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee [5]whithersoever I turned: and now when shall I provide for mine own house

31 also? And he said, What shall I give thee? And Ja'cob said, Thou shalt not give me aught: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed thy flock

32 and keep it. I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence every speckled and spotted one, and every black one among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats:

33 and of such shall be my hire. So shall my righteousness answer for me hereafter, when thou shalt come concerning my hire that is before thee: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and black among the sheep, that if found

34 with me shall be counted stolen. And La'ban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

35 And he removed that day the he-goats that were ringstraked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, every one that had white in it, and all the black ones among the sheep, and

36 gave them into the hand of his sons; and he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Ja'cob:

37 and Ja'cob fed the rest of La'ban's flocks. And Ja'cob took him rods of fresh [6]poplar, and of the almond and of the plane tree; and peeled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which 38 was in the rods. And he set the rods which he had peeled over against the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs where the flocks came to drink; and they conceived when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and the flocks brought forth ringstraked, speckled, and

40 spotted. And Ja'cob separated the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ringstraked and all the black in the flock of La'ban; and he put his own droves apart, and put them not unto La'-

41 ban's flock. And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger of the flock did conceive, that Ja'cob laid the rods before the eyes of the flock in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods;

CHAPTER XXXI.

Jacob's complaint of Laban—Covenant of Laban and Jacob at Galeed.

AND he heard the words of La'ban's sons, saying, Ja'cob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this [a]glory.
2 And Ja'cob beheld [b]the countenance of La'ban, and, behold, it was not [c]toward him †as before.
3 And the LORD said unto Ja'cob, [d]Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.
4 And Ja'cob sent and called Ra'chel and Le'ah to the field unto his flock,
5 And said unto them, [e]I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father [f]hath been with me.
6 And [g]ye know that with all my power I have served your father.
7 And your father hath deceived me, and [h]changed my wages [i]ten times; but God [k]suffered him not to hurt me.
8 If he said thus, [l]The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ringstreaked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ringstreaked.
9 Thus God hath [m]taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.
10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the ‖ rams which leaped upon the cattle were ringstreaked, speckled, and grizzled.
11 And [n]the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Ja'cob: And I said, Here am I.
12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ringstreaked, speckled, and grizzled: for [o]I have seen all that La'ban doeth unto thee.
13 I am the God of Beth'-el, [p]where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now [q]arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.
14 And Ra'chel and Le'ah answered and said unto him, [r]Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?
15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for [s]he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.
16 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.
17 ¶Then Ja'cob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;
18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Pa'dan-a'ram, for to go to I'saac his father in the land of Ca'naan.
19 And La'ban went to shear his sheep: and Ra'chel had stolen the †[t]images that were her father's.
20 And Ja'cob stole away †unawares to La'ban the Syr'i-an, in that he told him not that he fled.
21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river, and [u]set his face toward the mount Gil'e-ad.
22 And it was told La'ban on the third day, that Ja'cob was fled.
23 And he took [z]his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gil'e-ad.
24 And God [v]came to La'ban the Syr'i-an in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou [z]speak not to Ja'cob †either good or bad.
25 ¶Then La'ban overtook Ja'cob. Now Ja'cob had pitched his tent in the mount: and La'ban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gil'e-ad.

10 And it came to pass at the time that the flock conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the he-goats which leaped upon the flock were ringstraked, speckled, and grisled.

thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and [c]carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and †steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me [b]to kiss my sons and my daughters? [c]thou hast now done foolishly in so doing.

29 It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the [d]God of your father spake unto me [e]yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Ja'cob either good or bad.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou [f]stolen my gods?

31 And Ja'cob answered and said to La'ban, Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, [g]let him not live: before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Ja'cob knew not that Ra'chel had stolen them.

33 And La'ban went into Ja'cob's tent, and into Le'ah's tent, and into the two maidservants' tents; but he found them not. Then he went out of Le'ah's tent, and entered into Ra'chel's tent.

34 Now Ra'chel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. And La'ban †searched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease my lord that I can not [h]rise up before thee: for the custom of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶And Ja'cob was wroth, and chode with La'ban: and Ja'cob answered and said to La'ban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

39 [i]That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of [k]my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

40 Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house: I [l]served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and [m]thou hast changed my wages ten times.

42 [n]Except the God of my father, the God of A'bra-ham, and [o]the fear of I'saac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. [p]God hath seen mine affliction and the labour of my hands, and [q]rebuked thee yesternight.

43 ¶And La'ban answered and said unto Ja'cob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have borne?

44 Now therefore come thou, [r]let us make a covenant, I and thou; [s]and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

45 And Ja'cob [t]took a stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Ja'cob said unto his brethren, Gather stones; and they took stones, and made a heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And La'ban called it || Je'gar-sa-ha-du'tha: but Ja'cob called it || Gal'e-ed.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Jacob wrestleth with an angel at Peniel, where he is called Israel.

AND Ja'cob went on his way, and the [a]angels of God met him.
2 And when Ja'cob saw them, he said, This is God's [b]host: and he called the name of that place || Ma-ha-na'im.
3 And Ja'cob sent messengers before him to E'sau his brother [c]unto the land of Se'ir, [d]the †country of E'dom.
4 And he commanded them, saying, [e]Thus shall ye speak unto my lord E'sau; Thy servant Ja'cob saith thus, I have sojourned with La'ban, and stayed there until now:
5 And [f] I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and menservants, and womenservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that [g]I may find grace in thy sight.
6 ¶And the messengers returned to Ja'cob, saying, We came to thy brother E'sau, and also [h]he cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.
7 Then Ja'cob was greatly afraid and [i]distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;
8 And said, If E'sau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.
9 ¶[k]And Ja'cob said, [l]O God of my father A'bra-ham, and God of my father I'saac, the LORD [m]which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:
10 †I am not worthy of the least of all the [n]mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with [o]my staff I passed over this Jor'dan; and now I am become two bands.
11 [p]Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of E'sau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and [q]the mother †with the children.
12 And [r]thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which can not be numbered for multitude.
13 ¶And he lodged there that same night: and took of that which came to his hand [s]a present for E'sau his brother;
14 Two hundred she-goats and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams,
15 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.
16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.
17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When E'sau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?
18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Ja'cob's; it is a present sent unto my lord E'sau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

49 and [1]Miz'pah, for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are [2]absent one from another.
50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, and if thou shalt take wives beside my daughters, no man is with us;
51 see, God is witness betwixt me and thee. And La'ban said to Ja'cob, Behold this heap, and behold the pillar, which I have set betwixt me and thee.
52 This heap be witness, and the pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shall not pass over this heap and this pillar unto 53 me, for harm. The God of A'bra-ham, and the God of Na'hor, the [3]God of their father, judge betwixt us. And Ja'cob sware by the Fear of his father I'saac.
54 And Ja'cob offered a sacrifice in the mountain; and called his brethren to eat bread: and they did eat
55 bread, and tarried all night in the mountain. And early in the morning La'ban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, and blessed them: and La'ban departed, and returned unto his place.
32 And Ja'cob went on his way, and the angels of 2 God met him. And Ja'cob said when he saw them, This is God's host: and he called the name of that place [4]Ma-ha-na'im.
3 And Ja'cob sent messengers before him to E'sau his brother unto the land of Se'ir, the field of E'dom.
4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye say unto my lord E'sau; Thus saith thy servant Ja'cob, I have sojourned with La'ban and stayed
5 until now: and I have oxen, and asses and flocks, and menservants and maidservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight.
6 And the messengers returned to Ja'cob, saying, We came to thy brother E'sau, and moreover he cometh
7 to meet thee, and four hundred men with him. Then Ja'cob was greatly afraid and was distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and the herds, and the camels, into two companies;
8 and he said, If E'sau come to the one company, and smite it, then the company which is left shall escape.
9 And Ja'cob said, O God of my father A'bra-ham, and God of my father I'saac, O LORD, which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred,
10 and I will do thee good: [5]I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jor'dan; and now I am be-
11 come two companies. Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of E'sau: for I fear him, lest he come and smite me, the mother
12 with the children. And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the 13 sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude. And he lodged there that night; and took of that which he had with him a present for E'sau his brother;
14 two hundred she-goats, and twenty he-goats, two 15 hundred ewes and twenty rams, thirty milch camels and their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-
16 asses and ten foals. And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by itself; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and 17 put a space betwixt drove and drove. And he commanded the foremost, saying, When E'sau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and 18 whose are these before thee? then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Ja'cob's; it is a present sent unto my lord E'sau: and, behold, he also is behind us.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Meeting of Jacob and Esau—Jacob buyeth a field at Shalem.

AND Ja'cob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, [a]E'sau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Le'ah, and unto Ra'chel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Le'ah and her children after, and Ra'chel and Jo'seph hindermost.

3 And he passed over before them, and [b]bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

4 [c]And E'sau ran to meet him, and embraced him, [d]and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those †with thee? And he said, The children [e]which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Le'ah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves, and after came Jo'seph near and Ra'chel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, †What meanest thou by [f]all this drove which I met? And he said, These are [g]to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And E'sau said, I have enough, my brother; †keep that thou hast unto thyself.

10 And Ja'cob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I [h]have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, [i]my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have †enough. [k]And he urged him, and he took it.

19 And he commanded also the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto E'sau, when ye find him;
20 and ye shall say, Moreover, behold, thy servant Ja'cob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept

22 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two handmaids, and his eleven children, and 23 passed over the ford of Jab'bok. And he took them, and sent them over the stream, and sent over that he 24 had. And Ja'cob was left alone; and there wrestled
25 a man with him until the breaking of the day. And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Ja'cob's thigh was strained, as he wrestled with him.
26 And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.
27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And 28 he said, Ja'cob. And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Ja'cob, but [1]Is'ra-el: for [2]thou hast [3]striven with God and with men, and hast prevailed.
29 And Ja'cob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.
30 And Ja'cob called the name of the place [4]Pe-ni'el: for, said he, I have seen God face to face, and my 31 life is preserved. And the sun rose upon him as he passed over Pe-nu'el, and he halted upon his thigh.
32 Therefore the children of Is'ra-el eat not the sinew of the hip which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Ja'cob's thigh in the sinew of the hip.

33 And Ja'cob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, E'sau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Le'ah, and unto
2 Ra'chel, and unto the two handmaids. And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Le'ah and her children after, and Ra'chel and Jo'seph hind-
3 ermost. And he himself passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until 4 he came near to his brother. And E'sau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and
5 kissed him: and they wept. And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are these with thee? And he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy 6 servant. Then the handmaids came near, they and 7 their children, and they bowed themselves. And Le'ah also and her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Jo'seph near and Ra'chel, and they bowed themselves.
8 And he said, What meanest thou by all this company which I met? And he said, To find grace in the sight of my lord.
9 And E'sau said, I have enough; my brother, let 10 that thou hast be thine. And Ja'cob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: [5]forasmuch as I have seen thy face, as one seeth the face of 11 God, and thou wast pleased with me. Take, I pray thee, my [6]gift that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have [7]enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The sons of Jacob offer the condition of circumcision to the Shechemites.

AND [a]Di'nah the daughter of Le'ah, which she bare unto Ja'cob, [b]went out to see the daughters of the land.

2 And when She'chem the son of Ha'mor the Hi'vite, prince of the country, [c]saw her, he [d]took her, and lay with her, and †defiled her.

3 And his soul clave unto Di'nah the daughter of Ja'cob, and he loved the damsel, and spake †kindly unto the damsel.

4 And She'chem [e]spake unto his father Ha'mor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.

5 And Ja'cob heard that he had defiled Di'nah his daughter: (now his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Ja'cob [f]held his peace until they were come.)

6 ¶And Ha'mor the father of She'chem went out unto Ja'cob to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Ja'cob came out of the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they [g]were very wroth, because he [h]had wrought folly in Is'-ra-el in lying with Ja'cob's daughter, [i]which thing ought not to be done.

8 And Ha'mor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son She'chem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and the [k]land shall be before you; dwell and [l]trade ye therein, and [m]get you possessions therein.

11 And She'chem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

12 Ask me never so much [n]dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

13 And the sons of Ja'cob answered She'chem and Ha'mor his father [o]deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Di'nah their sister:

14 And they said unto them, We can not do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for [p]that were a reproach unto us:

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised:

16 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us
13 go, and I will go before thee. And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and that the flocks and herds with me give suck: and if they overdrive them one day, all the flocks
14 will die. Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according to the pace of the cattle that is before me and according to the pace of the children, until I come 15 unto my lord unto Se'ir. And E'sau said, Let me now leave with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, What needeth it? let me find
16 grace in the sight of my lord. So E'sau returned
17 that day on his way unto Se'ir. And Ja'cob journeyed to Suc'coth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called [1]Suc'coth.

18 And Ja'cob came [2]in peace to the city of She'chem, which is in the land of Ca'naan, when he came from Pad'dan-a'ram; and encamped before the city.

19 And he bought the parcel of ground, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of Ha'mor, She'chem's father, for an hundred [3]pieces of money.

20 And he erected there an altar, and called it [4]El-e-lo'-he-Is'ra-el.

34 And Di'nah the daughter of Le'ah, which she bare unto Ja'cob, went out to see the daughters of the 2 land. And She'chem the son of Ha'mor the Hi'vite, the prince of the land, saw her; and he took her,
3 and lay with her, and humbled her. And his soul clave unto Di'nah the daughter of Ja'cob, and he loved the damsel, and spake [5]kindly unto the damsel.

4 And She'chem spake unto his father Ha'mor, saying,
5 Get me this damsel to wife. Now Ja'cob heard that he had defiled Di'nah his daughter; and his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Ja'cob held his 6 peace until they came. And Ha'mor the father of She'chem went out unto Ja'cob to commune with 7 him. And the sons of Ja'cob came in from the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought folly in Is'ra-el in lying with Ja'cob's daughter;
8 which thing ought not to be done. And Ha'mor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son She'chem longeth for your daughter: I pray you
9 give her unto him to wife. And make ye marriages with us; give your daughters unto us, and take our 10 daughters unto you. And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade
11 ye therein, and get you possessions therein. And She'chem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall 12 say unto me I will give. Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall 13 say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife. And the sons of Ja'cob answered She'chem and Ha'mor his father with guile, and spake, because he had de-
14 filed Di'nah their sister, and said unto them, We can not do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us:
15 only on this condition will we consent unto you: if ye will be as we be, that every male of you be cir-
16 cumcised; then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.
18 And their words pleased Ha'mor and She'chem Ha'mor's son.
19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Ja'cob's daughter: and he was [q]more honourable than all the house of his father.
20 ¶And Ha'mor and She'chem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying,
21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein: for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.
22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.
23 Shall not their cattle and their substance and every beast of theirs be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.
24 And unto Ha'mor and unto She'chem his son hearkened all that [r]went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.
25 ¶And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Ja'cob, [s]Sim'e-on and Le'vi, Di'nah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.
26 And they slew Ha'mor and She'chem his son with the †edge of the sword, and took Di'nah out of She'chem's house, and went out.
27 The sons of Ja'cob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.
28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,
29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.
30 And Ja'cob said to Sim'e-on and Le'vi, [t]Ye have [u]troubled me [x]to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Ca'naan-ites and the Per'iz-zites: [y]and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Rachel dieth in the way to Edar—The sons of Jacob—Burial of Isaac.

AND God said unto Ja'cob, Arise, go up to [a]Beth'-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, [b]that appeared unto thee [c]when thou fleddest from the face of E'sau thy brother.
2 Then Ja'cob said unto his [d]household, and to all that were with him, Put away [e]the strange gods that are among you, and [f]be clean, and change your garments:
3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth'-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, [g]who answered me in the day of my distress, [h]and was with me in the way which I went.
4 And they gave unto Ja'cob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their [i]earrings which were in their ears; and Ja'cob hid them under [k]the oak which was by She'chem.
5 And they journeyed: and [l]the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Ja'cob.
6 ¶So Ja'cob came to [m]Luz, which is in the land of Ca'naan, that is, Beth'-el, he and all the people that were with him.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.
18 And their words pleased Ha'mor, and She'chem
19 Ha'mor's son. And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Ja'cob's daughter: and he was honoured above all the 20 house of his father. And Ha'mor and She'chem his son came unto the gate of their city, and com-
21 muned with the men of their city, saying, These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for, behold, the land is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.
22 Only on this condition will the men consent unto us to dwell with us, to become one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circum-
23 cised. Shall not their cattle and their substance and all their beasts be ours? only let us consent
24 unto them, and they will dwell with us. And unto Ha'mor and unto She'chem his son hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate
25 of his city. And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Ja'cob, Sim'e-on and Le'vi, Di'nah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city [1]unawares, and 26 slew all the males. And they slew Ha'mor and She'chem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Di'nah out of She'chem's house, and went forth.
27 The sons of Ja'cob came upon the slain, and spoiled
28 the city, because they had defiled their sister. They took their flocks and their herds and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was 29 in the field; and all their wealth, and all their little ones and their wives, took they captive and spoiled,
30 even all that was in the house. And Ja'cob said to Sim'e-on and Le'vi, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Ca'naan-ites and the Per'iz-zites: and, I being few in number, they will gather themselves together against me and smite me; and I shall be destroyed, 31 I and my house. And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

35 And God said unto Ja'cob, Arise, go up to Beth'-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, who appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from 2 the face of E'sau thy brother. Then Ja'cob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the strange gods that are among you, and
3 purify yourselves, and change your garments: and let us arise, and go up to Beth'-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way
4 which I went. And they gave unto Ja'cob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and the rings which were in their ears; and Ja'cob hid them
5 under the [2]oak which was by She'chem. And they journeyed: and [3]a great terror was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not
6 pursue after the sons of Ja'cob. So Ja'cob came to Luz, which is in the land of Ca'naan (the same is Beth'-el), he and all the people that were with him.
7 And he built there an altar, and called the place [4]El-beth'-el: because there God was revealed unto 8 him, when he fled from the face of his brother. And Deb'o-rah Re-bek'ah's nurse died, and she was buried below Beth'-el under the oak: and the name of it was called [5]Al'lon-bac'uth.

9 ¶And [g]God appeared unto Ja'cob again, when he came out of Pa'dan-a'ram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Ja'cob: [r]thy name shall not be called any more Ja'cob, [s]but Is'ra-el shall be thy name; and he called his name Is'ra-el.

11 And God said unto him, [t]I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; [u]a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins;

12 And the land [w]which I gave A'bra-ham and I'saac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And God [z]went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 And Ja'cob [y]set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone: and he poured a drink-[a]offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And Ja'cob called the name of the place where God spake with him, [z]Beth'-el.

16 ¶And they journeyed from Beth'-el; and there was but †a little way to come to Eph'rath: and Ra'chel travailed, and she had hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; [c]thou shalt have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died,) that she called his name || Ben-o'ni: but his father called him || Ben'ja-min.

19 And [b]Ra'chel died, and was buried in the way to [c]Eph'rath, which is Beth'-le-hem.

20 And Ja'cob set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Ra'chel's grave [d]unto this day.

21 ¶And Is'ra-el journeyed, and spread his tent beyond [e]the tower of E'dar.

22 And it came to pass, when Is'ra-el dwelt in that land, that Reu'ben went and [f]lay with Bil'hah his father's concubine: and Is'ra-el heard it. Now the sons of Ja'cob were twelve:

23 The sons of Le'ah; [g]Reu'ben, Jac'ob's firstborn, and Sim'e-on, and Le'vi, and Ju'dah, and Is'sa-char, and Zeb'u-lun:

24 The sons of Ra'chel; Jo'seph, and Ben'ja-min:

25 And the sons of Bil'hah, Ra'chel's handmaid; Dan, and Naph'ta-li:

26 And the sons of Zil'pah, Le'ah's handmaid; Gad, and Ash'er. These are the sons of Ja'cob, which were born to him in Pa'dan-a'ram.

27 ¶And Ja'cob came unto I'saac his father unto [h]Mam're, unto the [i]city of Ar'bah, which is He'bron, where A'bra-ham and I'saac sojourned.

28 And the days of I'saac were a hundred and fourscore years.

29 And I'saac gave up the ghost, and died, and [k]was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and [l]his sons E'sau and Ja'cob buried him.

5 And A-ho-lib'a-mah bare Je'ush, and Ja-a'lam, and Ko'rah: these are the sons of E'sau, which were born unto him in the land of Ca'naan.

6 And E'sau took his wives, and his sons, and his daughters, and all the †persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Ca'naan; and went into the country from the face of his brother Ja'cob.

9 And God appeared unto Ja'cob again, when he

15 drink offering thereon, and poured oil thereon. And Ja'cob called the name of the place where God
16 spake with him, Beth'-el. And they journeyed from Beth'-el; and there was still some way to come to Eph'rath: and Ra'chel travailed, and she had hard 17 labour. And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not;
18 for now thou shalt have another son. And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing (for she died), that she called his name [2]Ben-o'ni: but his father 19 called him [3]Ben'ja-min. And Ra'chel died, and was buried in the way to Eph'rath (the same is Beth'- 20 le-hem). And Ja'cob set up a pillar upon her grave: the same is the Pillar of Ra'chel's grave unto this 21 day. And Is'ra-el journeyed, and spread his tent be-
22 yond the tower of E'der. And it came to pass, while Is'ra-el dwelt in that land, that Reu'ben went and lay with Bil'hah his father's concubine: and Is'ra-el heard of it.

23 Now the sons of Ja'cob were twelve: the sons of Le'ah; Reu'ben, Ja'cob's firstborn, and Sim'e-on, and

26 Naph'ta-li: and the sons of Zil'pah, Le'ah's handmaid; Gad and Ash'er: these are the sons of Ja'cob, which 27 were born to him in Pad'dan-a'ram. And Ja'cob came unto I'saac his father to Mam're, to Kir'i-ath-ar'ba (the same is He'bron), where A'bra-ham and I'saac

29 and fourscore years. And I'saac gave up the ghost, and died, and was gathered unto his people, old and full of days: and E'sau and Ja'cob his sons buried him.

36 Now these are the generations of E'sau (the same
2 is E'dom). E'sau took his wives of the daughters of Ca'naan; A'dah the daughter of E'lon the Hit'tite, and O-ho-lib'a-mah the daughter of A'nah, the [4]daugh-
3 ter of Zib'e-on the Hi'vite; and Bas'e-math Ish'ma-el's
4 daughter, sister of Ne-ba'ioth. And A'dah bare to 5 E'sau El'i-phaz; and Bas'e-math bare Reu'el; and O-ho-lib'a-mah bare Je'ush, and Ja'lam, and Ko'rah: these are the sons of E'sau, which were born unto him
6 in the land of Ca'naan. And E'sau took his wives, and his sons, and his daughters, and all the souls of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his possessions, which he had gathered in the land of Ca'naan; and went into a land away from his brother Ja'cob.
7 For their substance was too great for them to dwell

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Joseph's two dreams—His brethren conspire his death—Sold to Potiphar.

AND Ja'cob dwelt in the land †[a]wherein his father was a stranger, in the land of Ca'naan.

2 These are the generations of Ja'cob. Jo'seph being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bil'hah, and with the sons of Zil'pah, his father's wives: and Jo'seph brought unto his father [b]their evil report.

3 Now Is'ra-el loved Jo'seph more than all his children, because he was [c]the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many ‖ colours.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they [d]hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶And Jo'seph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, [e]behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

9 ¶And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and, behold, [f]the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and [g]thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And [h]his brethren envied him; but his father [i]observed the saying.

12 ¶And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in She'chem.

13 And Is'ra-el said unto Jo'seph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in She'chem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, †see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of [k]He'bron, and he came to She'chem.

15 ¶And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: [l]tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence; for I heard them say, Let us go to Do'than. And Jo'seph went after his brethren, and found them in [m]Do'than.

18 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, [n]they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this †dreamer cometh.

20 [o]Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him; and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And [p]Reu'ben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reu'ben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 ¶And it came to pass, when Jo'seph was come unto his brethren, that they stripped Jo'seph out of his coat, his coat of many ‖colours that was on him;

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 [q]And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of [r]Ish'ma-el-ites came from Gil'e-ad, with their camels bearing spicery and [s]balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to E'gypt.

26 And Ju'dah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and [t]conceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us sell him to the Ish'ma-el-ites, and [u]let not our hand be upon him; for he is [x]our brother, and [y]our flesh: and his brethren †were content.

28 Then there passed by [z]Mid'i-an-ites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Jo'seph out of the pit, [a]and sold Jo'seph to the Ish'ma-el-ites for [b]twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Jo'seph into E'gypt.

29 ¶And Reu'ben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Jo'seph was not in the pit; and he [c]rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child [d]is not; and I, whither shall I go?

31 And they took [e]Jo'seph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood;

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an [f]evil beast hath devoured him; Jo'seph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Ja'cob [g]rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

35 And all his sons and all his daughters [h]rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For [i]I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

7 was Ta'mar. And Er, Ju'dah's firstborn, was wicked in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

B. C. about 1727.

8 And Ju'dah said unto O'nan, Go in unto [k]thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.
9 And O'nan knew that the seed should not be [l]his; and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.
10 And the thing which he did †displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew [m]him also.
11 Then said Ju'dah to Ta'mar his daughter in law, [n]Remain a widow at thy father's house, till She'lah my son be grown: for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did. And Ta'mar went and dwelt [o]in her father's house.
12 And †in process of time, the daughter of Shu'ah Ju'dah's wife died; and Ju'dah [p]was comforted, and went up unto his sheepshearers to Tim'nath, he and his friend Hi'rah the Adul'lam-ite.
13 And it was told Ta'mar, saying, Behold, thy father in law goeth up [q]to Tim'nath, to shear his sheep.
14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, and [s]sat in †an open place, which is by the way to Tim'nath; for she saw [t]that She'lah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.
15 When Ju'dah saw her, he thought her to be a harlot; because she had covered her face.
16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter in law:) and she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?
17 And he said, [w]I will send thee †a kid from the flock. And she said, [x]Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?
18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, [z]Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.
19 And she arose, and went away, and [y]laid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.
20 And Ju'dah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the A-dul'lam-ite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.
21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot that was ‖ openly by the way side? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.
22 And he returned to Ju'dah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there was no harlot in this place.
23 And Ju'dah said, Let her take it to her, lest we †be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.
24 ¶And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Ju'dah, saying, Ta'mar thy daughter in law hath [z]played the harlot; and also, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Ju'dah said, Bring her forth, [a]and let her be burnt.
25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man whose these are, am I with child: and she said, [b]Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, [c]the signet, and bracelets, and staff.
26 And Ju'dah [d]acknowledged them, and said, [e]She hath been more righteous than I; because that [f]I gave her not to She'lah my son. And he knew her again [g]no more.
27 ¶And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.
28 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.
29 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, ‖ How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called ‖ [h]Pha'rez.

8 And Ju'dah said unto O'nan, Go in unto thy brother's wife, and [1]perform the duty of an husband's brother
9 unto her, and raise up seed to thy brother. And O'nan knew that the seed should not be his; and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest he should 10 give seed to his brother. And the thing which he did was evil in the sight of the LORD: and he slew
11 him also. Then said Ju'dah to Ta'mar his daughter in law, Remain a widow in thy father's house, till She'lah my son be grown up: for he said, Lest he also die, like his brethren. And Ta'mar went and 12 dwelt in her father's house. And in process of time Shu'a's daughter, the wife of Ju'dah, died; and Ju'dah was comforted, and went up unto his sheepshearers to Tim'nah, he and his friend Hi'rah the A-dul'lam-ite.
13 And it was told Ta'mar, saying, Behold, thy father
14 in law goeth up to Tim'nah to shear his sheep. And she put off from her the garments of her widowhood, and covered herself with her veil, and wrapped herself, and sat in the gate of E-na'im, which is by the way to Tim'nah: for she saw that She'lah was grown
15 up, and she was not given unto him to wife. When Ju'dah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; for 16 she had covered her face. And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee: for he knew not that she was his daughter in law. And she said, What wilt thou

18 till thou send it? And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, Thy signet and thy cord, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave them to her, and came in unto her, and she 19 conceived by him. And she arose, and went away, and put off her veil from her, and put on the gar-
20 ments of her widowhood. And Ju'dah sent the kid of the goats by the hand of his friend the A-dul'lam-ite, to receive the pledge from the woman's hand:
21 but he found her not. Then he asked the men of her place, saying, Where is the [2]harlot, that was at E-na'im by the wayside? And they said, There
22 hath been no [2]harlot here. And he returned to Ju'dah, and said, I have not found her; and also the men of the place said, There hath been no [2]harlot
23 here. And Ju'dah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be put to shame: behold, I sent this kid, and 24 thou hast not found her. And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Ju'dah, saying, Ta'mar thy daughter in law hath played the harlot; and moreover, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Ju'dah said, Bring her forth, and let her
25 be burnt. When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, am I with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, and the cords, and

28 womb. And it came to pass, when she travailed, that one put out a hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying,
29 This came out first. And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, [3]Wherefore hast thou made a breach for thyself? therefore his name was called [4]Pe'rez.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Joseph in Potiphar's house—He resisteth his mistress's temptation.

[a] AND Jo'seph was brought down to E'gypt; and [a]Pot'i-phar, an officer of Pha'raoh, captain of the guard, an E-gyp'tian, [b]bought him of the hands of the Ish'ma-el-ites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And [c]the LORD was with Jo'seph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the E-gyp'tian.

3 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD [d]made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Jo'seph [e]found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him [f]overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that [g]the LORD blessed the E-gyp'tian's house for Jo'seph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Jo'seph's hand; and he knew not aught he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Jo'seph [h]was a goodly person, and well favoured.

7 ¶And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Jo'seph; and she said, [i]Lie with me.

8 But he refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

9 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: [k]how then can I do this great wickedness, and [l]sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Jo'seph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Jo'seph went into the house to do his business; and there was none of the men of the house there within.

12 And [m]she caught him by the garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth,

14 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in a He'brew unto us to mock us; he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a †loud voice:

15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home.

17 And she [n]spake unto him according to these words, saying, The He'brew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me:

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

19 And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his [o]wrath was kindled.

20 And Jo'seph's master took him, and [p]put him into the [q]prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

21 ¶But the LORD was with Jo'seph, and †shewed him mercy, and [r]gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison [s]committed to Jo'seph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Ze'rah.

39 And Jo'seph was brought down to E'gypt: and Pot'i-phar, an officer of Pha'raoh's, the captain of the guard, an E-gyp'tian, bought him of the hand of the Ish'ma-el-ites, which had brought him down thither.

6 in the house and in the field. And he left all that he had in Jo'seph's hand; and [1]he knew not aught that was with him, save the bread which he did eat.

7 And Jo'seph was comely, and well favoured. And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Jo'seph; and she said, Lie

8 with me. But he refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master [2]knoweth not what is with me in the house, and he hath put all that he hath

9 into my hand; [3]there is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Jo'seph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her,

11 or to be with her. And it came to pass about this time, that he went into the house to do his work; and there was none of the men of the house there

12 within. And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her

13 hand, and fled, and got him out. And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in

14 her hand, and was fled forth, that she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an He'brew unto us to mock us; he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried

15 with a loud voice: and it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment by me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she laid up his garment by her, until his

17 master came home. And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The He'brew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in

18 unto me to mock me: and it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his gar-

19 ment by me, and fled out. And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did

20 thy servant to me; that his wrath was kindled And Jo'seph's master took him, and put him into the prison, the place where the king's prisoners were bound:

21 and he was there in the prison. But the LORD was with Jo'seph, and shewed kindness unto him, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison committed to Jo'seph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

The butler and baker of Pharaoh—Ingratitude of the butler.

4 And the captain of the guard charged Jo'seph with them, and he served them: and they continued a season in ward.

about 1718. 5 ¶And they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of E'gypt, which were bound in the prison.

6 And Jo'seph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they were sad.

7 And he asked Pha'raoh's officers that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore †look ye so sadly to-day?

† Heb. are your faces evil?

8 And they said unto him, [d]We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Jo'seph said unto them, [e]Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes:

11 And Pha'raoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pha'raoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pha'raoh's hand.

12 And Jo'seph said unto him, [f]This is the interpretation of it: The three branches [g]are three days:

CHAPTER XLI.

Pharaoh's two dreams—Joseph interpreteth them—the famine beginneth.

AND it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pha'raoh dreamed: and, behold, he stood by the river.
2 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well favoured kine and fatfleshed; and they fed in a meadow.
3 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.
4 And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pha'raoh awoke.
5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, †rank and good.
6 And, behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprung up after them.
7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pha'raoh awoke: and, behold, it was a dream.
8 And it came to pass in the morning [a]that his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the [b]magicians of E'gypt, and all the [c]wise men thereof: and Pha'raoh told them his dream: but there was none that could interpret them unto Pha'raoh.
9 ¶Then spake the chief butler unto Pha'raoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:
10 Pha'raoh was [d]wroth with his servants, [e]and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:
11 And [f] we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.
12 And there was there with us a young man, a Hebrew, [g]servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he [h]interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.
13 And it came to pass, [i]as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.
14 ¶[k]Then Pha'raoh sent and called Jo'seph, and they [l]†brought him hastily [m]out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pha'raoh.
15 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: [n]and I have heard say of thee, that || thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.
16 And Jo'seph answered Pha'raoh, saying, [o]It is not in me: [p]God shall give Pha'raoh an answer of peace.
17 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, [q]In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:
18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fatfleshed and well favoured; and they fed in a meadow:
19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill favoured and leanfleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of E'gypt for badness:
20 And the lean and the ill favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:
21 And when they had †eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.
22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:
23 And, behold, seven ears, || withered, thin, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them:
24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and [r]I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.
25 ¶And Jo'seph said unto Pha'raoh, The dream of Pha'raoh is one: [s]God hath shewed Pha'raoh what he is about to do.
26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.
27 And the seven thin and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be [t]seven years of famine.

41 And it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pha'raoh dreamed: and, behold, he stood by
2 the [1]river. And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, well favoured and fatfleshed; and
3 they fed in the reed-grass. And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed; and stood by the other
4 kine upon the brink of the river. And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pha'raoh awoke.
5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk,
6 [2]rank and good. And, behold, seven ears, thin and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them.
7 And the thin ears swallowed up the seven [2]rank and full ears. And Pha'raoh awoke, and, behold, it was 8 a dream. And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was troubled: and he sent and called for all the [3]magicians of E'gypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pha'raoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pha'-
9 raoh. Then spake the chief butler unto Pha'raoh,
10 saying, I [4]do remember my faults this day: Pha'raoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, me and the 11 chief baker: and we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the 12 interpretation of his dream. And there was with us there a young man, an He'brew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to 13 his dream he did interpret. And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; [5]me he restored unto 14 mine office, and him he hanged. Then Pha'raoh sent and called Jo'seph, and they brought him hastily out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pha'raoh.
15 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that when thou hearest a 16 dream thou canst interpret it. And Jo'seph answered Pha'raoh, saying, It is not in me: God shall 17 give Pha'raoh an answer of peace. And Pha'raoh spake unto Jo'seph, In my dream, behold, I stood 18 upon the brink of the river: and, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fatfleshed and 19 well favoured; and they fed in the reed-grass: and, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill favoured and leanfleshed, such as I
20 never saw in all the land of E'gypt for badness: and the lean and ill favoured kine did eat up the first 21 seven fat kine: and when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill favoured, as at the beginning.
22 So I awoke. And I saw in my dream, and, behold,
23 seven ears came up upon one stalk, full and good: and, behold, seven ears, withered, thin, and blasted with 24 the east wind, sprung up after them: and the thin ears swallowed up the seven good ears: and I told it unto the magicians; but there was none that could 25 declare it to me. And Jo'seph said unto Pha'raoh, The dream of Pha'raoh is one: what God is about to 26 do he hath declared unto Pha'raoh. The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven 27 years: the dream is one. And the seven lean and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years, and also the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind; they shall be seven years of famine.

29 Behold, there come [x]seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of E'gypt:
30 And there shall [y]arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of E'gypt; and the famine [z]shall consume the land;
31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very †grievous.
32 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pha'raoh twice; it is because the [a]thing is ||established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.
33 Now therefore let Pha'raoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of E'gypt.
34 Let Pha'raoh do this, and let him appoint ||officers over the land, and [b]take up the fifth part of the land of E'gypt in the seven plenteous years.
35 And [c]let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pha'raoh, and let them keep food in the cities.
36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of E'gypt; that the land †[d]perish not through the famine.
37 ¶And [e]the thing was good in the eyes of Pha'raoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.
38 And Pha'raoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man [f]in whom the spirit of God is?
39 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:
40 [g]Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people †be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.
41 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, See I have [h]set thee over all the land of E'gypt.
42 And Pha'raoh [i]took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Jo'seph's hand, and [k]arrayed him in vestures of ||fine linen, [l]and put a gold chain about his neck;
43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; [m]and they cried before him, ||†Bow the knee: and he made him ruler [n]over all the land of E'gypt.
44 And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, I am Pha'raoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of E'gypt.
45 And Pha'raoh called Jo'seph's name ||Zaph'nath-pa-a-ne'ah; and he gave him to wife As'e-nath the daughter of Pot'i-phe-rah ||priest of On. And Jo'seph went out over all the land of E'gypt.
46 ¶And Jo'seph was thirty years old when he [o]stood before Pha'raoh king of E'gypt. And Jo'seph went out from the presence of Pha'raoh, and went throughout all the land of E'gypt.
47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.
48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of E'gypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.
49 And Jo'seph gathered corn [p]as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.
50 [q]And unto Jo'seph were born two sons before the years of famine came: which As'e-nath the daughter of Pot'i-phe-rah ||priest of On bare unto him.
51 And Jo'seph called the name of the firstborn ||Ma-nas'-seh: For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.
52 And the name of the second called he ||E'phra-im: For God hath caused me to be [r]fruitful in the land of my affliction.

28 That is the thing which I spake unto Pha'raoh: what God is about to do he hath shewed unto Pha'raoh.
29 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty 30 throughout all the land of E'gypt: and there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of E'gypt; and 31 the famine shall consume the land; and the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine which followeth; for it shall be very griev-

42 set thee over all the land of E'gypt. And Pha'raoh took off his signet ring from his hand, and put it upon Jo'seph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of [2]fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck;
43 and he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, [3]Bow the knee: and he set him over all the land of 44 E'gypt. And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, I am Pha'raoh, and without thee shall no man lift up
45 his hand or his foot in all the land of E'gypt. And Pha'raoh called Jo'seph's name Zaph'e-nath-pa-ne'ah; and he gave him to wife As'e-nath the daughter of Pot'i-phe-ra priest of On. And Jo'seph went out

11 And their father Is'ra-el said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and [d]carry down the man a present, a little [e]balm, and a little honey, spices and myrrh, nuts and almonds:

12 And take double money in your hand; and the money [f]that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

14 And God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Ben'ja-min. [g]‖ If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Ben'ja-min; and rose up, and went down to E'gypt, and stood before Jo'seph.

16 And when Jo'seph saw Ben'ja-min with them, he said to the [h]ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and †slay, and make ready; for these men shall †dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Jo'seph bade; and the man brought the men into Jo'seph's house.

18 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Jo'seph's house; and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time, are we brought in; that he may †seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 And they came near to the steward of Jo'seph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

21 And [k]it came to pass, when we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: †I had your money. And he brought Sim'e-on out unto them.

26 ¶ And when Jo'seph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and [m]bowed themselves to him to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their †welfare, and said, †Is your father well, the old man [n]of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive. [o]And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Ben'ja-min, [p]his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, [q]of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

30 And Jo'seph made haste; for [r]his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and [s]wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on [t]bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the E-gyp'tians, which did eat with him, by themselves: because the E-gyp'tians might not eat bread with the He'brews; for that is [u]an abomination unto the E-gyp'tians.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Joseph's policy to stay his brethren—Judah's humble supplication to Joseph.

[†] Heb. him that was over his house.

AND he commanded † the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Jo'seph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Jo'seph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he || divineth? ye have done evil in so doing.

|| Or, maketh trial.

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing:

[a] ch. 43. 21

8 Behold, [a] the money, which we found in our sacks' mouths, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Ca'naan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

[b] ch. 31. 32.

9 With whomsoever of thy servants it be found, [b] both let him die, and we also will be my lord's bondmen.

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Ben'ja-min's sack.

[f] Prov. 17. 15.

[h] ch. 37. 3.

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

[i] ch. 42. 15, 20.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, [i] Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

3 And he said, I am God, [d]the God of thy father: fear not to go down into E'gypt; for I will there [e]make of thee a great nation.
4 [f]I will go down with thee into E'gypt; and I will also surely [g]bring thee up again: and [h]Jo'seph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.
5 And [i]Ja'cob rose up from Be'er-she'ba: and the sons of Is'ra-el carried Ja'cob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons [k]which Pha'raoh had sent to carry him.
6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Ca'naan, and came into E'gypt, [l]Ja'cob, and all his seed with him:
7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into E'gypt.
8 ¶ And [m]these are the names of the children of Is'ra-el, which came into E'gypt, Ja'cob and his sons: [n]Reu'ben, Ja'cob's firstborn.

14 And he fell upon his brother Ben'ja-min's neck, and 15 wept; and Ben'ja-min wept upon his neck. And he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.
16 And the fame thereof was heard in Pha'raoh's house, saying, Jo'seph's brethren are come: and it
17 pleased Pha'raoh well, and his servants. And Pha'raoh said unto Jo'seph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land
18 of Ca'naan; and take your father and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of E'gypt, and ye shall eat the fat
19 of the land. Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of E'gypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father,
20 and come. Also regard not your stuff; for the good
21 of all the land of E'gypt is yours. And the sons of Is'ra-el did so: and Jo'seph gave them wagons, according to the commandment of Pha'raoh, and gave 22 them provision for the way. To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment; but to Ben'ja-min he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes
23 of raiment. And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with the good things of E'gypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread
24 and victual for his father by the way. So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said
25 unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way. And they went up out of E'gypt, and came into the land
26 of Ca'naan unto Ja'cob their father. And they told him, saying, Jo'seph is yet alive, and he is ruler over all the land of E'gypt. And his heart fainted, for he 27 believed them not. And they told him all the words of Jo'seph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the wagons which Jo'seph had sent to carry 28 him, the spirit of Ja'cob their father revived: and Is'ra-el said, It is enough; Jo'seph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

46 And Is'ra-el took his journey with all that he had, and came to Be'er-she'ba, and offered sacrifices unto
2 the God of his father I'saac. And God spake unto Is'ra-el in the visions of the night, and said, Ja'cob,
3 Ja'cob. And he said, Here am I. And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into E'gypt; for I will there make of thee a great
4 nation: I will go down with thee into E'gypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Jo'seph
5 shall put his hand upon thine eyes. And Ja'cob rose up from Be'er-she'ba: and the sons of Is'ra-el carried Ja'cob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pha'raoh had sent
6 to carry him. And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Ca'naan, and came into E'gypt, Ja'cob, and all his seed with 7 him: his sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into E'gypt.
8 And these are the names of the children of Is'ra-el, which came into E'gypt, Ja'cob and his sons:
9 Reu'ben, Ja'cob's firstborn. And the sons of Reu'ben; Ha'noch, and Pal'lu, and Hez'ron, and Car'mi.
10 And the sons of Sim'e-on; [1]Jem'u-el, and Ja'min, and O'had, and [2]Ja'chin, and [3]Zo'har, and Sha'ul the 11 son of a Ca'naan-i-tish woman. And the sons of the land are we come: for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks, [o]for the famine is sore in the land of Ca'naan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants [h]dwell in the land of Go'shen.

5 And Pha'raoh spake unto Jo'seph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 [i]The land of E'gypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; [k]in the land of Go'shen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

7 And Jo'seph brought in Ja'cob his father, and set him before Pha'raoh: and Ja'cob blessed Pha'raoh.

8 And Pha'raoh said unto Ja'cob, †How old art thou?

9 And Ja'cob said unto Pha'raoh, [l]The days of the years of my pilgrimage are a hundred and thirty years: [m]few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and [n]have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

10 And Ja'cob [o]blessed Pha'raoh, and went out from before Pha'raoh.

11 ¶And Jo'seph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of E'gypt, in the best of the land, in the land of [p]Ra-me'ses, [q]as Pha'raoh had commanded.

12 And Jo'seph nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with || †bread according to their families.

13 ¶And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, [r]so that the land of E'gypt and all the land of Ca'naan fainted by reason of the famine.

14 [s]And Jo'seph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of E'gypt, and in the land of Ca'naan, for the corn which they bought: and Jo'seph brought the money into Pha'raoh's house.

1702.

15 And when money failed in the land of E'gypt, and in the land of Ca'naan, all the E-gyp'tians came unto Jo'seph, and said, Give us bread: for [t]why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Jo'seph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Jo'seph: and Jo'seph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he †fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not aught left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies, and our lands:

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pha'raoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Jo'seph bought all the land of E'gypt for Pha'raoh; for the E-gyp'tians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pha'raoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of E'gypt even to the other end thereof.

22 [u]Only the land of the || priests bought he not; for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pha'raoh, and did eat their portion which Pha'raoh gave them: wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 Then Jo'seph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pha'raoh: lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

Joseph visiteth his sick father—Jacob repeateth the promise.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Jo'seph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Ma-nas'seh and E'phra-im.

2 And one told Ja'cob, and said, Behold, thy son Jo'seph cometh unto thee: and Is'ra-el strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

Jacob calleth his sons together—His speech to Reuben—His death.

AND Ja'cob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may [a]tell you that which shall befall you [b]in the last days.

2 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Ja'cob; and [a]hearken unto Is'ra-el your father.

7 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: [p]I will divide them in Ja'cob and scatter them in Is'ra-el.

8 ¶[q]Ju'dah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: [r]thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; [s]thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

9 Ju'dah is [t]a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: [u]he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?

He giveth goodly words.
22 Jo'seph is [6]a fruitful bough,
A fruitful bough by a fountain;
His [7]branches run over the wall.
23 The archers have sorely grieved him,
And shot at him, and persecuted him:
24 But his bow abode in strength,
And the arms of his hands were made [8]strong,
By the hands of the Mighty One of Ja'cob,
([9]From thence is the shepherd, the stone of Is'ra-el,)
25 Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee,
And by the Almighty, who shall bless thee,
With blessings of heaven above,
Blessings of the deep that coucheth beneath,
Blessings of the breasts, and of the womb.
26 The blessings of thy father
Have prevailed above [10]the blessings of my progenitors
Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills:
They shall be on the head of Jo'seph,
And on the crown of the head of him [11]that was separate from his brethren.
27 Ben'ja-min is a wolf that ravineth:
In the morning he shall devour the prey,
And at even he shall divide the spoil.

28 All these are the twelve tribes of Is'ra-el: and this is it that their father spake unto them and blessed them; every one according to his blessing
29 he blessed them. And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the 30 field of E'phron the Hit'tite, in the cave that is in the field of Mach-pe'lah, which is before Mam're, in the land of Ca'naan, which A'bra-ham bought with the field from E'phron the Hit'tite for a possession of 31 a buryingplace: there they buried A'bra-ham and Sa'rah his wife; there they buried I'saac and Re-bek'ah
32 his wife; and there I buried Le'ah: the field and the cave that is therein, which was purchased from the 33 children of Heth. And when Ja'cob made an end of charging his sons, he gathered up his feet into the 50 bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people. And Jo'seph fell upon his father's
2 face, and wept upon him, and kissed him. And Jo'seph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father: and the physicians embalmed
3 Is'ra-el. And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fullfilled the days of embalming: and the E-gyp'tians wept for him threescore and ten days.
4 And when the days of weeping for him were past,

Jo'seph spake unto [c]the house of Pha'raoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pha'raoh, saying,

5 [f]My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave [g]which I have digged for me in the land of Ca'naan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

6 And Pha'raoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

7 ¶And Jo'seph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pha'raoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of E'gypt,

8 And all the house of Jo'seph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Go'shen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

10 And they came to the threshingfloor of A'tad, which is beyond Jor'dan; and there they [h]mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: [i]and he made a mourning for his father seven days.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Ca'naan-ites, saw the mourning in the floor of A'tad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the E-gyp'tians: wherefore the name of it is called || A'bel-miz'ra-im, which is beyond Jor'dan.

12 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

13 For [k]his sons carried him into the land of Ca'naan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Mach-pe'lah, which A'bra-ham [l]bought with the field for a possession of a buryingplace of E'phron the Hit'tite, before Mam're.

14 ¶And Jo'seph returned into E'gypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶And when Jo'seph's brethren saw that their father was dead, [m]they said, Jo'seph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they †sent a messenger unto Jo'seph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying,

17 So shall ye say unto Jo'seph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; [n]for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of [o]the God of thy father. And Jo'seph wept when they spake unto him.

18 And his brethren also went and [p]fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

19 And Jo'seph said unto them, [q]Fear not: [r]for am I in the place of God?

20 [s]But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but [t]God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: [u]I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake †kindly unto them.

22 ¶And Jo'seph dwelt in E'gypt, he, and his father's house: and Jo'seph lived a hundred and ten years.

23 And Jo'seph saw E'phra-im's children [x]of the third generation: [y]the children also of Ma'chir the son of Ma-nas'seh [z]were †brought up upon Jo'seph's knees.

24 And Jo'seph said unto his brethren, I die; and [a]God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land unto the land [b]which he sware to A'bra-ham, to I'saac, and to Ja'cob.

25 And [c]Jo'seph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 So Jo'seph died, being a hundred and ten years old: and they [d]embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in E'gypt.

B. C. 1689.

Jo'seph spake unto the house of Pha'raoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray
5 you, in the ears of Pha'raoh, saying, My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave which I [1]have digged for me in the land of Ca'naan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come
6 again. And Pha'raoh said, Go up, and bury thy
7 father, according as he made thee swear. And Jo'seph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pha'raoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of E'gypt,
8 and all the house of Jo'seph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of 13 as he commanded them: for his sons carried him into the land of Ca'naan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Mach-pe'lah, which A'bra-ham bought with the field, for a possession of a buryingplace, of E'phron the Hit'tite, before Mam're.

14 And Jo'seph returned into E'gypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his 15 father, after he had buried his father. And when Jo'seph's brethren saw that their father was dead, they said, It may be that Jo'seph will hate us, and will fully requite us all the evil which we did unto 16 him. And they sent a message unto Jo'seph, saying,
17 Thy father did command before he died, saying, So shall ye say unto Jo'seph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the transgression of thy brethren, and their sin, for that they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the transgression of the servants of the God of thy father. And Jo'seph wept when they spake
18 unto him. And his brethren also went and fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be 19 thy servants. And Jo'seph said unto them, Fear
20 not: for am I in the place of God? And as for you, ye meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to 21 save much people alive. Now therefore fear ye not: I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake [3]kindly unto them.
22 And Jo'seph dwelt in E'gypt, he, and his father's house: and Jo'seph lived an hundred and ten years.
23 And Jo'seph saw E'phra-im's children of the third generation: the children also of Ma'chir the son of 24 Ma-nas'seh were born upon Jo'seph's knees. And Jo'seph said unto his brethren, I die: but God will surely visit you, and bring you up out of this land unto the land which he sware to A'bra-ham, to I'saac,
25 and to Ja'cob. And Jo'seph took an oath of the children of Is'ra-el, saying, God will surely visit you, 26 and ye shall carry up my bones from hence. So Jo'seph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in E'gypt.

CHAPTER I.

The children of Israel multiply—Pharaoh killeth the male children.

[a] NOW [a]these are the names of the children of Is'ra-el, which came into E'gypt; every man and his household came with Ja'cob.

2 Reu'ben, Sim'e-on, Le'vi, and Ju'dah,

3 Is'sa-char, Zeb'u-lun, and Ben'ja-min,

4 Dan, and Naph'ta-li, Gad, and Ash'er.

5 And all the souls that came out of the †loins of Ja'cob were [b]seventy souls: for Jo'seph was in E'gypt already.

6 And [c]Jo'seph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 ¶ [d]And the children of Is'ra-el were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 Now there [e]arose up a new king over E'gypt, which knew not Jo'seph.

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, [f]the people of the children of Is'ra-el are more and mightier than we:

10 [g]Come on, let us [h]deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

11 Therefore they did set over them taskmasters [i]to afflict them with their [k]burdens. And they built for Pha'raoh treasure cities, Pi'thom [l]and Ra-am'ses.

12 †But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Is'ra-el.

13 And the E-gyp'tians made the children of Is'ra-el to serve with rigour:

14 And they [m]made their lives bitter with hard bondage, [n]in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

15 ¶ And the king of E'gypt spake to the He'brew midwives, of which the name of the one was Shiph'rah, and the name of the other Pu'ah;

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the He'brew women, and see them upon the stools, if it be a son, then ye shall kill him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But the midwives [o]feared God, and did not [p]as the king of E'gypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive.

18 And the king of E'gypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive?

19 And [q]the midwives said unto Pha'raoh, Because the He'brew women are not as the E-gyp'tian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 [r]Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, [s]that he made them houses.

22 And Pha'raoh charged all his people, saying, [t]Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAPTER II.

Moses is born—He slayeth an Egyptian—Marrieth Zipporah.

B. C. 1571.

AND there went a [a]man of the house of Le'vi, and took to wife a daughter of Le'vi.

2 And the woman conceived and bare a son: and [b]when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months.

3 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

4 [c]And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 ¶And the [d]daughter of Pha'raoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's ride: and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the He'brews' children.

7 Then said his sister to Pha'raoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the He'brew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pha'raoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

9 And Pha'raoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pha'raoh's daughter, and he became [e]her son. And she called his name ‖ Mo'ses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

11 ¶And it came to pass in those days, [f]when Mo'ses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their [g]burdens: and he spied an E-gyp'tian smiting a He'brew, one of his brethren.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he [h]slew the E-gyp'tian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And [i]when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the He'brews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, [k]Who made thee †a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the E-gyp'tian? And Mo'ses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pha'raoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Mo'ses. But [l]Mo'ses fled from the face of Pha'raoh, and dwelt in the land of Mid'i-an: and he sat down by [m]a well.

16 [n]Now the ‖ priest of Mid'i-an had seven daughters: [o]and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Mo'ses stood up and helped them, and [p]watered their flock.

18 And when they came to [q]Reu'el their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?

19 And they said, An E-gyp'tian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may [r]eat bread.

21 And Mo'ses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Mo'ses [s]Zip-po'rah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name ‖['Ger'-shom: for he said, I have been [u]a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶And it came to pass, [z]in process of time, that the king of E'gypt died: and the children of Is'ra-el [y]sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and [z]their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

2 And there went a man of the house of Le'vi, and 2 took to wife a daughter of Le'vi. And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three 3 months. And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of [1]bulrushes, and daubed it with [2]slime and with pitch; and she put the child therein, and laid it in the flags by the river's brink.
4 And his sister stood afar off, to know what would 5 be done to him. And the daughter of Pha'raoh came down to bathe at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river side; and she saw the ark among the flags, and sent her handmaid to fetch 6 it. And she opened it, and saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the He'brews' children.
7 Then said his sister to Pha'raoh's daughter, Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the He'brew women, that 8 she may nurse the child for thee? And Pha'raoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and 9 called the child's mother. And Pha'raoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman 10 took the child, and nursed it. And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pha'raoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name [3]Mo'ses, and said, Because I [4]drew him out of the water.
11 And it came to pass in those days, when Mo'ses was grown up, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he saw an E-gyp'tian 12 smiting an He'brew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he smote the E-gyp'tian, and hid 13 him in the sand. And he went out the second day, and, behold, two men of the He'brews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, 14 Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And he said,
Who made thee a prince and a judge over us?
thinkest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the E-gyp'- tian? And Mo'ses feared, and said, Surely the thing 15 is known. Now when Pha'raoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Mo'ses. But Mo'ses fled from the face of Pha'raoh, and dwelt in the land of Mid'i-an: and 16 he sat down by a well. Now the priest of Mid'i-an had seven daughters: and they came and drew water and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.
17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Mo'ses stood up and helped them, and watered their 18 flock. And when they came to Reu'el their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?
19 And they said, An E-gyp'tian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and moreover he drew water 20 for us, and watered the flock. And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have 21 left the man? call him, that he may eat bread. And Mo'ses was content to dwell with the man: and he 22 gave Mo'ses Zip-po'rah his daughter. And she bare a son, and he called his name Ger'shom: for he said,
I have been [5]a sojourner in a strange land.

23 And it came to pass in the course of those many days, that the king of E'gypt died: and the children of Is'ra-el sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

CHAPTER III.

God appeareth to Moses in a burning bush—His message to Israel.

NOW Mo'ses kept the flock of Je'thro his father in law, [a]the priest of Mid'i-an: and he led the flock to the back side of the desert, and came to [b]the mountain of God, even to Ho'reb.
2 And [c]the Angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.
3 And Mo'ses said, I will now turn aside, and see this [d]great sight, why the bush is not burnt.
4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called [e]unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Mo'ses, Mo'ses. And he said, Here am I.
5 And he said, Draw not nigh hither: [f]put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.
6 Moreover he said, [g]I am the God of thy father, the God of A'bra-ham, the God of I'saac, and the God of Ja'cob. And Mo'ses hid his face; for [h]he was afraid to look upon God.
7 ¶And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in E'gypt, and [i]have heard their cry [k]by reason of their taskmasters; for [l]I know their sorrows:
8 And [m]I am come down to [n]deliver them out of the hand of the E-gyp'tians, and to bring them up out of that land [o]unto a good land and a large, unto a land [p]flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of [q]the Ca'naan-ites, and the Hit'tites, and the Am'o-rites, and the Per'iz-zites, and the Hi'vites, and the Jeb'u-sites.
9 Now therefore, behold, [r]the cry of the children of Is'ra-el is come unto me: and I have also seen the [s]oppression wherewith the E-gyp[s]tians oppress them.
10 [t]Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pha'raoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Is'ra-el out of E'gypt.
11 ¶And Mo'ses said unto God, [u]Who am I, that I should go unto Pha'raoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Is'ra-el out of E'gypt?
12 And he said, [x]Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of E'gypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.
13 And Mo'ses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Is'ra-el, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?
14 And God said unto Mo'ses, I AM THAT I AM: And he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Is'ra-el, [y]I AM hath sent me unto you.
15 And God said moreover unto Mo'ses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Is'ra-el, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of A'bra-ham, the God of I'saac, and the God of Ja'cob hath sent me unto you: this is [z]my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.
16 Go, and [a]gather the elders of Is'rael together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of A'bra-ham, of I'saac, and of Ja'cob, appeared unto me, saying, [b]I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in E'gypt:
17 And I have said, [c]I will bring you up out of the affliction of E'gypt unto the land of the Ca'naan-ites, and the Hit'tites, and the Am'o-rites, and the Per'iz-zites, and the Hi'vites, and the Jeb'u-sites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

come, thou and the elders of I'sra-el, unto the king of E'gypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the He'brews hath [f]met with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of E'gypt [g]will not let you go, || no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will [h]stretch out my hand, and smite E'gypt with [i]all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and [k]after that he will let you go.

21 And [l]I will give this people favour in the sight of the E-gyp'tians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

CHAPTER IV.

Moses' rod is turned into a serpent—God's message to Pharaoh.

AND Mo'ses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, [a]A rod.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Mo'ses fled from before it.

4 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

5 That they may [b]believe that the [c]LORD God of their fathers, the God of A'bra-ham, the God of I'saac, and the God of Ja'cob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous [d]as snow.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again; and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, [e]it was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and [f]the water which thou takest out of the river †shall become blood upon the dry land.

10 ¶ And Mo'ses said unto the LORD, O my LORD, I am not †eloquent, neither †heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant; but [g]I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

11 And the LORD said unto him, [h]Who hath made man's mouth, or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and I will be [i]with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

13 And he said, O my Lord, [k]send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou || wilt send.

14 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Mo'ses, and he said, Is not Aa'ron the Le'vite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, [l]he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

15 And [m]thou shalt speak unto him, and [n]put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and [o]will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and [p]thou shalt be to him instead of God.

17 And thou shalt take [q]this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

11 And the LORD said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh a man dumb, or deaf, or 12 seeing, or blind? is it not I the LORD? Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach
13 thee what thou shalt speak. And he said, Oh Lord, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou
14 wilt send. And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Mo'ses, and he said, Is there not Aa'ron thy brother the Le'vite? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his

18 ¶And Mo'ses went and returned to †Je'thro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in E'gypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Je'thro said to Mo'ses, Go in peace.

19 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses in Mid'i-an, Go, return into E'gypt: for [r]all the men are dead which sought thy life.

20 And Mo'ses took his wife, and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of E'gypt: and Mo'ses took [s]the rod of God in his hand.

21 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, When thou goest to return into E'gypt, see that thou do all those [t]wonders before Pha'raoh, which I have put in thine hand: but [u]I will harden his heart that he shall not let the people go.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pha'raoh, Thus saith the LORD, [x]Is'ra-el is my son, [y]even my firstborn:

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, [z]I will slay thy son, even thy firstborn.

24 ¶And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD [a]met him, and sought to [b]kill him.

25 Then Zip-po'rah took [c]a sharp || stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and †cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

27 ¶And the LORD said to Aa'ron, Go into the wilderness [d]to meet Mo'ses. And he went, and met him in [e]the mount of God, and kissed him.

28 And Mo'ses [f]told Aa'ron all the words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the [g]signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶And Mo'ses and Aa'ron [h]went, and gathered together all the elders of the children of Is'ra-el:

30 [i]And Aa'ron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Mo'ses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

31 And the people [k]believed: and when they heard that the LORD had [l]visited the children of Is'ra-el, and that he [m]had looked upon their affliction, then [n]they bowed their heads and worshipped.

CHAPTER V.

Pharaoh chideth Moses and Aaron—He increaseth the Israelites' task.

AND afterward Mo'ses and Aa'ron went in, and told Pha'raoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Is'ra-el, Let my people go, that they may hold [a]a feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pha'raoh said, [b]Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Is'ra-el go? I know not the LORD, [c]neither will I let Is'ra-el go.

3 And they said, [d]The God of the He'brews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

4 And the king of E'gypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Mo'ses and Aa'ron, let the people from their works? get you unto your [e]burdens.

5 And Pha'raoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are [f]many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 And Pha'raoh commanded the same day the [g]taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish aught thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 †Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.

10 ¶And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pha'raoh, I will not give you straw.

18 And Mo'ses went and returned to [1]Je'thro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in E'gypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And 19 Je'thro said to Mo'ses, Go in peace. And the LORD said unto Mo'ses in Mid'i-an, Go, return into E'gypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life.

20 And Mo'ses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of E'gypt: and Mo'ses took the rod of God in his hand.

21 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, When thou goest back into E'gypt, see that thou do before Pha'raoh all the wonders which I have put in thine hand: but I will [2]harden his heart, and he will not let the people

22 go. And thou shalt say unto Pha'raoh, Thus saith

23 the LORD, Is'ra-el is my son, my firstborn: and I have said unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me; and thou hast refused to let him go: behold, I

24 will slay thy son, thy firstborn. And it came to pass on the way at the lodging place, that the LORD

25 met him, and sought to kill him. Then Zip-po'rah took a flint, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and [3]cast it at his feet; and she said, Surely a bridegroom

26 of blood art thou to me. So he let him alone. Then she said, [4]A bridegroom of blood art thou, because of the circumcision.

27 And the LORD said to Aa'ron, Go into the wilderness to meet Mo'ses. And he went, and met him in 28 the mountain of God, and kissed him. And Mo'ses told Aa'ron all the words of the LORD wherewith he had sent him, and all the signs wherewith he had

29 charged him. And Mo'ses and Aa'ron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of

30 Is'ra-el: and Aa'ron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Mo'ses, and did the signs in 31 the sight of the people. And the people believed: and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Is'ra-el, and that he had seen their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped.

5 And afterward Mo'ses and Aa'ron came, and said unto Pha'raoh, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Is'ra-el, Let my people go, that they may hold a

2 feast unto me in the wilderness. And Pha'raoh said, Who is the LORD, that I should hearken unto his voice to let Is'ra-el go? I know not the LORD,

3 and moreover I will not let Is'ra-el go. And they said, The God of the He'brews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the

4 sword. And the king of E'gypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Mo'ses and Aa'ron, loose the people from their works? get you unto your

5 burdens. And Pha'raoh said, Behold, the people of the land are now many, and ye make them

6 rest from their burdens. And the same day Pha'raoh commanded the taskmasters of the people, and

7 their officers, saying, Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them

8 go and gather straw for themselves. And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish aught thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying,

9 Let us go and sacrifice to our God. Let heavier work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard lying words.

10 And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pha'raoh, I will not give you straw.

CHAPTER VII.

Moses' rod is turned into a serpent—The river is turned into blood.

AND the LORD said unto Mo'ses, See, I have made thee [a]a god to Pha'raoh; and Aa'ron thy brother shall be [b]thy prophet.

2 Thou [c]shalt speak all that I command thee; and Aa'ron thy brother shall speak unto Pha'raoh, that he send the children of Is'ra-el out of his land.

3 And [d]I will harden Pha'raoh's heart, and [e]multiply my [f]signs and my wonders in the land of E'gypt.

28 And it came to pass on the day when the LORD
29 spake unto Mo'ses in the land of E'gypt, that the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying, I am the LORD: speak thou unto Pha'raoh king of E'gypt all that I
30 speak unto thee. And Mo'ses said before the LORD,
7 Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pha'raoh hearken unto me? And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, See, I have made thee a god to Pha'raoh: and Aa'ron thy brother shall be thy

6 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron [l]did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Mo'ses was [m]fourscore years old, and Aa'ron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pha'raoh.

8 ¶And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, and unto Aa'ron, saying,

9 When Pha'raoh shall speak unto you, saying, [n]Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aa'ron, [o]Take thy rod, and cast it before Pha'raoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 ¶And Mo'ses and Aa'ron went in unto Pha'raoh, and they did so [p]as the LORD had commanded: and Aa'ron cast down his rod before Pha'raoh, and before his servants, and it [q]became a serpent.

11 Then Pha'raoh also [r]called the wise men and [s]the sorcerers: now the magicians of E'gypt, they also [t]did in like manner with their enchantments.

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aa'ron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he hardened Pha'raoh's heart that he hearkened not unto them; [u]as the LORD had said.

14 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [x]Pha'raoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pha'raoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and [y]the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, [z]The LORD God of the He'brews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, [a]that they may serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this [b]thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and [c]they shall be turned [d]to blood.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the E-gyp'tians shall [e]loathe to drink of the water of the river.

19 ¶And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Say unto Aa'ron, Take thy rod, and [f]stretch out thine hand upon the waters of E'gypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their †pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of E'gypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

20 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he [g]lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pha'raoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the [h]waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the E-gyp'tians [i]could not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of E'gypt.

22 [k]And the magicians of E'gypt did so with their enchantments: and Pha'raoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; [l]as the LORD had said.

23 And Pha'raoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

24 And all the E-gyp'tians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

CHAPTER VIII.

Frogs are sent—Pharaoh inclineth to let the people go, but yet is hardened.

AND the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Go unto Pha'raoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, [a]that they may serve me.

2 And if thou [b]refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with [c]frogs:

B. C. 1491.

6 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron did so; as the LORD com-
7 manded them, so did they. And Mo'ses was four-score years old, and Aa'ron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pha'raoh.

8 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses and unto 9 Aa'ron, saying, When Pha'raoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a wonder for you: then thou shalt say unto Aa'ron, Take thy rod, and cast it down before Pha'raoh, that it become a [1]serpent.
10 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron went in unto Pha'raoh, and they did so, as the LORD had commanded: and Aa'ron cast down his rod before Pha'raoh and before
11 his servants, and it became a serpent. Then Pha'raoh also called for the wise men and the sorcerers: and they also, the [2]magicians of E'gypt, did in like 12 manner with their [3]enchantments. For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: 13 but Aa'ron's rod swallowed up their rods. And Pha'raoh's heart [4]was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken.

14 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Pha'raoh's heart
15 is [5]stubborn, he refuseth to let the people go. Get thee unto Pha'raoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink to meet him; and the rod which was turned 16 to a [6]serpent shalt thou take in thine hand. And thou shalt say unto him, the LORD, the God of the He'brews, hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness:
17 and, behold, hitherto thou hast not hearkened. Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the 18 river, and they shall be turned to blood. And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the E-gyp'tians shall loathe to drink
19 water from the river. And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Say unto Aa'ron, Take thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the waters of E'gypt, over their rivers, over their [7]streams, and over their pools, and over all their ponds of water, that they may become blood; and there shall be blood throughout all the land of E'gypt, both in vessels of wood and in ves-
20 sels of stone. And Mo'ses and Aa'ron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pha'raoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the waters that were in the river were turned to 21 blood. And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the E-gyp'tians could not drink water from the river; and the blood was throughout 22 all the land of E'gypt. And the magicians of E'gypt did in like manner with their enchantments: and Pha'raoh's heart [4]was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken.
23 And Pha'raoh turned and went into his house,
24 neither did he [8]lay even this to heart. And all the E-gyp'tians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the 25 river. And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

8 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Go in unto Pha'raoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve
2 me. And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into [d]thy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy || kneadingtroughs:

4 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

5 ¶And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Say unto Aa'ron, [e]Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of E'gypt.

6 And Aa'ron stretched out his hand over the waters of E'gypt; and [f]the frogs came up, and covered the land of E'gypt.

7 [g]And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of E'gypt.

8 ¶Then Pha'raoh called for Mo'ses and Aa'ron, and said, [h]Entreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Mo'ses said unto Pha'raoh, ||Glory over me: ||when shall I entreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, †to destroy the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, ||To-morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word; that thou mayest know that [i]there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 ¶And Mo'ses and Aa'ron went out from Pha'raoh: and Mo'ses [k]cried unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pha'raoh.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Mo'ses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps; and the land stank.

15 But when Pha'raoh saw that there was [l]respite, [m]he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Say unto A'aron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of E'gypt.

17 And they did so; for Aa'ron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and [n]it became lice in man, and in beast; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of E'gypt.

18 And [o]the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they [p]could not: so there were lice upon man, and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pha'raoh, This is [q]the finger of God: and Pha'raoh's [r]heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [s]Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pha'raoh; lo, he cometh forth to the water; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [t]Let my people go, that they may serve me.

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send ||swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the E-gyp'tians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; [m]that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will [n]stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth.

16 And in very deed for [o]this cause have I †raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in E'gypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pha'raoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that †regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be [p]hail in all the land of E'gypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of E'gypt.

23 And Mo'ses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and [q]the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of E'gypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of E'gypt since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of E'gypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail [r]smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

26 [s]Only in the land of Go'shen, where the children of Is'ra-el were, was there no hail.

27 ¶And Pha'raoh sent, and called for Mo'ses and Aa'ron, and said unto them, [t]I have sinned this time: [u]the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 [x]Entreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more †mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Mo'ses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will [y]spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the [z]earth is the LORD'S.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, [a]I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: [b]for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

32 But the wheat and the rye were not smitten: for they were †not grown up.

33 And Mo'ses went out of the city from Pha'raoh, and [c]spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pha'raoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And [d]the heart of Pha'raoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Is'ra-el go; as the LORD had spoken †by Mo'ses.

CHAPTER X.

Pharaoh inclineth to let the Israelites go—Plague of the locusts.

AND the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Go in unto Pha'raoh: [a]for I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, [b]that I might shew these my signs before him:

2 And that [c]thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son,

B. C. 1491.

14 For I will this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou mayest know that there is none
15 like me in all the earth. For now I had put forth my hand, and smitten thee and thy people with pestilence, and thou hadst been cut off from the 16 earth: but in very deed for this cause have I made thee to stand, for to shew thee my power, and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.
17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that 18 thou wilt not let them go? Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in E'gypt since the 19 day it was founded even until now. Now therefore send, hasten in thy cattle and all that thou hast in the field; for every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall 20 die. He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pha'raoh made his servants and his 21 cattle flee into the houses: and he that regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.
22 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of E'gypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the 23 land of E'gypt. And Mo'ses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent thunder and hail, and fire ran down unto the earth; and the LORD
24 rained hail upon the land of E'gypt. So there was hail, and fire [1]mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as had not been in all the land of E'gypt since
25 it became a nation. And the hail smote throughout all the land of E'gypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the 26 field, and brake every tree of the field. Only in the land of Go'shen, where the children of Is'ra-el were,
27 was there no hail. And Pha'raoh sent, and called for Mo'ses and Aa'ron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and 28 my people are wicked. Intreat the LORD; for there hath been enough of these [2]mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no
29 longer. And Mo'ses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou may-30 est know that the earth is the LORD'S. But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet
31 fear the LORD God. And the flax and the barley were smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the 32 flax [3]was bolled. But the wheat and the spelt were 33 not smitten: for they were not grown up. And Mo'ses went out of the city from Pha'raoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon 34 the earth. And when Pha'raoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and [4]hardened his heart, he and his serv-
35 ants. And the heart of Pha'raoh [5]was hardened, and he did not let the children of Is'ra-el go; as the LORD had spoken by Mo'ses.

10 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Go in unto Pha'raoh: for I have [4]hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs in the midst of 2 them: and that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in E'gypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron came in unto Pha'raoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the He'brews, How long wilt thou refuse to [d]humble thyself before me? Let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-morrow will I bring the [e]locusts into thy coast:

5 And they shall cover the †face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and [f]they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

6 And they [g]shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the E-gyp'tians; which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pha'raoh.

7 And Pha'raoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be [h]a snare unto us? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that E'gypt is destroyed?

8 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron were brought again unto Pha'raoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but †who are they that shall go?

9 And Mo'ses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for [i]we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pha'raoh's presence.

12 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [k]Stretch out thine hand over the land of E'gypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of E'gypt, and [l]eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Mo'ses stretched forth his rod over the land of E'gypt, and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

14 And [m]the locusts went up over all the land of E'gypt, and rested in all the coasts of E'gypt: very grievous were they; [n]before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For they [o]covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they [p]did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of E'gypt.

16 ¶Then Pha'raoh †called for Mo'ses and Aa'ron in haste; and he said, [q]I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

18 And he [s]went out from Pha'raoh, and entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and †cast them [t]into the Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of E'gypt.

20 But the LORD [u]hardened Pha'raoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Is'ra-el go.

24 ¶And Pha'raoh called unto Mo'ses, and [a]said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your [b]little ones also go with you.

CHAPTER XI.

The Israelites borrow jewels of their neighbours—Death of the firstborn.

AND the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pha'raoh, and upon E'gypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: [a]when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, [b]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 [c]And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the E-gyp'tians. Moreover, the man [d]Mo'ses was very great in the land of E'gypt, in the sight of Pha'raoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 And Mo'ses said, Thus saith the LORD, [e]About midnight will I go out into the midst of E'gypt:

5 And [f]all the firstborn in the land of E'gypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pha'raoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of beasts.

6 [g]And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of E'gypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 [h]But against any of the children of Is'rael [i]shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the E-gyp'tians and Is'ra-el.

8 And [k]all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people †that follow thee: and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pha'raoh in †a great anger.

9 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [l]Pha'raoh shall not hearken unto you; that [m]my wonders may be multiplied in the land of E'gypt.

10 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron did all these wonders before Pha'raoh: [n]and the LORD hardened Pha'raoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Is'ra-el go out of his land.

5 Your lamb shall be [b]without blemish, a male †of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep or from the goats:

6 And ye shall keep it up until the [c]fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Is'ra-el shall kill it †in the evening.

7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts, and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and [d]unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but [e]roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

11 ¶And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: [g]it is the LORD'S passover.

12 For I [h]will pass through the land of E'gypt this night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of E'gypt, both man and beast; and [i]against all the ||gods of E'gypt I will execute judgment: [k]I am the LORD.

13 And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you †to destroy you, when I smite the land of E'gypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you [l]for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a [m]feast to the LORD throughout your generations: ye shall keep it a feast [n]by an ordinance for ever.

15 [o]Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, [p]that soul shall be cut off from Is'ra-el.

16 And in the first day there shall be [q]a holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation to you; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every †man must eat, that only may be done of you.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for [r]in this selfsame day have I brought your armies out of the land of E'gypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever.

18 ¶[s]In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

19 [t]Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, [u]even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Is'ra-el, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶Then Mo'ses called for all the elders of Is'ra-el, and said unto them, [z]Draw out and take you a ||lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

B. C. 1491.

4 and if the household be too little for a lamb, then shall he and his neighbour next unto his house take one according to the number of the souls; according to every man's eating ye shall make your
5 count for the lamb. Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it
6 from the sheep, or from the goats: and ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of 7 Is'ra-el shall kill it [1]at even. And they shall take of the blood, and put it on the two side posts and on the lintel, upon the houses wherein they shall
8 eat it. And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread; with bitter
9 herbs they shall eat it. Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roast with fire; its head
10 with its legs and with the inwards thereof. And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; but that which remaineth of it until the morning ye
11 shall burn with fire. And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand: and ye shall eat it in haste: it
12 is the LORD'S passover. For I will go through the land of E'gypt in that night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of E'gypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of E'gypt I will execute
13 judgements: I am the LORD. And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and there shall no plague be upon you [2]to destroy you,
14 when I smite the land of E'gypt. And this day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD: throughout your generations ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for 15 ever. Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that soul
16 shall be cut off from Is'ra-el. And in the first day there shall be to you an holy convocation, and in the seventh day an holy convocation; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every 17 man must eat, that only may be done of you. And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this selfsame day have I brought your hosts out of the land of E'gypt: therefore shall ye observe this day throughout your generations by an ordi-
18 nance for ever. In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month
19 at even. Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Is'ra-el, whether he be a sojourner, or 20 one that is born in the land. Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.
21 Then Mo'ses called for all the elders of Is'ra-el, and said unto them, [3]Draw out, and take you [4]lambs ac-
22 cording to your families, and kill the passover. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out of the door of his house
23 until the morning. For the LORD will pass through to smite the E-gyp'tians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, [d]according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 [e]And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, [f]It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Is'ra-el in E'gypt, when he smote the E-gyp'tians, and delivered our houses. And the people [g]bowed the head and worshipped.

28 And the children of Is'ra-el went away, and [h]did as the LORD had commanded Mo'ses and Aa'ron, so did they.

29 ¶[i]And it came to pass, that at midnight [k]the LORD smote all the firstborn in the land of E'gypt, [l]from the firstborn of Pha'raoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the †dungeon; and all the firstborn of cattle.

30 And Pha'raoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the E-gyp'tians; and there was a [m]great cry in E'gypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

31 ¶And [n]he called for Mo'ses and Aa'ron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, [o]both ye and the children of Is'ra-el; and go, serve the LORD, as ye have said.

32 [p]Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone; and [q]bless me also.

33 [r]And the E-gyp'tians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, [s]We be all dead men.

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ||kneadingtroughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Is'ra-el did according to the word of Mo'ses; and they borrowed of the E-gyp'tians [t]jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment:

36 [u]And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the E-gyp'tians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required: and [z]they spoiled the E-gyp'tians.

37 ¶And [y]the children of Is'ra-el journeyed from [z]Ra-me'ses to Suc'coth, about [a]six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children.

38 And †a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of E'gypt, for it was not leavened; because [b]they were thrust out of E'gypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victuals.

40 ¶Now the sojourning of the children of Is'ra-el who dwelt in E'gypt was [c]four hundred and thirty years.

41 And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all [d]the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of E'gypt.

42 It is †[e]a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of E'gypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Is'ra-el in their generations.

43 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses and Aa'ron, This is [f]the ordinance of the passover: There shall no stranger eat thereof:

44 But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast [g]circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

45 [h]A foreigner and a hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth aught of the flesh abroad out of the house; [i]neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

CHAPTER XIV.

Pharaoh pursueth the Israelites—The Egyptians drowned in the Red sea.

AND the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Is'ra-el, [a]that they turn and encamp before [b]Pi'ha-hi'roth, between [c]Mig'dol and the sea, over against Ba'al-ze'phon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

3 For Pha'raoh will say of the children of Is'rael, [d]They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And [e]I will harden Pha'raoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; and I [f]will be honoured upon Pha'raoh, and upon all his host; [g]that the E-gyp'tians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶And it was told the king of E'gypt that the people fled: and [h]the heart of Pha'raoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Is'ra-el go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him:

7 And he took [i]six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of E'gypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And the LORD [k]hardened the heart of Pha'raoh king of E'gypt, and he pursued after the children of Is'ra-el: and [l]the children of Is'ra-el went out with a high hand.

9 But the [m]E-gyp'tians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pha'raoh, and his horsemen, and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi'ha-hi'roth, before Ba'al-ze'phon.

10 ¶And when Pha'raoh drew nigh, the children of Is'ra-el lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the E-gyp'tians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: and the children of Is'ra-el [n]cried out unto the LORD.

11 [o]And they said unto Mo'ses, Because there were no graves in E'gypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of E'gypt?

12 [p]Is not this the word that we did tell thee in E'gypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the E-gyp'tians? For it had been better for us to serve the E-gyp'tians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶And Mo'ses said unto the people, [q]Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to-day: || for the E-gyp'tians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 [r]The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall [s]hold your peace.

15 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Is'ra-el that they go forward:

16 But [t]lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Is'ra-el shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

said, Lest peradventure the people repent when 18 they see war, and they return to E'gypt: but God led the people about, by the way of the wilderness by the Red Sea: and the children of Is'ra-el went up
19 armed out of the land of E'gypt. And Mo'ses took the bones of Jo'seph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Is'ra-el, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away
20 hence with you. And they took their journey from Suc'coth, and encamped in E'tham, in the edge of the 21 wilderness. And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; that 22 they might go by day and by night: [1]the pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, departed not from before the people.

[1]Or, he took not away the pillar of cloud by day nor the &c.

14 ½And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying, Speak unto the children of Is-rael, that they turn back and encamp before Pi'ha-hi'roth, between Mig'dol and the sea, before Ba'al-ze'phon: over against it shall ye
3 encamp by the sea. And Pha'raoh will say of the children of Is'ra-el, They are entangled in the land,
4 the wilderness hath shut them in. And I will [2]harden Pha'raoh's heart, and he shall follow after them; and I will get me honour upon Pha'raoh, and upon all his host; and the E-gyp'tians shall know
5 that I am the LORD. And they did so. And it was told the king of E'gypt that the people were fled: and the heart of Pha'raoh and of his servants was changed towards the people, and they said, What is this we have done, that we have let Is'ra-el
6 go from serving us? And he made ready his
7 [3]chariot, and took his people with him: and he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of
8 E'gypt, and captains over all of them. And the LORD [4]hardened the heart of Pha'raoh king of E'gypt, and he pursued after the children of Is'ra-el: for the 9 children of Is'ra-el went out with an high hand. And the E-gyp'tians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pha'raoh, and his horsemen, and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea,
10 beside Pi'ha-hi'roth, before Ba'al-ze'phon. And when Pha'raoh drew nigh, the children of Is'ra-el lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the E-gyp'tians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: and the children
11 of Is'ra-el cried out unto the LORD. And they said unto Mo'ses, Because there were no graves in E'gypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to bring us
12 forth out of E'gypt? Is not this the word that we spake unto thee in E'gypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the E-gyp'tians? For it were better for us to serve the E-gyp'tians, than that we should 13 die in the wilderness. And Mo'ses said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will work for you to-day: [5]for the E-gyp'tians whom ye have seen to-day, ye 14 shall see them again no more for ever. The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.
15 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children
16 of Is'ra-el, that they go forward. And lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Is'ra-el shall go into the midst of the sea on dry ground.

17 And I, behold, I will [a]harden the hearts of the E-gyp'tians, and they shall follow them: and I will [z]get me honour upon Pha'raoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the E-gyp'tians [y]shall know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pha'raoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶And the Angel of God [x]which went before the camp of Is'ra-el, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

20 And it came between the camp of the E-gyp'tians and the camp of Is'ra-el; and [c]it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 And Mo'ses [b]stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and [c]made the sea dry land, and the waters were [d]divided.

22 And [e]the children of Is'ra-el went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were [f]a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

23 ¶And the E-gyp'tians pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pha'raoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 And it came to pass, that in the morning watch [g]the LORD looked unto the host of the E-gyp'tians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the E-gyp'tians.

25 And took off their chariot wheels, ||that they drave them heavily: so that the E-gyp'tians said, Let us flee from the face of Is'ra-el; for the LORD [h]fighteth for them against the E-gyp'tians.

26 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [i]Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may come again upon the E-gyp'tians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen.

27 And Mo'ses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea [k]returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the E-gyp'tians fled against it; and the LORD [l]†overthrew the E-gyp'tians in the midst of the sea.

28 And [m]the waters returned, and [n]covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pha'raoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them.

29 [o]But the children of Is'ra-el walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus the LORD [p]saved Is'ra-el that day out of the hand of the E-gyp'tians; and Is'ra-el [q]saw the E-gyp'tians dead upon the sea shore.

31 And Is'ra-el saw that great †work which the LORD did upon the E-gyp'tians: and the people feared the LORD, and [r]believed the LORD, and his servant Mo'ses.

6 [n]Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in the greatness of thine [o]excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, which [p]consumed them [q]as stubble.

8 And [r]with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, [s]the floods stood upright as a heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

9 [t]The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will [u]divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them; I will draw my sword, my hand shall ‖ destroy them.

10 Thou didst [x]blow with thy wind, [y]the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 [z]Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the ‖ gods? who is like thee, [a]glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, [b]doing wonders?

12 Thou stretchedst out [c]thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast [d]led forth the people which thou hast redeemed: thou hast guided them in thy strength unto [e]thy holy habitation.

14 [f]The people shall hear, and be afraid: [g]sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Pal-es-ti'na.

15 [h]Then [i]the dukes of E'dom shall be amazed; [k]the mighty men of Mo'ab, trembling shall take hold upon them; [l]all the inhabitants of Ca'naan shall melt away.

16 [m]Fear and dread shall fall upon them; by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still [n]as a stone; till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over [o]which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and [p]plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in; in the [q]sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

21 And Mir'i-am [a]answered them, [b]Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 So Mo'ses brought Is'ra-el from the Red sea, and they went out into the wilderness of [c]Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to [d]Ma'rah, they could not drink of the waters of Ma'rah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called ‖ Ma'rah.

24 And the people [e]murmured against Mo'ses, saying, What shall we drink?

27 ¶[o]And they came to E'lim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

CHAPTER XVI.

God promiseth bread from heaven—Quails are sent, and manna.

AND they [a]took their journey from E'lim, and all the congregation of the children of Is'ra-el came unto the wilderness of [b]Sin, which is between E'lim and Si'nai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of E'gypt.

2 And the whole congregation of the children of Is'ra-el [c]murmured against Mo'ses and Aa'ron in the wilderness:

3 And the children of Is'ra-el said unto them, [d]Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of E'gypt, [e]when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

4 ¶Then said the LORD unto Mo'ses, Behold, I will rain [f]bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather †a certain rate every day, that I may [g]prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and [h]it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.

6 And Mo'ses and Aa'ron said unto all the children of Is'ra-el, [i]At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of E'gypt:

7 And in the morning, then ye shall see [k]the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and [l]what are we, that ye murmur against us?

8 And Mo'ses said, This shall be when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but [m]against the LORD.

his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon thee, which I have put upon the E-gyp'tians: for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

27 And they came to E'lim, where were twelve springs of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters. And they took their journey from E'lim, and all the congregation of the children of Is'ra-el came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between E'lim and Si'nai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of E'gypt. And the whole congregation of the children of Is'ra-el murmured against Mo'ses and against Aa'ron in the wilderness: and the children of Is'ra-el said unto them, Would that we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of E'gypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

4 Then said the LORD unto Mo'ses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a day's portion every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

5 And it shall come to pass on the sixth day, that they shall prepare that which they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily. And Mo'ses and Aa'ron said unto all the children of Is'ra-el, At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of E'gypt: and in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and what are we, that ye murmur against us? And Mo'ses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but against the LORD. And Mo'ses said unto Aa'ron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Is'ra-el, Come near before the LORD: for he hath heard your murmurings. And it came to pass, as Aa'ron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Is'ra-el, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud. And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

12 I have heard the murmurings of the children of Is'ra-el: speak unto them, saying, [1]At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God. And it came to pass at even, that the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay round about the camp. And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness a small [2]round thing, small as the hoar frost on the ground. And when the children of Is'ra-el saw it, they said one to another, [3]What is it? for they wist not what it was. And Mo'ses said unto them, It is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat. This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather ye of it every man according to his eating; an omer a head, according to the number of your persons, shall ye take it, every man for them which are in his tent. And the children of Is'ra-el did so, and gathered some more, some less. And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Mo'ses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Mo'ses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Mo'ses was wroth with them.

21 And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

22 ¶And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Mo'ses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To-morrow is [a]the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over, lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Mo'ses bade: and it did not [b]stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Mo'ses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 [c]Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none.

27 ¶And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, How long [d]refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?

29 See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days: abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

30 So the people rested on the seventh day.

31 And the house of Is'ra-el called the name thereof Manna: and [e]it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

32 ¶And Mo'ses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of E'gypt.

33 And Mo'ses said unto Aa'ron, [f]Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

34 As the LORD commanded Mo'ses, so Aa'ron laid it up [g]before the Testimony, to be kept.

35 And the children of Is'ra-el did eat manna [h]forty years, [i]until they came to a land inhabited: they did eat manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Ca'naan.

36 Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

The people murmur for water at Rephidim—Amalek is overcome.

AND [a]all the congregation of the children of Is'ra-el journeyed from the wilderness of Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in Reph'i-dim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people [d]murmured against Mo'ses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of E'gypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?

4 And Mo'ses [e]cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to [f]stone me.

23 unto them, This is that which the LORD hath spoken, To-morrow is a solemn rest, a holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake, and seethe that which ye will seethe; and all that remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.
24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Mo'ses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm

35 timony, to be kept. And the children of Is'ra-el did eat the manna forty years, until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat the manna, until they came 13 ¶And it came to pass on the morrow, that Mo'ses sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Mo'ses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Mo'ses' father in law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? Why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Mo'ses said unto his father in law, Because [p]the people come unto me to inquire of God:

16 When they have [q]a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between †one and another, and I do [r]make them know the statutes of God, and his laws.

17 And Mo'ses father in law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

18 †Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; [s]thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and [t]God shall be with thee: Be thou [u]for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest [x]bring the causes unto God:

20 And thou shalt [y]teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them [z]the way wherein they must walk, and [a]the work that they must do.

21 Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people [b]able men, such as [c]fear God, [d]men of truth, [e]hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

22 And let them judge the people [f]at all seasons: [g]and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and [h]they shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be [i]able to endure, and all this people shall also go to [k]their place in peace.

24 So Mo'ses hearkened to the voice of his father in law, and did all that he had said.

25 And [l]Mo'ses chose able men out of all Is'ra-el, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

26 And they [m]judged the people at all seasons: the [n]hard causes they brought unto Mo'ses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶And Mo'ses let his father in law depart; and [o]he went his way into his own land.

The people come to Sinai—God's message unto the people out of the mount.

IN the third month, when the children of Is'ra-el were gone forth out of the land of E'gypt, the same day [a]came they into the wilderness of Si'nai.

2 For they were departed from [b]Reph'i-dim, and were come to the desert of Si'nai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Is'ra-el camped before [c]the mount.

3 And [d]Mo'ses went up unto God, and the LORD [e]called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Ja'cob, and tell the children of Is'ra-el;

4 [f]Ye have seen what I did unto the E-gyp'tians, and how [g]I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.

5 Now [h]therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then [i]ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for [k]all the earth is mine:

6 And ye shall be unto me a [l]kingdom of priests, and a [m]holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Is'ra-el.

people, and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

8 And [r]all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. And Mo'ses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

9 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Lo, I come unto thee [o]in a thick cloud, [p]that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and [q]believe thee for ever. And Mo'ses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

10 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Go unto the people, and [r]sanctify them to-day and to-morrow, and let them [s]wash their clothes, 11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD [t]will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Si'nai.

12 And thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: [u]whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death:

13 There shall not a hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live: when the ‖ [x]trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

14 ¶And Mo'ses went down from the mount unto the people, and [y]sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes.

15 And he said unto the people, [z]Be ready against the third day: [a]come not at your wives.

16 ¶And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were [b]thunders and lightnings, and a [c]thick cloud upon the mount, and the [d]voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp [e]trembled.

17 And [f]Mo'ses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

18 And [g]mount Si'nai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it [h]in fire: [i]and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and [k]the whole mount quaked greatly.

19 And [l]when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, [m]Mo'ses spake, and [n]God answered him by a voice.

20 And the LORD came down upon mount Si'nai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Mo'ses up to the top of the mount; and Mo'ses went up.

21 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Go down, †charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD [o]to gaze, and many of them perish.

22 And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, [p]sanctify themselves, lest the LORD [q]break forth upon them.

23 And Mo'ses said unto the LORD, The people can not come up to mount Si'nai: for thou chargedst us, saying, [r]Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

24 And the LORD said unto him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aa'ron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them.

25 So Mo'ses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

21 And the people stood afar off, and Mo'ses drew near unto [h]the thick darkness where God was.

6 and shewing mercy unto [1]thousands, of them that love me and keep my commandments.

7 Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God [2]in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name [2]in vain.

8 Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

9 Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

10 but the seventh day is a sabbath unto the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is 11 within thy gates: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

12 Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13 Thou shalt do no murder.

14 Thou shalt not commit adultery.

15 Thou shalt not steal.

16 Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

17 Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

18 And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the voice of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it,

19 they [3]trembled, and stood afar off. And they said unto Mo'ses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

20 And Mo'ses said unto the people, Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before 21 you, that ye sin not. And the people stood afar off, and Mo'ses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.

22 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Is'ra-el, Ye yourselves have

23 seen that I have talked with you from heaven. Ye shall not make other gods with me; gods of silver,

24 or gods of gold, ye shall not make unto you. An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in every place where I [4]record my name I will come unto thee and I

25 will bless thee. And if thou make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stones: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

21 Now these are the judgements which thou shalt set before them.

2 If thou buy an He'brew [5]servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for

3 nothing. If he come in by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he be married, then his wife shall go

4 out with him. If his master give him a wife, and she bear him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out

5 by himself. But if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will

6 not go out free: then his master shall bring him unto [6]God, and shall bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him for ever.

B. C. 1491.

7 ¶And if a man [f]sell his daughter to be a maidservant, she shall not go out [g]as the menservants do.

8 If she †please not her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

10 If he take him another wife, her food, her raiment, [h]and her duty of marriage shall he not diminish.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out free without money.

12 ¶[i]He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And [k]if a man lie not in wait, but God [l]deliver him into his hand; then [m]I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come [n]presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; [o]thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

15 ¶And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16 ¶And [p]he that stealeth a man, and [q]selleth him, or if he be [r]found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

17 ¶And [s]he that || curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶And if men strive together, and one smite || another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed:

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad [t]upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for †the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

20 ¶And if a man smite his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely †punished.

21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for [u]he is his money.

22 ¶If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall [z]pay as the judges determine.

23 And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life,

24 [v]Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

25 Burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 ¶And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

27 And if he smite out his manservant's tooth, or his maidservant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

28 ¶If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then [x]the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for [a]the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a manservant or a maidservant; he shall give unto their master [b]thirty shekels of silver, and the [c]ox shall be stoned.

33 ¶And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

7 And if a man sell his daughter to be a [1]maidservant, she shall not go out as the menservants do.

8 If she please not her master, [2]who hath espoused her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange people he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he espouse her unto his son, he shall deal
10 with her after the manner of daughters. If he take him another wife; her [3]food, her raiment, and her 11 duty of marriage, shall he not diminish. And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out for nothing, without money.

12 He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall surely 13 be put to death. And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand; then I will appoint 21 be punished. Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money.

22 And if men strive together, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely fined, according as the woman's husband shall lay upon him; and he 23 shall pay as the judges determine. But if any mis-
24 chief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,
25 burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, and destroy it; he shall let him go 27 free for his eye's sake. And if he smite out his manservant's tooth, or his maidservant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

28 And if an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die, the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

25 If thou lend money to any of my people with thee that is poor, thou shalt not be to him as a 26 creditor; neither shall ye lay upon him usury. If thou at all take thy neighbour's garment to pledge, thou shalt restore it unto him by that the sun goeth
27 down: for that is his only covering, it is his garment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am gracious.
28 Thou shalt not revile [1]God, nor curse a ruler of 29 thy people. Thou shalt not delay to offer of [2]the abundance of thy fruits, and of thy liquors. The 30 firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me. Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with its dam; on the 31 eighth day thou shalt give it me. And ye shall be holy men unto me: therefore ye shall not eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

23 Thou shalt not take up a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous
2 witness. Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; neither shalt thou [3]speak in a cause to turn 3 aside after a multitude to wrest judgement: neither shalt thou favour a poor man in his cause.
4 If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.
5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, [4]and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.
6 Thou shalt not wrest the judgement of thy poor
7 in his cause. Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not: for I
8 will not justify the wicked. And thou shalt take no gift: for a gift blindeth them that have sight, and 9 perverteth the [5]words of the righteous. And a stranger shalt thou not oppress: for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of E'gypt.
10 And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt
11 gather in the increase thereof: but the seventh year thou shalt [6]let it rest and lie fallow; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beast of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard.
12 Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt [7]rest: that thine ox and thine ass may have rest, and the son of thy handmaid,
13 and the stranger, may be refreshed. And in all things that I have said unto you take ye heed: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.
14 Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in 15 the year. The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep: seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time appointed in the month A'bib (for in it thou camest out from E'gypt);

20 ¶[c]Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

21 Beware of him, and obey his voice, [d]provoke him not; for he will [e]not pardon your transgressions: for [f]my name is in him.

22 But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then [g]I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and ||an adversary unto thine adversaries.

23 [h]For mine Angel shall go before thee, and [i]bring thee in unto the Am'o-rites, and the Hit'tites, and the Per'iz-zites, and the Ca'naan-ites, and the Hi'vites, and the Jeb'u-sites; and I will cut them off.

24 Thou shalt not [k]bow down to their gods, nor serve them, [l]nor do after their works: [m]but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And ye shall [n]serve the LORD your God, and [o]he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and [p]I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 ¶[q]There shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land: the number of thy days I will [r]fulfil.

27 I will send [s]my fear before thee, and will [t]destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come; and I will make all thine enemies turn their †backs unto thee.

28 And [u]I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hi'vite, the Ca'naan-ite, and the Hit'tite, from before thee.

29 [w]I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And [x]I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Phi-lis'tines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will [y]deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

32 [z]Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

33 They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, [a]it will surely be a snare unto thee.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Moses buildeth an altar, and twelve pillars—The glory of God appeareth.

AND he said unto Mo'ses, Come up unto the LORD, thou, and Aa'ron, [a]Na'dab, and A-bi'hu, [b]and seventy of the elders of Is'ra-el; and worship ye afar off.

2 And Mo'ses [c]alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

3 ¶And Mo'ses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, [d]All the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

4 And Mo'ses [e]wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve [f]pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Is'ra-el.

5 And he sent young men of the children of Is'ra-el, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

6 And Mo'ses [g]took half of the blood, and put it in basins; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.

7 And he [h]took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, [i]All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Mo'ses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold [k]the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

9 ¶Then [l]went up Mo'ses, and Aa'ron, Na'dab, and A-bi'hu, and seventy of the elders of Is'ra-el;

10 And they [m]saw the God of Is'ra-el: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a [n]sapphire stone, and as it were the [o]body of heaven in his clearness.

11 And upon the nobles of the children of Is'ra-el he [p]laid not his hand: also [q]they saw God, and did [r]eat and drink.

12 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [s]Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee [t]tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Mo'ses rose up, and [u]his minister Josh'u-a: and Mo'ses [w]went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aa'ron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 And Mo'ses went up into the mount, and [z]a cloud covered the mount.

16 And [y]the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Si'nai, and the cloud covered it six days; and the seventh day he called unto Mo'ses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like [s]devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Is'ra-el.

18 And Mo'ses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and [a]Mo'ses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

AND the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Is'ra-el, that they †bring me an ‖offering: [c]of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass,

13 them. And Mo'ses rose up, and Josh'u-a his minister:

29 them. And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and the spoons thereof, and the flagons thereof, and the bowls thereof, to pour out withal: of pure gold
30 shalt thou make them. And thou shalt set upon the table [5]shewbread before me alway.

14 And two chains of pure gold at the ends; of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

15 ¶And [n]thou shalt make the breastplate of judgment with cunning work; after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen shalt thou make it.

16 Foursquare it shall be, being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

17 [o]And thou shalt †set in it settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be a ‖sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

19 And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their †inclosings.

21 And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Is'ra-el, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be according to the twelve tribes.

22 ¶And thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder pieces of the ephod before it.

26 ¶And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aa'ron shall bear the names of the children of Is'ra-el in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, [p]for a memorial before the LORD continually.

30 ¶And [q]thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the U'rim and the Thum'mim; and they shall be upon Aa'ron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aa'ron shall bear the judgment of the children of Is'ra-el upon his heart before the LORD continually.

31 ¶And [r]thou shalt make the robe of the ephod all of blue.

32 And there shall be a hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of an habergeon, that it be not rent.

33 ¶And beneath upon the ‖hem of it thou shalt make pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and bells of gold between them round about:

34 A golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about.

35 And it shall be upon Aa'ron to minister: and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Consecrating the Priests—The continual burnt offering—God's promise.

AND this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in the priest's office: [a]Take one young bullock, and two rams without blemish,

2 And [b]unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of wheaten flour shalt thou make them.

3 And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

4 And Aa'ron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, [c]and shalt wash them with water.

5 [d]And thou shalt take the garments, and put upon Aa'ron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with [e]the curious girdle of the ephod:

6 [f]And thou shalt put the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.

7 Then shalt thou take the anointing [g]oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.

8 And [h]thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them.

9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aa'ron and his sons, and †put the bonnets on them: and [i]the priest's office shall be theirs for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt †[k]consecrate Aa'ron and his sons.

10 And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation; and [l]Aa'ron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.

11 And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

12 And thou [m]shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon [n]the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

13 And [o]thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and ‖the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.

14 But [p]the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering.

B. C. 1491.

36 And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLY 37 TO THE LORD. And thou shalt put it on a lace of blue, and it shall be upon the [1]mitre; upon the fore-
38 front of the [1]mitre it shall be. And it shall be upon Aa'ron's forehead, and Aa'ron shall bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Is'ra-el shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before 39 the LORD. And thou shalt weave the coat in chequer work of [2]fine linen, and thou shalt make a [1]mitre of [2]fine linen, and thou shalt make a girdle,
40 the work of the embroiderer. And for Aa'ron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and headtires shalt thou make for

2 A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; foursquare shall it be; and two cubits shall be the height thereof; the horns thereof shall be of the same.

3 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the †top thereof, and the †sides thereof round about, and the horns thereof; and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

4 And two golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two †corners thereof, upon the two sides of it shalt thou make it; and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it before the veil that is by the ark of the testimony, before the [c]mercy seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.

7 And Aa'ron shall burn thereon †[d]sweet incense every morning: when [e]he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it.

8 And when Aa'ron ‖ †lighteth the lamps †at even, he shall burn incense upon it, a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations.

9 Ye shall offer no [f]strange incense thereon, nor burnt sacrifice, nor meat offering; neither shall ye pour drink offering thereon.

10 And [g]Aa'ron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonements; once in a year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aa'ron, and to his sons, according to all that I have commanded thee: seven 36 days shalt thou consecrate them. And every day shalt thou offer the bullock of sin offering for atonement: and thou shalt [1]cleanse the altar, when thou makest atonement for it; and thou shalt anoint it, to 37 sanctify it. Seven days thou shalt make atonement for the altar, and sanctify it: and the altar shall be most holy; [2]whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.
38 Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; two lambs of the first year day by day con-
39 tinually. The one lamb thou shalt offer in the morning; and the other lamb thou shalt offer [3]at even:
40 and with the one lamb a tenth part of an ephah of fine flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil; and the fourth part of an hin of wine for 41 a drink offering. And the other lamb thou shalt offer [3]at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meal offering of the morning, and according to the drink offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offer-
42 ing made by fire unto the LORD. It shall be a continual burnt offering throughout your generations at the door of the tent of meeting before the LORD: where I will meet with you, to speak there unto 43 thee. And there I will meet with the children of Is'ra-el; and the Tent shall be sanctified by my glory.
44 And I will sanctify the tent of meeting, and the altar: Aa'ron also and his sons will I sanctify, to 45 minister to me in the priest's office. And I will dwell among the children of Is'ra-el, and will be 46 their God. And they shall know that I am the LORD their God, that brought them forth out of the land of E'gypt, that I may dwell among them: I am the LORD their God.

30 And thou shalt make an altar to burn incense
2 upon: of acacia wood shalt thou make it. A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; foursquare shall it be: and two cubits shall be the height thereof: the horns thereof shall be
3 of one piece with it. And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the [4]top thereof, and the [5]sides thereof round about, and the horns thereof; and thou shalt
4 make unto it a [6]crown of gold round about. And two golden rings shalt thou make for it under the crown thereof, upon the two ribs thereof, upon the two sides of it shalt thou make them; and they shall be for
5 places for staves to bear it withal. And thou shalt make the staves of acacia wood, and overlay them
6 with gold. And thou shalt put it before the veil that is by the ark of the testimony, before the mercy-seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.
7 And Aa'ron shall burn thereon incense of sweet spices: every morning, when he dresseth the lamps,
8 he shall burn it. And when Aa'ron [7]lighteth the lamps [3]at even, he shall burn it, a perpetual incense
9 before the LORD throughout your generations. Ye shall offer no strange incense thereon, nor burnt offering, nor meal offering; and ye shall pour no
10 drink offering thereon. And Aa'ron shall make atonement [8]upon the horns of it once in the year: with the blood of the sin offering of atonement once in the year shall he make atonement [9]for it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

CHAPTER XXXI.

Observation of the sabbath again commanded—Moses receiveth the two tables.

AND the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

2 [a]See, I have called by name Be-zal'e-el the [b]son of U'ri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Ju'dah:

3 And I have [c]filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

4 To devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

5 And in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

6 And I, behold, I have given with him [d]A-ho'li-ab the son of A-his'a-mach, of the tribe of Dan: and in the hearts of all that are [e]wise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee;

7 [f]The tabernacle of the congregation, and [g]the ark of the testimony, and [h]the mercy seat that is thereupon, and all the †furniture of the tabernacle,

8 And [i]the table and his furniture, and [k]the pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense,

9 And [l]the altar of burnt offering with all his furniture, and [m]the laver and his foot,

10 And [n]the clothes of service, and the holy garments for Aa'ron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office,

11 [o]And the anointing oil, and [p]sweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

12 ¶And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Is'ra-el, saying, [q]Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you.

14 [r]Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for [s]whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

15 [t]Six days may work be done; but in the [u]seventh is the sabbath of rest, †holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.

16 Wherefore the children of Is'ra-el shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant.

17 It is [z]a sign between me and the children of Is'ra-el for ever: for [v]in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

18 ¶And he gave unto Mo'ses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Si'nai, [z]two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The people make a calf—Moses breaketh the tables—He destroyeth the calf.

AND when the people saw that Mo'ses [a]delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aa'ron, and said unto him, [b]Up, make us gods which shall [c]go before us; for as for this Mo'ses, the man that brought us up out of the land of E'gypt, we wot not what is become of him.

38 thee holy for the LORD. Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, he shall be cut off from his people.

31 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

12 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, saying,

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Is'ra-el, saying, Verily ye shall keep my sabbaths: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD which sanc-

15 among his people. Six days shall work be done; but on the seventh day is a sabbath of solemn rest, holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.

16 Wherefore the children of Is'ra-el shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their

17 generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Is'ra-el for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

earrings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

3 And all the people brake off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aa'ron.

4 [e]And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graven tool, after he had made it a molten calf: and they said, These be thy gods, O Is'ra-el, which brought thee up out of the land of E'gypt.

5 And when Aa'ron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aa'ron made [f]proclamation, and said, To-morrow is a feast to the LORD.

6 And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the [g]people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [h]Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of E'gypt, [i]have corrupted themselves:

8 They have turned aside quickly out of the way which [k]I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, [l]These be thy gods, O Is'ra-el, which have brought thee up out of the land of E'gypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [m]I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people:

10 Now therefore [n]let me alone, that [o]my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and [p]I will make of thee a great nation.

11 [q]And Mo'ses besought †the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of E'gypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 [r]Wherefore should the E-gyp'tians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and [s]repent of this evil against thy people.

13 Remember A'bra-ham, I'saac, and Is'ra-el, thy servants, to whom thou [t]swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, [u]I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD [w]repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶And [x]Mo'ses turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And the [y]tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when Josh'u-a heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Mo'ses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for †being overcome; but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

19 ¶And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that [z]he saw the calf, and the dancing: and Mo'ses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.

20 [a]And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Is'ra-el drink of it.

21 And Mo'ses said unto Aa'ron, [b]What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aa'ron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: [c]thou knowest the people, that they are set on mischief.

23 For they said unto me, [d]Make us gods, which shall go rings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them un-

3 to me. And all the people brake off the golden rings which were in their ears, and brought them
4 unto Aa'ron. And he received it at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, and made it a molten calf: and they said, [1]These be thy gods, O Is'ra-el, which brought thee up out of the land of 5 E'gypt. And when Aa'ron saw this, he built an altar before it; and Aa'ron made proclamation, and 6 said, To-morrow shall be a feast to the LORD. And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.
7 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest up out of the land of E'gypt, have corrupted them-
8 selves: they have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed unto it, and said, These be thy gods, O Is'ra-el, which brought thee up out of the land of 9 E'gypt. And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked
10 people: now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume
11 them: and I will make of thee a great nation. And Mo'ses besought the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of E'gypt with great power and with a mighty hand?
12 Wherefore should the E-gyp'tians speak, saying, For evil did he bring them forth, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and re-
13 pent of this evil against thy people. Remember A'bra-ham, I'saac, and Is'rael, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for 14 ever. And the LORD repented of the evil which he said he would do unto his people.
15 And Mo'ses turned, and went down from the mount, with the two tables of the testimony in his hand; tables that were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.
16 And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the 17 tables. And when Josh'u-a heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Mo'ses, There 18 is a noise of war in the camp. And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome:

before us: for as for this Mo'ses, the man that brought us up out of the land of E'gypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there [e]came out this calf.

25 ¶And when Mo'ses saw that the people were [f]naked, (for Aa'ron [g]had made them naked unto their shame among †their enemies,)

26 Then Mo'ses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD'S side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Le'vi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Is'ra-el, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and [h]slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

28 And the children of Le'vi did according to the word of Mo'ses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

29 [i]‖For Mo'ses had said, †Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 ¶And it came to pass on the morrow, that Mo'ses said unto the people, [k]Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; [l]peradventure I shall [m]make an atonement for your sin.

31 And Mo'ses [n]returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have [o]made them gods of gold.

32 Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin— ; and if not, [p]blot me, I pray thee, [q]out of thy book which thou hast written.

33 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [r]Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: [s]behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, [t]in the day when I visit, I will visit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because [u]they made the calf, which Aa'ron made.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Lord refuseth to go with the people—The Lord talketh with Moses.

AND the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Depart, and go up hence, thou [a]and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of E'gypt, unto the land which I sware unto A'bra-ham, to I'saac, and to Ja'cob, saying, [b]Unto thy seed will I give it:

2 [c]And I will send an Angel before thee; [d]and I will drive out the Ca'naan-ite, the Am'or-ite, and the Hit'tite, and the Per'iz-zite, the Hi'vite, and the Jeb'u-site:

3 [e]Unto a land flowing with milk and honey: [f]for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a [g]stiffnecked people: lest [h]I consume thee in the way.

4 ¶And when the people heard these evil tidings, [i]they mourned: [k]and no man did put on him his ornaments.

5 For the LORD had said unto Mo'ses, Say unto the children of Is'ra-el, [l]Ye are a stiffnecked people: I will come up [m]into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may [n]know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Is'ra-el stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Ho'reb.

7 And Mo'ses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, [o]and called it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which [p]sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

8 And it came to pass, when Mo'ses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and stood every

25 this calf. And when Mo'ses saw that the people were broken loose; for Aa'ron had let them loose
26 for a [1]derision among their enemies: then Mo'ses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Whoso is on the LORD'S side, let him come unto me. And all the sons of Le'vi gathered themselves together unto 27 him. And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Is'ra-el, Put ye every man his sword upon his thigh, and go to and fro from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every 28 man his neighbour. And the sons of Le'vi did according to the word of Mo'ses: and there fell of the 29 people that day about three thousand men. And Mo'ses said, [2]Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, [3]yea, every man [4]against his son, and [4]against his brother; that he may bestow upon you a bless-
30 ing this day. And it came to pass on the morrow, that Mo'ses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make atonement for your sin.

32 them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin— ; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of 34 me, him will I blot out of my book. And now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine angel shall go before thee: nevertheless in the day when I visit, I 35 will visit their sin upon them. And the LORD smote the people, because they made the calf, which Aa'ron made.

33 And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses, Depart, go up hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of E'gypt, unto the land of which I sware unto A'bra-ham, to I'saac, and to Ja'cob, say-

6 may know what to do unto thee. And the children of Is'ra-el stripped themselves of their ornaments from mount Ho'reb onward.
7 Now Mo'ses used to take the tent and to pitch it without the camp, afar off from the camp; and he called it, The tent of meeting. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tent of meeting, which was without the camp.
8 And it came to pass, when Mo'ses went out unto the Tent, that all the people rose up, and stood, every 9 And it came to pass, as Mo'ses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD [r]talked with Mo'ses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle door: and all the people rose up and [s]worshipped, every man in his tent door.

11 And [t]the LORD spake unto Mo'ses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp; but [u]his servant Josh'u-a, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶And Mo'ses said unto the LORD, See, [x]thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, [y]I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, [z]if I have found grace in thy sight, [a]shew me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is [b]thy people.

14 And he said, [c]My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee [d]rest.

15 And he said unto him, [e]If thy presence go not with me, carry us up not hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? [f]Is it not in that thou goest with us? So [g]shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [h]I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for [i]thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 And he said, I beseech thee, shew me [k]thy glory.

19 And he said, [l]I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; [m]and will be [n]gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

20 And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for [o]there shall no man see me, and live.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee [p]in a cleft of the rock, and will [q]cover thee with my hand while I pass by:

23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts; but my face shall [r]not be seen.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The tables are renewed—The name of the LORD proclaimed.

AND the LORD said unto Mo'ses, [a]Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: [b]and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.

2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Si'nai, and present thyself there to me [c]in the top of the mount.

3 And no man shall [d]come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

4 ¶And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Mo'ses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Si'nai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and [e]proclaimed the name of the LORD.

6 And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD [f]God, merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in [g]goodness and [h]truth,

7 [i]Keeping mercy for thousands, [k]forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and [l]that will by no means clear the

And it came to pass, when Mo'ses entered into the Tent, the pillar of cloud descended, and stood at the door of the 10 Tent: and the LORD spake with Mo'ses. And all the people saw the pillar of cloud stand at the door of the Tent: and all the people rose up and wor- 11 shipped, every man at his tent door. And the LORD spake unto Mo'ses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his minister Josh'u-a, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the Tent.

12 And Mo'ses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know [1]whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast 13 also found grace in my sight. Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now thy ways, that I may know thee, to the end that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider 14 that this nation is thy people. And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee 15 rest. And he said unto him, If thy presence go 16 not with me, carry us not up hence. For wherein now shall it be known that I have found grace in thy sight, I and thy people? is it not in that thou goest with us, so that we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth?

17 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.
18 19 And he said, Shew me, I pray thee, thy glory. And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew 20 mercy. And he said, Thou canst not see my face: 21 for man shall not see me and live. And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt 22 stand upon the rock: and it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my 23 hand until I have passed by: and I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back: but my face shall not be seen.

34 And the LORD said unto Mo'ses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon the tables the words that were on the first 2 tables, which thou brakest. And be ready by the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Si'nai, and present thyself there to me on the top of 3 the mount. And no man shall come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before 4 that mount. And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Mo'ses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Si'nai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand two 5 tables of stone. And the LORD descended in the cloud, [2]and stood with him there, and proclaimed 6 [3]the name of the LORD. And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, the LORD, a God full of compassion and gracious, slow 7 to anger, and plenteous in mercy and truth; [4]keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin: and that will by no means clear the 17 [l]Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.

18 ¶The feast of [m]unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month A'bib: for in the [n]month A'bib thou camest out from E'gypt.

8 third and upon the fourth generation. And Mo'ses made haste, and bowed his head toward the earth,
9 and worshipped. And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, let the Lord, I pray thee, go in the midst of us; for it is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and 10 take us for thine inheritance. And he said, Behold I make a covenant: before all thy people I will do marvels, such as have not been [1]wrought in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD, for 11 it is a terrible thing that I do with thee. Observe thou that which I command thee this day: behold, I drive out before thee the Am'o-rite, and the Ca'naan-ite, and the Hit'tite, and the Per'iz-zite, and the Hi'-

13 midst of thee: but ye shall break down their altars, and dash in pieces their [2]pillars, and ye shall cut
14 down their [3]Ash'er-im: for thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous,
15 is a jealous God: lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods,

19 month A'bib thou camest out from E'gypt. All that openeth the womb is mine; and all thy cattle that 20 is male, the firstlings of ox and sheep. And the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a [4]lamb: and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break its neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me empty.

28 And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

† Heb. twined. 29 And they were †coupled beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners.

† Heb. two sockets two sockets under one board. 30 And there were eight boards; and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, †under every board two sockets.

[l] ch. 26. 26. 31 ¶ And he made [l] bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle,

32 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacle for the sides westward.

33 And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other.

34 And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.

B. C. 1491.

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.

8 [1] And every wise hearted man among them that wrought the work made the tabernacle with ten curtains; of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, with cherubim the work of the cunning
9 workman made he them. The length of each curtain was eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of each curtain four cubits: all the curtains had one
10 measure. And he coupled five curtains one to another: and the other five curtains he coupled one
11 to another. And he made loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain [2] from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the edge of the curtain that was outmost in the second [3] coupling.
12 Fifty loops made he in the one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain that was in the second [3] coupling: the loops were opposite
13 one to another. And he made fifty clasps of gold, and coupled the curtains one to another with the 14 clasps: so the tabernacle was one. And he made curtains of goats' hair for a tent over the tabernacle:
15 eleven curtains he made them. The length of each curtain was thirty cubits, and four cubits the breadth of each curtain: the eleven curtains had one meas-
16 ure. And he coupled five curtains by themselves,
17 and six curtains by themselves. And he made fifty loops on the edge of the curtain that was outmost in the [4] coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which was outmost in the 18 second [3] coupling. And he made fifty clasps of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be 19 one. And he made a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of [5] sealskins above.
20 [6] And he made the boards for the tabernacle of 21 acacia wood, standing up. Ten cubits was the length of a board, and a cubit and a half the breadth
22 of each board. Each board had two tenons, [7] joined one to another: thus did he make for all the boards
23 of the tabernacle. And he made the boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the south side south-
24 ward: and he made forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for its two tenons, and two sockets under another board
25 for its two tenons. And for the second side of the tabernacle, on the north side, he made twenty boards, 26 and their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.
27 And for the hinder part of the tabernacle westward
28 he made six boards. And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the hinder part.
29 And they were double beneath, and in like manner they were entire unto the top thereof unto [8] one ring: thus he did to both of them in the two corners.
30 And there were eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; under every board two 31 sockets. And he made bars of acacia wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle;
32 and five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the 33 tabernacle for the hinder part westward. And he made the middle bar to pass through in the midst 34 of the boards from the one end to the other. And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold for places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.
